ONE PER CENT JUMP IN MONTH

Food Prices, Gasoline Spur Living Cost Hike

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The cost of living, led by higher petroleum and food prices, soared upward by one per cent in March, Statistics Canada reported today.

The new increases in consumer prices pushed the 12-month rate of inflation to 7.4 per cent, the highest increase since the middle of 1976.

The federal agency's consumer price index, the most widely-used measure of inflation, stood at 157.0 in March, up from 155.4 in February. This means that a standard basket of consumer items which was worth $100 in 1971, now would cost $157 and would have cost $155.40 in February. Last March, it would have cost $146.20.

Since last December, food prices, which account for more than one-quarter of the index, have risen by 4.7 per cent.

In contrast, for the 12-month period ending in December, food prices dropped by seven-tenths of one per cent.

Among food items, fresh fruit led the way to higher prices, with an 8.2-per-cent rise in March over the previous month.

Prices for these items were also 26.4 per cent higher than a year ago.

There was also a five-per-cent rise in one month in prices of frozen food and a 2.3-per-cent increase in beverage prices, which includes coffee.

The fuel and utilities component of housing rose by 3.9 per cent in a month, largely due to higher home-heating fuel prices.

There were also price increases for seasonal clothing, plane fares, postage, cigarettes and in some cities for electricity and urban transit fares.

The purchasing value of the 1971 consumer dollar was 64 cents, down from about 68 cents a year ago, the agency reported.

The strong advance in prices is expected to be followed by a period of more moderate price movements, an Anti-Inflation Board spokesman said.

"A quickening in recent months in the rate of price increase was due primarily to two well-known factors: The increases in petroleum prices and the impact on food costs from severe weather in southern U.S. food-growing areas," the spokesman said.

MAJOR JUMP FOR U.S. FOOD BILL

WASHINGTON (UPI) Wholesale prices soared 1.1 per cent in March for the biggest monthly gain in almost a year and a half, the U.S. labor department said today. Higher prices on coffee and other food were chiefly to blame.

Wholesale prices, which many economists believe are the government's best inflation barometer, have nearly doubled in the past decade for the worst inflation rate since the decade beginning in 1941.

B.C. Will Do Best

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — British Columbia's economy is expected to record the strongest growth performance in 1977 of all provinces, 4.5 per cent in real output terms, according to the latest quarterly provincial forecast of the Conference Board of Canada.

This will represent a moderate slowdown from the 6.4 per cent growth estimated for 1576.

Employment growth, it is anticipated, will keep pace with increases in the labor force. As a result B.C. is the only province which will not experience a higher unemployment rate this year.

Wages and salaries and personal income should grow at a rate that is greater than that anticipated for the nation as a whole. It will keep retail sales growth at a buoyant 12.1 per cent for 1977, an increase from the 11.8 per cent posted for 1976.

In the other provinces, the slowdown will be more marked, with exceptional declines in areas where agriculture is a major activity.

The recent budget will do little to improve the bleak outlook, the Conference Board said.

Total output in Canada is forecast by the board to increase by only three per cent in real terms this year, compared with 4½ per cent in 1976.

"While this forecast was completed prior to the presentation of the recent federal budget, an analysis of the measures contained therein suggests no major revisions to the outlook for the current year," it found.

The expected decline in agriculture will hit hardest at Saskatchewan, the board said. Last year Saskatchewan led the nation in "real output growth with the important agricultural sector providing much of the strength."

COLONEL WHELAN . . . ON THE FLY

BRIGHTON, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says he is in favor of members of Parliament using armed forces aircraft and uses one himself because he is an honorary colonel.

"They (armed forces personnel) have to put in a certain amount of flying time anyway, so they might just as well fly our members of Parliament around so you get to see them," Whelan said at a Liberal association meeting Wednesday.

"I use DND planes quite a bit because I'm an honorary colonel."

By using armed forces aircraft Whelan can attend more public meetings and let more persons "see that the minister is at least half-way human."

Crown Corp. Check

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A special legislative committee to provide public accountability for B.C.'s major Crown corporations will be set up under legislation introduced Wednesday.

The move is an attempt to end what Premier Bill Bennett described as "governments and ministers being captives of the Crown corporations."

The Crown Corporation Reporting Act allows for the establishment of a year-round legislative committee of 14 MLAs whose sole purpose will be to inquire into the operations of Crown corporations.

Only five of the major corporations will come under scrutiny initially — B.C. Hydro, B.C. Ferries, Insurance Corp. of B.C., B.C. Railway and the Housing Corp. of B.C. — but others are expected to be added later.

The committee will be made up of backbenchers — no cabinet ministers — and its composition will reflect the proportion of political parties in the legislature.

The committee has the authority to hire research staff which Bennett said will allow it the expertise to ask the right questions.

The premier said the act, together with the provisions for an auditor-general and an ombudsman in B.C., gives the province "a level of public accountability . . . not existing anywhere in Canada."

Bennett, along with his own ministers and opposition MLAs, has often complained of the massive capital investments and the lack of public accountability of such complex corporations as B.C. Hydro.

"This is a cure for more than just Hydro," he said while introducing the bill.

"It's just a bit of window-dressing."

Barrett said the committee has basically the same powers as the existing public accounts committee, also comprised of MLAs, whose purpose is to examine government expenditures during a specific fiscal year. (For example, the public accounts committee sitting now is examining the expenditures of the 1975-76 fiscal year.)

"This is only a minor adjustment to the already existing public accounts committee," he said.

Barrett said that although in theory the public accounts committee is restricted to a specific year, it in fact examines the current operations of Crown corporations.

The new committee, he

Grade 2 Girl Saves Mother

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

If seven-year-old Tracy Shaw had a "show and tell" class at Rockheights school this morning, she had a dandy story to get the attention of her Grade 2 classmates.

Esquimalt police say the cool-headed younster probably saved her mother's life when fire broke out early this morning in their home at 815 Old Esquimalt Road.

They said Brenda Shaw, 30, nodded off while smoking and reading in bed.

Tracy, asleep beside her, awoke to the sound of the family's two dogs barking, and the smell of smoke.

"My eyes were all blurry, I could hardly see," said Tracy.

She shook her mother but was unable to rouse her so went into the kitchen and called her grandfather, William Shaw, a security guard at the legislative buildings.

"He's a policeman. I figured he'd know what to do," she said.

Shaw called Esquimalt police.

Tracy said she went into the living room and sat down looking out the window to wait for police.

Within seconds a cruiser arrived and Constables Bruce Cowick and Norm Smith rushed into the house.

Cowick carried out the mother, who was unconscious, while Smith reached for the smouldering bedding. As he lifted one of the pillows it exploded in flames.

"When I crash nothing wakes me up," said Miss Shaw, who is divorced and has reverted to her maiden name. "One moment I was reading. The next I was in this guy's arms being carried outside. I remember looking up at him and saying 'I know you . . . didn't we go to school together.'"

Neither she nor her daughter suffered burns although the fire had eaten away almost three-quarters of the mattress.

SHIPS COLLIDE, BLAZE

TOKYO (UPI) — A Panamanian-registered oil tanker and a small Japanese freighter collided in rainy, windy weather on Japan's Inland Sea Wednesday, spreading thousands of barrels of burning crude over the waters.

The 89,000-ton tanker and the freighter both caught fire as a result of the collision about 500 miles southwest of Tokyo, but there were no injuries.

The fire was controlled within a few hours.

The Japanese government's Maritime Safety Agency said the tanker was carrying 30,000 barrels of crude oil from Borneo to Kikuma on the island of Shikoku.

The ships were the Panamanian tanker Astro Leo with a crew of 35, and the Ilushun Maru a 2,770-ton Japanese coastal freighter based in Kobe and carrying 23.

They collided in stormy weather off Matsuyama City on Japan's small island of Shikoku, the maritime agency said.

Second Rebel Tory MP Ousted by Clark

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Conservative MP David MacDonald has been dumped from Opposition Leader Joe Clark's select strategy committee because he voted against the party over government immigration legislation.

MacDonald, 40-year-old MP for the Prince Edward Island riding of Egmont, said today Clark stripped him of his spot on the 20 member committee shortly after he voted against Liberal government legislation that would overhaul the country's immigration laws March 23. The party had agreed to support the government on the legislation.

MacDonald, who has represented Egmont for 12 years, is considered a moderate Conservative, one of the so-called "Red Tories."

He said Clark has allowed him to retain his job as party regional development critic, but that he has been turfed out of the strategy committee which sifts and sets the party's political direction.

The committee is hand-picked by Clark.

MacDonald said he does not consider his dispute with Clark as serious as the one between the 37-year-old Opposition leader and Alberta MP Jack Horner.

Tuesday, Clark took similar action against Horner after learning that the MP for Crowfoot discussed the possibility of joining the Liberal government with Prime Minister Trudeau.

In a related development, the Toronto Sun reported today that a group of dissatisfied Progressive Conservatives had planned a meeting for last Monday at which they intended to pass a resolution calling for Clark's resignation.

The meeting was cancelled when cooler heads prevailed, the paper adds. It says those dissatisfied include some riding officials, some delegates to last year's party leadership convention and defeated Conservative candidates.

SPEECH FROM CIDA DOESN'T COME CHEAP

OTTAWA (CP) — The words of Paul Gerin-Lajoie, former president of the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), did not come cheaply for the Canadian taxpayer.

In fact, it cost more than $20,000 to prepare and publish a speech he gave last May in Montreal, entitled The Arab World and Canada: Prospects for Co-operation.

Printing and binding the 7,540 copies of his speech cost $5,164.90. Layout cost $4,133, paper $1,721, and typesetting $1,135 plus an additional $1,100 for an Arabic version.

Research and preparation of the speech ran to $5,400, and translation into Arabic cost $650 compared to about $800 paid to translate it into the former CIDA president's native French.

With $440.07 thrown in for distribution, Gerin-Lajoie's speech cost the tapayer $20,544.97.

Iran Quake Toll Rises to 170

TEHRAN (AP) — The official news agency said today 170 persons had been counted dead in Wednesday's earthquake in a rugged mountain region of western Iran.

The agency quoted Gov. Ahmed Bradarnor of Chaharmahal-Bakhtiari province as saying 100 bodies were recovered in the village of Noughan, while 50 were found in Ardal and 20 in the villages of Shalamzar and Chogharkoor.

The quake, measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale, rocked a large region between Brojen and Shahr-Kurd 80 miles west of Isfahan and 250 miles south of Tehran.

Radio Iran said that by late today rescuers, including medical teams, had established operations throughout the entire earthquake region.

The region is populated by nomadic Bakhtiari tribesmen who raise sheep and make rugs from the wool.

About 250 miles farther south, the towns of Gir and Karzin, near Shiraz, felt the quake Wednesday and new tremors today, but no damage or casualties were reported.

TEAPOT SHOWS UP

A Vancouver woman told police Wednesday an antique Chinese teapot she lost while moving household effects has turned up on display in the Provincial Museum here.

Grace Leong said she spotted the dragon motif teapot and pewter tray in the museum last month after losing them while moving in February.

She said she'd been afraid to tell police when the pieces were lost, but had contacted authorities Wednesday on the advice of her lawyer.

Museum director Yorke Edwards said today he hasn't yet been contacted, but wouldn't be surprised if her story is true.

"This sort of thing happens quite often around the world," said Edwards.

"If it's good and it's stolen, it's not unusual for it to turn up in a museum after a couple of bounces."

Edwards said his staff will look into the situation today.

The ministry of education has approved the Kamloops School District's proposal to build an elementary school capable of being heated by solar energy. The 13,000-square-foot school will cost $586,000, about 15 per cent more than normal school construction costs.

Carter Halts Plutonium Reactors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a move to stem supplies of deadly plutonium in the United States, President Carter today halted work on the controversial fast breeder nuclear reactor and outlawed extraction of plutonium from spent reactor fuel.

Carter's move reversed a long-standing administration policy and cancelled programs considered vital by the nuclear power industry to stretch uranium reactor fuel supplies.

Unlike past presidents, however, Carter accepted arguments that plutonium — one of the most deadly poisons known to man, and the material from which nuclear bombs can be easily made — offers more risks than benefits.

"The benefits of nuclear power are . . . very real and practical," Carter said. "But a serious risk accompanies world-wide use of nuclear power — the risk that components of the nuclear power process will be turned to provide atomic weapons."

A panel of senators warned Carter Wednesday that a few terrorists could build a crude atomic bomb with only stolen nuclear material, unclassified instructions and a simple workshop.

In addition to cutting off construction of a demonstration breeder and banning fuel recycling, Carter today pledged to urge other nations to follow the U.S. lead.

Oil Prices in Limbo for a Month

Times News Serices

OTTAWA — Any decision on a new price for oil has been put off for at least a month in the wake of a federal-provincial meeting Wednesday that failed to reach any agreement.

Positions of the energy ministers seemed little changed after the three and a half hours of negotiations, with suggestions for an increase ranging from nothing to at least $2 a barrel.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said they have agreed to meet again in four weeks for more talks. In the meantime, the provinces will reconsider their positions as well as possible formulas that might eliminate the need in future for annual pricing talks.

British Columbia Energy Minister Jack Davis told the conference that Alberta oil is cheaper in Eastern Canada than on the West Coast and called for a $25 million-a-year federal subsidy to set things right.

The cost of shipping Alberta oil to British Columbia has risen to 70 cents a barrel, compared with 60 cents for shipping oil a much farther distance to Ontario and Quebec, he said.

The economic stability of the Trans Mountain Oil Pipeline, linking Alberta with the West Coast, has been destroyed because Ottawa has encouraged greater use of Alberta oil in Eastern Canada, he added.

Like most of the other ministers, Davis did not take a definite stand on how much — if at all — the current $9.75 a barrel domestic price of oil should be increased this July 1.

Davis called for establishment of a 1,000-mile price zone, centred on Edmonton, within which the federal government would pay pipeline costs.

This means Ottawa would pay roughly $25 million a year to Trans Mountain Oil Pipeline operators to cover the cost of shipping Alberta oil to B.C.

The cost would be about half the amount of the federal subsidy paid to consumers in Quebec, he said in a prepared statement released to reporters outside the meeting.

Davis also called for an immediate reduction of 2.4 cents-a-gallon in the 10-cents-a-gallon federal excise tax on gasoline. He said a further 1.3 cents shoud be cut from the tax for every dollar that the price of a barrel of Alberta oil is increased. The tax was imposed in 1974 to help pay the cost of importing higher-priced foreign oil into Quebec and the Atlantic provinces. But Davis said it has produced a surplus of about $300 million.

Some of this surplus should be used to offset rising Alberta-B.C. pipeline costs, Davis said. These costs could rise next year to 90 cents a barrel, from 70 cents now, because the pipeline is not being used to capacity.

Oil flow through the pipeline was reduced sharply when Ottawa cut off exports through B.C. to the United States and diverted greater volumes of Alberta oil to the East.

4 BREAK-INS HIT SAANICH FIRMS

A spokesman said thieves entered Saanich Tool Rentals, 3772 Shelbourne, and carted off a 200-pound safe containing about $800 in cash and cheques.

A quantity of drugs was taken from McGill and Orme Pharmacy in the Saanich Medical building at 3491 Saanich Road.

Police said entry into the building was gained through a basement window in the office of dentist Dr. Peter Bush.

Thieves got nothing in two other break-ins at the Royal Oak Pharmacy, 4452 West Saanich Road, and Nu-Way Cleaners, 1590 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Police said the only thing missing from the drug store is a bottle on display labelled as a drug. But it contained nothing but water.

said, could circumvent the public accounts committee.

Bennett rejected the criticisms and said the new committee has far wider powers than the public accounts committee.

He said it has the power to hire staff and can sit whether or not there is a legislative session going on. (Public accounts sits only during the session.)

He said he hoped the public accounts committee will now be able to get back to its original purpose, the examination of government spending rather than the operation of Crown corporations.

"In the past the corporations have had too much autonomy and too little accountability," the premier said.

Bennett also introduced other measures to bring the Crown corporations under closer legislative control.

They will now have to meet with Treasury Board, the senior cabinet committee responsible for all financial affairs, to discuss spending proposals before the corporations' budgets are completed.

As well, the "more sophisticated" corporations, presumably the larger ones such as Hydro and ICBC, will be required to submit to Treasury Board long-term estimates of spending.

All Crown corporations will be required to submit mid-yearly as well as annual, reviews of capital and operating expenditures.

Bennett said all meetings of the new corporations committee will be open.

The bill, along with a notice of motion to amend the standing orders of the house to allow the additional committee, will be debated later this session.

The legislature adjourned late Wednesday for the Easter break with no firm indication when it will resume.

Premier Bill Bennett refused to set a specific date and would only repeat earlier statements that this session will be the longest in B.C. history. It started Jan. 13.

Bennett said Wednesday he had thought at the start of the session that all business could be wrapped up by Easter.

But it appears the government has at least half its planned legislation yet to be introduced, and only eight of the 18 cabinet ministers have had their spending estimates passed.

Bennett said the resumption of the session is at the call of the Speaker Ed Smith.

He said when it was thought all sessional business would be done by Easter, he and other ministers made plans for various meetings which cannot be changed.

As an example, he named the western Premier's conference be in Brandon starting May 4, indicating the legislature will not resume until after that date.

He did say that the break will be at least until April 25.

Major legislation promised in the throne speech but yet to be introduced includes:

—Ombudsman Act;

—Changes to the Pharmacare Act;

—Labor Code amendments;

—Amendments to the Land Commission Act;

—Community of Property laws;

—Municipal revenue sharing;

In other Legislature business Wednesday:

—Statistics tabled showed that more than one-fifth of the jobs attributed to Bill Vander Zalm's job-finding program were found by Canada Manpower. Page 10.

—Legislation was introduced which would allow Cabinet to set and adjust rent-increase ceilings without consent from the legislature. Page 52.

Wages Reviewed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $14.8 million shortfall in University of British Columbia's budget requirements has led to a review of the administration's monetary agreement with faculty. Leslie Crouch, president of the Faculty Association, said Wednesday that the 2,000 professors had negotiated an 11-per-cent increase in wages and fringe benefits but the agreement could be reopened if the university budget request was cut more than two per cent.

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Ltd. has been charged with 23 counts of pollution involving the Crown corporation's pulp and paper mill near here.

Environment Canada laid 20 of the charges under the fisheries act citing spills of highly toxic polychlorinated bitheyl (PCB) into Porpoise Harbor. The British Columbia Pollution Control Branch laid three charges concerning another spill.

Racquet Club Hit

The Victoria Racquet Club almost landed the ball in the wrong court with advertisements saying members could join the club for $100.

The consumer and corporate affairs ministry, in its monthly enforcement report, reported the club on Gordon Head Road has agreed not to advertise membership rates of $100 "without indicating that an additional lump sum payment of $1,000 or 12 annual payments of $100 are also required."

The director of the Trade Practices Act alleged that "a "newspaper advertisement in May, 1976, might have misled consumers into believing that membership rates were lower than they were in fact."

Club president John McBride said today the wording of the ad was "more of an oversight than anything else . . . the director of trade practices did a marvelous job in bringing it to our attention and we've assured them it won't happen again."

On another matter, McBride said the club has succeeded in reversing the declining membership trend that started last year with the opening of the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, but is still far short of its target of 900 members.

The club lost 300 members after Oak Bay opened its competing facility, but McBride said a recent membership drive has netted 30-40 new members, "and I've been heartened by the response from the business community."

the weather

The fair weather pattern over the province is now breaking down as the ridge of high pressure passes into Alberta. A weather disturbance lying offshore is now pushing onto the coast accompanied by increasing cloud together with precipitation in the form of rain or showers over coastal regions. This system will weaken and pass inland crossing the Interior by the weekend, resulting in some cloudiness and showers mainly over western portions of the Interior. Temperatures will be cooler following passage of this system eastward.

Canon AE-1...the revolutionary "new generation" SLR with electronic circuitry and a mini-computer to make superb results easier to achieve than ever before.

No other camera quite like it.
The AE-1 is not just another "automatic" camera. For the first time in the world, camera functions are under the command of a micro-computer and electronic circuits are used not only for determining the exposure, but for automatic control of practically every working part.

New Shutter Priority System.
Unlike most automatic cameras, you start by choosing the speed required to "freeze" the subject. You then focus – and the camera's electronics determine and set the correct exposure the instant you press the shutter release! And you can continue to shoot at the same speed – with the aperture automatically adjusting to changing light conditions.

Incredible camera. Incredible price.
The AE-1 is exciting. And part of this excitement is the price. To get the whole incredible story, get excited...go to your Canon dealer.

COFFEE ON HOLD . . .

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Brazil is sitting on nine million sacks of coffee while waiting for already bloated prices to go higher.

Camilo Calazans, president of the Brazilian Coffee Institute (IBC), said "We are in no rush to sell with the situation like it is."

He said private producers and exporters have nine million, 132-pound sacks of coffee which they are holding out of the market until prices climb higher.

Some of the coffee, which is not under direct government export control, is being sold "little by little as part of legitimate speculation" as the stocks already purchased and warehoused by the government are rapidly depleted, Calazans said.

Heart Seizure Kills Columnist Wasserman

VANCOUVER (CP) Jack Wasserman collapsed and died Wednesday night while telling a story at a ceremonial dinner in the Hotel Vancouver.

The Sun columnist and television interviewer was helped by doctors in attendance, given inhalator treatment and rushed to St. Paul's Hospital, but could not be revived.

An autopsy indicated he died of a coronary occlusion.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Unitarian Church at 49th and Oak Street, to be followed by cremation.

The family has requested no flowers, but those who wish can make donations to the Variety Club.

Wasserman, 59, had a brief health scare last October when he suffered chest pains during a visit to Montreal, but a cardiogram showed no heart damage and he maintained his hectic pace to the end.

On Wednesday he did a CBC Hourglass television show then rushed to a $25-a-head "roast" for Gordon Gibson Sr., and went to the microphone as the second speaker.

He was telling a story about the retired lumberman's political campaigning days when he fell forward, striking his head against the microphone on the speaker's podium.

Then he fell from view behind the head table, and many in the audience of more than 600 thought at first it was part of a skit.

He leaves his second wife, the former Pat Knudsen, whom he married in June, 1974, and his daughter Jana Kravitz, by his former wife, Fran Gregory.

As a reporter and interviewer he scored many a news scoop by sheer unflagging work, and he pushed himself just as hard in his community service.

An example was the annual Variety Club telethon in February when he talked himself hoarse pleading with other personalities for two nights for support of handicapped children.

He often described himself as a saloon writer but his column frequently had hard news tips sandwiched among the gossip about entertainment personalities, and every now and then he would present the editors with a bonus news story which made big headlines.

Wasserman was born in Winnipeg and came to Vancouver with his parents in 1935.

He was studying law at the University of B.C. when he became interested in newspaper writing and began working for the Sun part-time.

By 1949 he had a full-time job on the paper, and a year later showed quick promise as the Sun's bureau representative in Nanaimo. A year after that he was back in the city room and before long he was at work on the saloon beat.

"Nightclubs are where I go to work," he used to explain to people who thought it was all play.

When news of Wasserman's death reached the legislature, Premier Bill Bennett paid tribute to "a very fair member of the media."

He said the death was even more shocking because it took place at the dinner for Gibson, former member of the house.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said because B.C. is still a small community the loss of someone like Wasserman "touches us far beyond the professional association."

Barrett said Wasserman's father was a friend and acquaintance of his father and both were friends and acquaintances of Bennett's father.

"Like his father, Jack Wasserman was an open, fair and honest person who professionally went around the province doing his job with a confidence and a surety that he would always be fair."

Tory leader Scott Wallace said he had great respect for Wasserman and enjoyed his "constant championing of the underdog."

French in Quebec

While English-Canadians are gasping at Quebec's French language charter and reading sensationalized reports about the document, we should remember that the bill guarantees English language rights.

"There can be no question of abolishing English education nor of rejecting the cultural tradition which has inspired it to this day . . .," says the charter. People can still address the government of Quebec in English, and use English in the courts. Translations of government documents and laws will also be available in English, a benefit that francophones don't enjoy in most other parts of Canada.

As Peter Hadekel, in an excellent analysis, writes elsewhere on this page, if the Quebec anglophone community reacts over-emotionally to the bill it will only strengthen Rene Levesque's hand in his independence gamble. If the Trudeau administration challenged the proposed legislation in the courts Levesque would have another petard like the air-controller bilingualism issue, which turned thousands of Quebecers towards separatism. The prime minister has reacted diplomatically, pointing out that the charter is only a discussion paper, although he feared the Quebec government was taking a retrogressive step rather than a progressive step in the cultural development of Quebec.

It is also interesting to note that Quebec business is undismayed by the province's third major language bill in eight years. A spokesman for the Canadian Life Insurance Association which represents Sun Life, Prudential Assurance and Standard Life in Quebec says the industry has already taken major steps to implement "francization" in Quebec.

Yet there is a measure of melancholy here. Quebec is moving towards unilingualism at a time when the rest of the country is trying to become bilingual, 100 years late albeit. About one million English-speaking elementary children are now studying French, or 40 per cent of the total. This compares to only 37 per cent of francophone children in Quebec now studying English, the language of North America's majority. There is also an ironic danger here as Quebec becomes more inward looking. The new freedom that Quebecois feel could become a prison if such legislation is passed into law, relegating the province to an insular role it occupied before the so-called "quiet revolution" of Jean Lesage's administration.

One also wonders at the obsession with language at a time when Quebec culture is flowering as never before. From rock music to poetry, Quebecois are making waves, not just in Quebec, but throughout the cultural world. In 1931 anglophones comprised 20.2 per cent of the Quebec population. By 1971 the minority had declined to 19.2 per cent. Today it would be even smaller. Emphasis on language is as much retribution to an indifferent English-Canada as a legislative attempt to instigate a political confrontation with Ottawa.

Given the benefit of hindsight these sombre times have brought to the fore, had English-Canadian governments made real attempts to forge a bilingual country these past 100 years, two solitudes would have melded or at least cooperated. Under the British North America Act, English language rights are assured.

The Quebec white paper simply proposes that the province be no longer officially bilingual, a de facto situation that exists in every other province with perhaps the exception of New Brunswick. Anglophones are still receiving better treatment in Quebec than francophones get in the rest of Canada. In British Columbia, for example, there are 100,000 French-speaking people, although not one totally French school exists in the province. As the Bible says: "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

The Seven Per Cent Solution

Lowering rent control ceilings from 10.6 to seven per cent is a shrewd political gesture on the part of Premier Bennett.

But this curt bow in the direction of British Columbia tenants amounts to about two weeks rent on average over the year. If this administration had shown more "restraint" in taxing its own citizens, putting a leash on Hydro and controlling food prices we could take the seven per cent solution with less salt.

It is also worth noting how calmly landlords accepted the news of more restraint. When the New Democratic Party introduced rent controls in 1974 landlords became frenzied, claiming apartments would be closed down or turned into condominiums. Now this sector of the business community is squeezed out of a further three per cent and it remains remarkably sanguine. Perhaps Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair's admission a few days later that rent controls could be phased out before the end of the year had something to do with the calm.

Regardless of the cynicism, Premier Bennett is correct in favoring the market as the best rent-controlling agent. When vacancy rates are less than one per cent, however, the need for public intervention in the marketplace is apparent as a few unscrupulous landlords will charge what the traffic will bear. Now that vacancy rates are growing larger, because of a record number of housing starts last year, and more rental accommodation reaching the market, it's forseeable that rent controls may be abandoned. Meanwhile, pegging rent increases to inflation, and pointing out the fact to labor is fair enough. The government gets a curt bow in return on this initiative.

PETER HADEKEL

Massive Push to Statehood

MONTREAL — The language issue in Quebec has been a political hot potato for the last 10 years but the Parti Quebecois government appears to have transformed it into a powerful political weapon.

Unlike the previous Liberal and Union Nationale government, whose language legislation eventually proved fatal, the Parti Quebecois appears to have read the political winds more accurately in formulating its own language policy.

The white paper released last week reflects a balance between the extremist positions of radical separatists and the views of more moderate members of the francophone majority, and will probably win fairly widespread support from French Quebec.

The proposals in the white paper go far enough past Bill 22, the previous language legislation, to satisfy the militants in Quebec, while the guarantees of the status of English are enough to win the support of moderate francophones.

If the anglophone community reacts too emotionally to the proposed bill, it will only strengthen Rene Levesque's hand in his independence gamble.

The language policy is an important weapon in the PQ's independence arsenal because it will severely test the nerve of anglophones both in Quebec and across Canada.

Test Their Nerve

Any move by the federal government to declare the language charter unconstitutional would play right into the hands of the Parti Quebecois who could turn around and tell Quebecers that their rights were being trampled on.

The hardline stance taken by English pilots and airtraffic controllers against the use of French at Quebec airports won the Parti Quebecois a lot of votes last November. And there is reason to believe that a supreme court ruling against Quebec's language charter would have the same effect.

That is why the English community here will have to measure its reaction to the white paper very carefully. While the Parti Quebecois declares in a general way that Quebec will no longer be a bilingual province, many of the provisions in the proposed law would actually preserve anglophone rights.

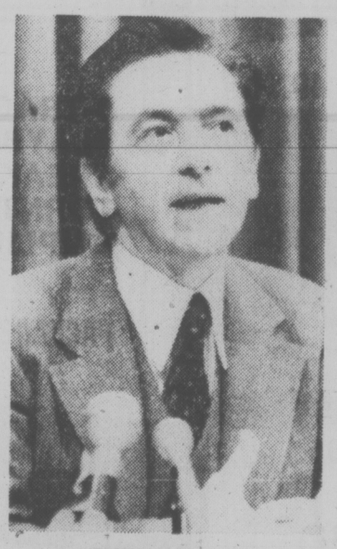
As the white paper points out, there is no constitutional obligation on Quebec to provide an English school system. Section 93 of the British North American Act merely provides for a denominational system of education in Quebec.

Yet the PQ guaranteed access to English schools for native anglophone Quebecers, despite strong pressure from radicals to abolish English education all together.

Individuals will still be allowed to address their government in English, receive English translations of law and documents, and use English in the courts and the national assembly. Only the official status of English will be removed.

The anglophones could have come out a lot worse, especially when they compare their lot with with francophones in Ontario who have had all kinds of trouble getting French services from their government or French high schools in heavy francophone areas like Windsor.

Anglophone resistance to the Bourassa government's Bill 22 was based on a refusal to accept the reality of a French Quebec despite years of advance warning. Now, the English minority will have to learn to speak French in the work-place or leave the province — the same kind of choice as francophones in Manitoba or Ontario have had to face for years.



CAMILLE LAURIN
. . . cultural development minister

The white paper states bluntly that the onus of blingualism is clearly on the English community:

"While the Canadian state defines itself as bilingual, this does not prevent the western provinces Ontario and the maritimes from being solidly English-speaking (with the single exception of New Brunswick). Quebec is therefore not obliged to be bilingual because it is part of Canada. In Quebec, the dedication of French as the official language implies that it is truly the language common to all Quebecers."

Such legislation can only strengthen the momentum of Quebec nationalism, which has been building steadily since 1960. The PQ language charter will nourish a spirit of independence from English-Canada that could translate into a lot of votes at referendum time.

The defensive and coercive aspects of the PQ's stand on the language of work and education are based on pessimistic predictions by Quebec demographers over the last 10 years. The picture that emerges from the white paper is one of the French language fighting for survival.

The demographers cited by the government predict that if population trends continue, there will be fewer and fewer French-speaking Quebecers. Immigrants, who show a strong tendency to integrate into the anglophone community, are assuming an increasing importance in the population makeup because of the declining birth rate among francophones.

PQ Moving Fast

The government interprets this steady flow of immigrants towards the anglophone community as a reflection of the dominant position of English in the economy. That is why it is making strong efforts to change the language of business in Quebec from English to French.

The whole question of language has been defined in a social and economic context by the PQ white paper. Sweeping transformations in Quebec institutions are needed to guarantee that French will survive "because language is deeply affected by institutions and the entire social fabric," the paper says.

In this sense the government has come up with a blueprint for social change that goes well beyond what Bill as tried to accomplish. The government apparatus is giving the province a massive push in the direction of unilingual "statehood".

By actively discouraging angophones from coming to Quebec through its new educational policy, the PQ is making the task that much easier and enhancing its prospects for victory in the referendum on independence. The language policy, coupled with the economic indictment of Confederation made two weeks ago by the government is moving in the direction of independence.

". . . of course it still takes a lot of talking, but I believe we gradually can convince more and more people that bashing baby seals to death is a justified trade . . ."

Migraines

Two recent Times medicalnews reports set me thinking. On March 11: Migraine: A Big-League Affliction. "A migraine headache is caused by the arteries in the head expanding, allowing blood to surge through in painful throbs . . . preceded by an 'aura' in which dizziness, visual effects, and other symptoms warn the sufferer that an attack is coming on."

Then the March 26 item on the Boston Committee on Aging protesting the experiments on aged volunteers to test a new drug which dilates the blood vessels and proposed as a help in senile faintness.

Human Anatomy and Physiology, by David Le Vay, discusses a familiar experience. After a heavy meal, the abdominal blood vessels dilate widely, the blood pressure falls, and blood to the brain decreases. A sleepy, or faint, feeling follows. In the aged, whose arterioles have lost some elasticity, lower blood pressure ensues, to cause confusion for possible accidents. Yet the Boston drug increases dilation.

Encyclopedia Americana, international edition, 1976: "The excruciating headache, which is the most prominent symptom of migraine, is the result of paroxysmal enlargment of the branches of the external carotid artery, which supplies the intercranial dura mater (membrane)." In many cases food allergies are the cause.

Collier's Encyclopedia, 1971, page 182: The mechanism which causes migraine is unknown, but essentially a dilation of some brain arteries. The only effective control is vasoconstriction by injecting ergotamine tartrate. Certain foods may cause migraine.

What foods? Encyclopedia Britannica, Page 490, states that 50-100 mg. of niacin can produce dilation of blood vessels. In large amounts the liver is damaged. Very high doses for rats paralyze the respiratory centre. Brewer's yeast has been recommended for years for B complex vitamin. But its niacin when added to that in common foods like peanut butter, liver, beef, chicken, brown rice, etc., could tip a susciptible person into migraine after first giving him red skin spots, cold hands, and visual warnings.

Your two news reports might alert readers to avoid developing migraine. — M. Linwood, Victoria.

Move Over

Never have I read such "gobbledygook" as your letter to the editor in the Times March 30, under the caption Royal Oak. I read it three times and still can't believe it. The writer obviously has a domicile (in plain English, house) in the Royal Oak area and because he's comfortably situated, he wants things to remain as they were pre-1968.

I have news for you, time marches on and people like myself who have lived and worked in isolated areas want to spend our retirement years in a place that enjoys the best climate in Canada. We do not want ratepayers' associations composed of people who have already secured housing telling us that we are not welcome, or facilities for catering to us are not welcome. The same people who want to maintain the status quo complain because of the lack of industry in Victoria, yet scream blue murder when an industrial development wants to locate in their area. What hypocrisy!

We elected our municipal councillors to act in our behalf. They should be allowed to make decisions without pressure or harassment from the general public. If we don't like their decisions, vote them out of office. But remember, people are going to come and they're going to be accommodated, so tuck in your elbows and prepare to move over. — Isobel Ripley, 4402 Wilkinson Road.

Energy Technology

According to new energy department reports tabled in the House of Commons, Canada's future gas and oil supplies will come from remote and northern areas, and that energy will cost plenty.

The Hyperion sewage plant, serving greater Los Angeles, converts sewage to methane gas, runs the plant with it and sells the excess to a nearby utility. Ten cubic feet are produced in the digestion of one pound of waste. The four primary treatment plants, which serve 17 municipalities in the Lower Mainland (and discharge into the Fraser and Strait of Georgia), process a total of 119 million gallons each day. Obviously, the potential for gas production is tremendous.

The Science Council of Canada background study No. 33, Conservation, from which most of this information is taken, states that digestion of the trillion cubic feet of animal manure produced annually in Canada could yield 50 per cent of our current yearly gas production, or two per cent of our proven reserves.

The technology for making low-sulphur (clean-burning) oil from garbage, sewage, manure and agricultural residues is quite simple: The wastes are heated under pressure with carbon monoxide. The heat content of this oil is 14-16,000 BTUs per pound, which compares with regular oil at 20,000, and coal at only 7-12,000 BTUs.

The city of Vancouver last year buried 149,536 tons of garbage; 490,000 tons were brought to the Lower Mainland dump site by individuals.

We could solve some of our most pressing and destructive environmental problems by opening up the frontier of new technology and new thinking about energy here at home. — H. Kellington, Crofton.

Keep It Short

A remarkably astute bilingual communication! And that from an ordinary citizen via a letter to the editor of Globe and Mail in the Times March 30, entitled, A Few Bonnes Bouches.

Such ought to be grafted onto prefaces of Canadian text books dealing with languages, particularly that of English-French or French-English translation facilities.

The letter is quite a gem, easily surpassing in morale some tons of emotionally damaging sensationalism from our modern word-mills, much of which is usually time-wasting, mind-exhausting, while drawing heavily from tree forests to pulp products without letup, not to mention excessive eyestrain.

Here it was taking up a small corner on your page five, a quickly moving, invigorating excercise of vivant images with compelling humor nudging at our silly, constant bits of language squabbles. Squabbles which might yet rupture our beautiful nation into irretrievable fragments for future geographers (if such should survive) to try and pick up the territorial pieces to put together again.

Today students get immersed in gross amounts of past medieval scribes, coerced and saturated in a modern glut of written stuff and labelled illiterate. No wonder the lemmings' method to exit life is adopted more and more by our much pressured progeny. No other way to escape the increasing homogenization of the once greatest gift to the universe, the human brain.

Severely exorcize some of the windier waves of bulky newspaper columns, articles, news reports, sports, etc., etc. So much of it breezes on endlessly like some multi-segmented train with awesomely mixed contents chugging over thousands of track miles across the land to predetermined destination.

Parler bref too, with a sang-froid, of course! Cheers to letter-writer, Nat Edelstein. — M. Anderson, 640 Dallas Road.

Cruel Trapping

I think all this publicity about the terribly cruel and unnecessary seal hunting is to the good.

However, a much worse thing is the continued use of leghold traps on furbearing animals. Every time I see a squirrel coat I realize that this coat has entailed torture which probably lasted for days on dozens of squirrels which hung by one paw from traps in trees. A trap causing instant death is now almost perfected. It is only government procrastination which allows this terrible suffering of millions of animals every year to go on.

I feel that a world which allows this torture of animals to go on will never be a civilized and peaceful world. — S. Sutton, 1035 McGregor Avenue.

West's Stand

Since the visit of Soviet president Podgorny to southern African countries it would be fair to say that the Russians now stand with the black countries against Rhodesia and South Africa.

This being the case the question is now: where does the western world stand? Is it with Russia?

In all fairness to Rhodesia and South Africa it would be right for the United States government to make its statement in as clear terms, for the position of the white countries of southern Africa has been made more precarious by reason of the unequivocal declaration of the Russian president.—Philip Saville, 515 Foul Bay Road.

Abortion Theatre

I am a nurse and have viewed firsthand the products of abortion theatres. I would like to issue a challenge to Ms. P. Kolodziejak, who recently expressed her anger towards the 13 Victoria doctors questioning the horrendous increase in Victoria's abortions (over 7,000 per cent in the last seven years). She accused them of trying to be "the voice of God" and then asserted her right to her own body.

My challenge to you, Mrs. Kolodziejak, is to visit a local abortion theatre and view for yourself the tiny dismembered limbs of a suction curretage victim, or better yet, the larger corpses of prostoglandin saline or hysterectomy abortions. You would discover the baby is not part of the mother's body. It is someone else's body, structually and genetically different from the mother. He has his own arms, legs, internal organs, nervous system, eyes, nose and mouth as well as his own blood supply, often of a type different from that of the mother.

Perhaps, what are you trying to say, Ms. Kolodziejak, is that the unborn child is dependent upon his mother for oxygen, nutrition and warmth, just as a full term eight-pound healthy baby is also totally dependent. However, do we have the right to strip a tiny human being of his right to life simply because he must rely upon another member of society?

After your morning at the abortion theatre, ask yourself the question: "Who is really playing God?" Those phsyicians who are trying to reclaim some measure of human dignity for the unborn child or those who have fatally imposed their brand of morality upon these defenceless, innocent little ones? Unlike the doctor who was recently accorded half a page to rationalize the abortions he performs (Times, March 24), I am not ashamed to sign my name. — Mrs. Ann Wenman, R.N., 1780 Keith Road.

Galt Reunion

Galt Collegiate Institute and vocational school, at Galt, Ont., will hold its 125th Anniversary on Saturday, May 14. All former students and teachers are invited to attend.

Please come and renew old acquaintances, tour the school, join us for coffee. Let's make this a day to remember! — Bernice Barlow, Mary Meikleham, 125th Anniversary Committee, GCI & VS, Galt, Ontario.

Cadboro Bay

As a long-time member of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association I want to express my great appreciation to the ousted executive for the many hours of work they contributed over the past several years. They had to work with the municipal officials over many aspects of the community plan.

I truly regret they were treated so rudely at the recent annual meeting on March 23. — B. E. Owen, 2950 Phyllis Street.

Those Cunning Communists Are Not So Bright

russell baker

President Carter must have been flabbergasted when the Soviet Communists handed him the human-rights championship of the world without a struggle. One can only guess that the commissars have gone groggy in the brain lobes under the merciless batterings of Politburo prose to which they regularly submit, for they did not seem to realize that the contest counted for anything.

Instead of disputing the American claim to be the champion of oppressed humanity, they took the line that it was poor sportsmanship by the president to raise the subject and hinted that if he persisted, they would become cross and might even do something disagreeable.

In short, they invited mankind to understand that the Soviet Union is against human rights. It was an astonishing piece of ineptitude by a government to which American mythology has always ascribed supernatural powers of propagandistic cunning.

In the great world beyond the superpowers, communism's appeal has always run to those who see it as the best hope of humanity. That the men in Moscow see nothing incompatible between its appeal to human idealism and its grudge against human rights suggests there is a lot less cunning there than our pessimists believe.

In any case, whether out of dumb adversary reflex or simple human error, the Soviets have given Carter a considerable triumph. This is surely more than the president anticipated when he began saying that the United States, after a long and losing expedition through the swamps of diplomatic amorality, was once again going to concern itself with the anguish of the oppressed.

This was a simple case of going back to American basics and even made a kind of diplomatic sense. Since the Dulles era of the 1950s, foreign policy had been in the hands of men who believed that moralism and successful diplomacy were incompatible.

The resulting record has been mixed. Some of the poison has drained out of relations with the dictatorial states, but the price has been a fall in American standing elsewhere, which translated into a loss of power as other peoples found it increasingly difficult to understand what if anything besides its own self-interest the United States stood for.

And so there was a certain logic in a swing of the pendulum back toward the more moral tone. Whether Carter intended to do more about human rights than make beautiful jaw music and reduce the gravy flow to a few inconsequential generalissimos is uncertain. Indeed, his very choice of words — "human rights" — suggested a vagueness of purpose that might not extend far beyond simple propaganda.

The earlier moralist, Dulles, had spoken of "liberation," which is another cup of tea. And of course, when the people of the Communist states took him seriously and revolted, he was left with the choice of assisting their "liberation" at the risk of nuclear war or revising his vocabulary. He revised. Moralism has been in sour odor ever since in Washington.

This doubtless accounts for some of the alarms going off in Washington's old-timers' league about Carter's interest in human rights. Washington's old-timers suffer from the belief that history repeats itself. In Vietnam 12 years ago they saw an Asian repetition of Hitler at Munich and decided to forestall serious warfare with a resolute military response. So much for the wisdom of habituated history.

In fact, it is hard to see how President Carter can lose on this one. Provided always that he does not start inciting the Moscow dissidents to trash Lenin's Tomb. He gains points among peoples' movements everywhere by advancing the United States as the agent of a humane ideology. He gains bonus points from Moscow's growling opposition which presents Soviet Communism as hostile to human rights. And he adds heavy political muscle at home from the support of Americans, both conservative and liberal, who have been angered or embarrassed by previous administrations' eagerness to stay in the good graces of sundry odious tyrants.

Conceivably, the Soviets might become cross enough to quit bargaining on the arms-race cessation, although it is hard to see how this would serve them. They need economic relief from munitions bills as desperately as Washington. They certainly need the sweeteners, such as trade with the United States, more than the United States needs them from Muscovy.

Admittedly, reason may not prevail here. The rapidity with which Moscow gave away its position as salvationist to all mankind suggests that reason may not be in heavy supply these days at the Kremlin.

Cubans Get Ready to Welcome American Tourists Again

By CATHERINE CAMPBELL
The Globe and Mail

HAVANA — When Yankee tourists last strolled Havana streets Amado Payne Hernandez had barely started school. Now he is 26, a teacher and a Young Communist — and he is glad the Americans will be back soon.

Amado thinks he speaks for most Cubans when he says "we have nothing against the American people, only their Government. And their Government has changed."

He echoes the optimism of other Havana residents who predicted last week that the 17-year estrangement between Cuba and the United States is almost over.

The Cubans also seemed confident their country would be less altered by Americans than Americans by Cuba.

"We will welcome Americans who want to see our revolution," a University of Havana Sociology professor said. "We would like to show them what we have done."

A young man serving his mandatory three years in the Cuban army said "we will wait and see what we think when they get here." His emphasis was on the Cuban response. If the country proves different than the visitors expect or remember — the Americans will have to adjust.

A 19-year-old naval engineering student said she thought an influx of Americans could only be good for Cuba, particularly if it is accompanied by the end of the U.S. trade embargo that has had harsh effects on the Cuban economy.

The student, the soldier and Amado grew up with the revolution. They accept the Unites States as an imperialist producer of blue jeans and other welcome frivolities. (The film Jaws — retitled Bloody Sharks — is drawing long lines at a Havana theatre.)

And although on Cuban maps the Guantanamo naval bas is described as "territory occupied illegally by the United States," it seems only a small burr in the side of the revolution. Amado describes his country in terms of before 1959 and after 1959. "Before 1959" exists mostly in museums.

Amado has other reasons for welcoming U.S. visitors.

"We have family in the United States. We write to them but we haven't seen them since 1959."

And he teaches English. "I am tired of saying to the class John is a boy. Mary is a girl.' I need practice in speaking."

With this in mind, when Amado spotted three pale-skinned tourists standing on a street corner in the heart of Havana, he leaned out of the window of the truck he was driving and said good afternoon.

After determining the three were neither French nor Russian but from Canada and that one spoke enough Spanish to fill in the gaps in his English, Amado invited them to his nearby home for coffee — and to talk.

"This is my house. It is not much, but it is my house."

The third-floor apartment opens off a narrow walkway ringing a rectangular open air courtyard. The building, like most in Havana, is patiently awaiting a paint job.

Amado is at least partly right: to people used to a surfeit of appliances, furniture, space and privacy, his home is not much.

The living room and bedroom, ceilings apparently supported by unpainted two-by-fours decorated with American cigaret packages and hung with a Canadian flag, and the two dingy alcoves that serve as kitchen and bathroom, would not inspire envy from most North Americans.

But in a country where an acute housing shortage forces many young couples to either wait to marry or live with their in-laws, a place of one's own is almost literally priceless.

Amado and his wife, Leonor Rojo — who speaks no English and rather shyly welcomes the surprise guests, then starts to make coffee on the hotplate — lived with Amado's parents until the birth of their daughter three years ago.

Amado and Leonor are dilligent Young Communists and at 27 they will be eligible and eager to join the 2,000-member Cuban Communist Party.

Their enthusiasm is being rewarded.

"The party decides who is to get a house," Amado explains. Need and contribution to the revolution are the determining factors, but need comes first.

"If I am the best worker but someone else needs a house more, he will get it first."

Being best worker is an honor voted to Amado by his fellow teachers in each of the past two years. For this he is rewarded materially.

"You see this refrigerator? I got it two years ago. You know what it's worth?—660 pesos ($850). You know what I make? Only 132 pesos a month ($170)."

Leonor, who teaches Spanish in primary school, earns 192 pesos a month. Amado does not seem anxious to explain the discrepancy in salaries. Marxism and machismo are still coming to terms — Amado is unabashed to explain that he likes smoking strong Cuban cigarets because they make him feel "more of a man."

Last year, Amado's reward for hard work was a Soviet-made television. "It is worth more —770 pesos. There are two channels. I used to go more to the cinema. Now sometimes I fall asleep in front of the TV."

Amado and Leonor pay about 10 pesos a month for their house and a little extra for their lights. As for all Cubans, their education, day care for their daughter and all medical care are free. They pay no taxes.

Most of their money goes on food, much of which is rationed. The memorable Cuban ice cream is a welcome exception.

If they wanted to travel in their annual month's holiday — to European socialist countries or France — they would have to save about 1,200 pesos each.

Both work a 44-hour week and attend university classes five nights a week — and both belong to baseball teams.

Leonor heads the local block Committee for the Defence of the Revolution which has about 220 members.

Committees operate throughout Cuba, conducting round-the-clock watches of blocks by volunteers working two-hour shifts. The surveillance discourages counter-revolutionary behavior and other undesirable occurrences, mainly theft.

Told of clothes stolen at a nearby beach, Amado warns the tourists to beware of the kind of people who are not working hard and have time to idle away. "The party does not approve of these kinds of rolling stones."

With the arrival of thimble-sized cups of strong, sweet and costly Cuban coffee the conversation shifts rapidly between the personal and the political.

Amado explains the Canadian flag. "When your Prime Minister was here a few years ago I took this flag down to say Hello Trudeau to him. He is liked here."

Amado is amazed that none of his three guests is married.

But on hearing that one of the Canadians is divorced, he remarks that the party feels this is not correct behavior. It seems generally forgotten that Fidel Castro was divorced from his wife who worked against him politically while he was imprisoned from 1953 to 1955.

"We do not believe in God. You cannot be a member of the Party and believe in God. You are Roman Catholics? No? Good. I don't want to offend you."

Churches still operate in Cuba, but functions such as weddings are almost always civil ceremonies.

Leonor is asked if she would like to bear more children.

Yes, if there is time, she says. Her daughter spends 13 hours at the day care centre and much time with her grandmother who lives in the apartment below.

Asked what Cuba can expect after Fidel, Amado says seriously "That is very good question. Fidel is everything. There is no one who can talk to the people like he can.

"Many of the other top men are like empty glasses which Fidel fills. There is his brother, Raul, but he is a soldier, not a leader. It is a good question."

Amado is interested in political affiliations in Canada and amused by the apparent lack of individual commitment to parties and the shifts in loyalties displayed in polls and elections.

"Here in Cuba we do not have those problems.

He grins. "To be or not to be."

Songs of the Planets

NEW YORK TIMES

NEW HAVEN — The small group of people in Prof. Willie Ruff's apartment listened intently. A tape recorder began to roll. Sound filled the room — a cacophony of tweedling, wailing, thumping and droning.

A 6-year-old boy said it made him dizzy. One man said it suggested "motion sickness."

But to the two Yale professors who had created it, the sound was the music of the planets in motion, a heavenly harmony whose tones ranged from Mercury's shrill piccolo to Jupiter's low and distant rumbling.

"Do you hear Jupiter?" said Ruff, an assistant professor of music who made his reputation playing jazz on the Frech horn and bass. "It sounds like tympani or bass drums. And there are discrete interval relationships in Mercury."

"Yes," said his colleague, John Rodgers, Silliman Professor of Geology. "I can hear the mechanism that pushes the sine wave — we are hearing the step functions."

Using a computerized music synthesizer, Ruff and Rodgers had given voice to theories, calculations and notations set down more than 350 years ago by Johannes Kepler, the 17th-century German astronomer who worked out the laws of planetary motion and an elaborate hypothetical music based on them.

In effect, the "song" of each planet was determined by its velocity, which in turn was determined by its distance from the sun. The position of all the planets at any given time would thus determine the "chord" of celestial harmony.

The idea that spheres in the heavens make music is ancient, but until Kepler, it had been generally believed that the cosmic music was one unending monotonous chord. People believed this because of the erroneous assumption that each planet moved in a perfectly circular path and at a constant speed.

Kepler's revolutionary discovery was that the planets move in ellipses, not circles, and that their speeds — and therefore their "songs" — vary with their distance from the sun. The closer a planet to the sun, he postulated, the faster it travels and the higher its "voice."

"Kepler's discovery was heretical," Rodgers said, "because ellipses are not perfect, and why would God make something celestial imperfect? His answer was that God wanted to make better music."

Ruff said he was drawn to Kepler's ideas by Paul Hindemith, the late German composer who was a professor of Music at Yale when Ruff was an undergraduate student there.

"When I studied with Hindemith," he explained, "I had just come from the world of modern jazz be-bop. Hindemith was an idol of ours, but all I could get out of him was Kepler, Pythagoras and Boetheus (a fifth-century Roman music theorist and philosopher). At that point, Hindemith was working on his opera, 'Die Harmonie der Welt,' based on Kepler's life.

"I wasn't terribly interested in all that at that point. I was here to find the tools to write modern jazz. It wasn't until I came back here to teach and was thrown in the midst of all these scientific resources that it occurred to me."

Ruff continued: "I wanted to figure out whether Kepler was the screwball he was said to be, or whether he was actually on the right track."

The professor said he was not content merely to look at the hypothetical music notations that Kepler had written out for the planets in his book "The Harmony of the World," which was first published in 1619.

"On paper, it is static," Ruff said. "We have movement in a realization — music is a transaction in time. I wanted to know: 'Will it come out? Will it be what Kepler promised?' — that is, a continuous song for several voices."

What Ruff and Rodgers decided to do was to calculate the motions of the planets over a 100-year period, starting last Dec. 31, and, applying Kepler's laws and musical notations, to devise a computer program for a music synthesizer known as the Groove Hybrid System.

★ ★ ★

"Kepler's laws do the whole thing for you," Rodgers said.

And Ruff added: "We didn't talk about pitch or harmony to the computer — only frequencies. It was less than half a page of typewritten data."

With the data supplied by the two professors, Laurie Spiegel, a 31-year-old New York City composer who specializes in electronic and computer music, wrote the computer program and synthesized it into music.

What emerged was a 30-minute tape recording representing 100 years of planetary motion.

And what did it sound like?

Mercury's song — the highest pitched, because it is the closest to the sun and thus the fastest moving — is an ascending and descending shrill chromatic slide, something like the sprite melody of a piccolo.

Earth and Venus are more limited in range, because they travel in paths that are nearly circular — that of Venus being more nearly so.

"Venus changes from a major to a minor sixth, and earth makes a marvelous minor second," said Professor Rodgers. "In fact, it's just as Kepler said — earth's song is mi-fa-mi: misery, famine, misery."

CDC

The Canada Development Corp. reports 1976 net income after extraordinary items of $22,539,000 or 17 cents a share, compared with 1975 income of $26,050,000 or 57 cents a share.

The 1976 figures for the federal government agency exclude an extraordinary gain of $749,000 or two cents a share on the sale of land.

Revenues in 1976 exceeded $500 million for the first time, reaching $578 million, up from $482.7 million in 1975. Assets totalled $1.592 billion compared with $1.250 billion in 1975.

Net income in the fourth quarter was $4.9 million or two cents a share, down from $10.8 million or 21 cents a share in the same 1975 period. Common share earnings are determined after payment of $4.3 million for dividends of preferred shares.

Revenue increased to $166.1 million from $134.6 million a year ago.

The corporation said the strong recovery in the last quarter, when income was triple that in the third quarter, resulted from a significantly better contribution from the health care group in the period and a decline in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar.

MDC

The Manitoba Development Corp. showed a net loss of $2.4 million for the year ended Mar. 31, 1976.

The MDC report showed loans and investments at year-end totalled $23.9 million, down $10.5 million from the previous year.

The report of General Manager S. J. Parsons said the province has increased its equity in the corporation by $45 million and reduced the corporation's interest-bearing indebtedness by a similar amount.

This includes transfer of a $38.7 million loan to Saunders Aircraft Corp. to the status of provincial grant carried on the books of the province as part of the provincial debt.

" This reduction . . . established the corporation's indebtedness at a level which will eliminate the necessity for further provincial grants to the corporation to meet the interest charges related to its equity investment," Parsons said.

Equity investments at cost total $30.6 million, while loans receivable stand at $8.3 million.

Safeway

Canada Safeway Ltd. has reported record sales, but slightly lower net earnings in 1976.

The company's annual report shows sales of $2,007,682,502 from Canadian and overseas operations, up 6.9 per cent from 1975 sales of $1,877,719,817.

At the end of the year, Safeway operated 276 stores in Western Canada and 160 overseas in Australia, West Germany and the United Kingdom.

Simpsons-Sears

Simpsons-Sears reports net sales at $1,890,827,000 for 1976, an increase of 22.1 per cent over sales of $1,548,600,000 in 1975.

Net earnings were $33,174,000 or 44 cents a share against $32,118,000 or 47 cents a share in 1975.

Dividends of 24 cents a share were declared in 1976, the same as in the previous year.

Shareholders equity in the company at the end of the year totalled $362,597,000 which was 4.82 cents a share compared with $345,066,000 and 4.6 cents a share in 1975.

ERCO

ERCO Industries is to build a new $10.2 million sodium chlorate plant at Thunder Bay, Ont., Albright and Wilson Ltd., ERCO's British parent company, said the plant should be completed by early 1979 and will produce 15,000 tons of the chemical, to be sold to the Great Lakes Paper Co. and other mills for use in bleaching pulp. The plant is to be expanded over the next 2½ years to reach a 25,000-ton capacity, the company said. It is to employ about 300 people. ERCO is the world's largest producer of sodium chlorate, with a plant in British Columbia and another at Buckingham, Que.

Ranch for Sale Again

CLINTON, B.C. (CP) — The historic Empire Valley ranch owned by Robert Maytag is for sale again.

Derek Donaldson, laywer for Maytag, said he assumed the owner was asking about the same price for the ranch as when it was sold in 1974 to Sophie Stegemann, a West German widow who recently lost the ranch in a B.C. Supreme Court foreclosure order.

The ranch was sold to Stegemann for $1.6 million. The woman made a down payment of $650,000 and faced first and second mortgages of $320,000 and $670,000. She made payments of $21,000 and $29,000 before Maytag took her to court last year.

SALES

Success in expansion has created a challenging opportunity for two sales persons. Our company handles a complete line of installed products for the Home Owner and the Contractor.

The people we are looking for must have an excellent sales background. The positions are permanent. Unlimited Yearly Commissions. We feel this is one of the best sales opportunities to be offered in Victoria.

Coast Freight Hike 10-30% Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rate increases from 10 to 30 per cent have been approved by the Anti-Inflation Board for coastal freight services of Rivtow Straits Ltd.

Cecil Cosulich, president of Rivtow, said Wendesday that the rate increases will average about 15 per cent and some will remain the same or be reduced, including the return automobile tariff between the Queen Charlottes and Prince Rupert. The new rates are effective Saturday.

Rivtow operates a service between the Vancouver area and B.C. coastal communities, including the Queen Charlottes.

Cosulich said the new rates reflect the company's position after taking over a number of routes formerly operated by Northland Navigation Ltd. Northland dropped the service after a federal subsidy cutback.

Cosulich said Rivtow lost about $300,000 on the service during the four months ended Feb. 28.

The company has found a wide diversity in the economics of the various routes and while the Vancouver-Prince Rupert-Queen Charlotte routes have done well, runs to Steward and to the southern Queen Charlottes are heavy losers, Cosulich said.

Among problems plaguing the routes are: Inadequacy of many government docks for freight handling; a need to upgrade Rivtow's base facilities; and the fact that division of freight among several carriers has made some locations uneconomic for private carriers to serve.

Cosulich said government docks should be rebuilt to handle all modes of vessels and that there would be discussion with governments concerned about viability of certain routes. He said Rivtow's base facilities would be upgraded within a year.

The increases announced by Rivtow will either put coastal communities out of business "or the next thing to it," said Harvey Inskip, townsite administrator at the central coast community of Ocean Falls.

"This is another serious blow to Ocean Falls. We are not able to get too many key people and are having trouble keeping the ones we have. People will accept only so much."

Inskip said the increases would be better received if a ferry service would be provided soon. He said coastal communities will only get an adequate freight service when there is a ferry that can carry transport trucks.

Ed Wulff, a butcher at Sandspit in the Queen Charlottes, said the islanders pay $4.45 for every 100 pounds of freight and have reached the breaking point.

"Communities on the east coast are subsidized by the federal government to keep living costs in line . . . there is nothing I can do but pass the increases on to the customers but I don't know how much more they can take."

Chuck Stephens, owner of a grocery store at Masset in the northern Queen Charlottes, said current freight rates are up to $6.25 for some freezer products and added he had to "blush when I have to charge them (customers) some of these prices."

Stephens said eggs sell for $1.14 a dozen and milk is at $1.54 for a half gallon.

He said the solution was "for the government to buy the Northland boats and equipment and put on the same service they supplied under B.C. Ferries (a provincial government corporation)."

Kitimat Hearing Refused

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Energy Commission has rejected a request from a coalition of conservation groups, including the Scientific Pollution and Environment Control Society (SPEC) for a public hearing into the proposed Kitimat oil port and pipeline.

The commission said, in a letter to SPEC lawyer Garth Evans, that although it has certain regulatory powers regarding the petroleum industry the definition of this term "does not extend to undertakings such as those described in your application."

The commission also argued that it has jurisdiction to hold public hearings only when ordered to do so by the lieutenant-governor in council. It said no such order has been made.

The commission's letter is dated March 2 and was in response to a Feb. 24 application by the coalition for a hearing on Kitimat and the west coast oil transportation question in general.

The coalition released its written legal arguments in support of its application today as requested by the commission.

The coalition argued that the port, pipeline and related facilities come under the commission's definition of petroleum industry and that the commission does have jurisdiction to give direction on the proposal.

Gary Gallon, co-ordinator of the coalition said the province has so far abrogated its responsibility to publicly assess the proposed oil ports and tanker routes on its coast.

Memo to Teachers in Jeans

LANGLEY (CP) — A memo from Langley school district superintendent Charles Cuthbert asking teachers to abandon ultra-casual dress styles has met with a humorous response.

Some women teachers at Aldergrove secondary wore neckties to Wednesday's staff meeting and a zany floral tie has been pinned to a staff bulletin board at H. D. Stafford junior secondary for rent to any unfortunate teacher who forgets formal attire.

Cuthbert says he was surprised during a recent tour of schools in this Fraser Valley district when he found teachers wearing jeans and dressed almost as casually as students.

"I can tell baseball players, ministers, etc., by their dress," Cuthbert said Wednesday. "I should like to be able to identify teachers as professionals by their dress.

"Slacks are preferable to jeans for all of us. It is still appropriate to wear a tie with a dress shirt to a professional task."

Most teachers say they aren't worried about the memo's implications, viewing it as Cuthbert's views rather than those of the school board.

Notre Dame Studies Offer

NELSON (CP) — Dr. Roland Grant, president of Notre Dame University, said Wednesday he expected the university's board of governors to accept an offer by the province to take over the financially-troubled institution.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday the government was willing to assume all assets and liabilities of the privately-owned university, and to take on responsibility for its continued operation, beginning June 1 this year.

Grant said letters were being sent to governors concerning the offer and replies were expected in a few days.

Wiretapping Curbs Asked

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration plans to ask Congress for legislation requiring a federal judge's permission to use wiretapping in investigations of foreign intelligence activities within the United States.

PUBLICATION BAN

COURTENAY (CP) — A ban on publication of evidence at the preliminary hearing into charges of perjury and obstructing justice against Mayor Bill Moore of Courtenay has been imposed in provincial court.

The charges were laid against Moore after he was convicted in June, 1976, of driving with a blood alcohol reading of over .08 per cent.

Cattlemen Pay for Horse Thief

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The British Columbia Cattlemen's Association has paid a reward of $100 to a resident of 105 Mile House for information about a horse theft. Wayne Monical and Robert Boesch were convicted of stealing the horse, were each fined $500 and ordered to work for 80 hours at the Williams Lake Co-Op yards where the horse was stolen.

Spraying Program

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spraying program will begin in June to halt a serious western spruce budworm infestation in 100,000 acres of forest land in the Fraser Canyon between Hope and Boston Bar, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Wednesday.

Waterland told a news conference the program would cost about $1 million and would use the chemicals Orethene and Sevin-4-oil, both of which are registered as forest sprays in Canada.

He said Orthene was used with no environmental damage to control a tussock moth infestation over about 23,000 acres in the Kamloops area last year.

Environmental groups have criticized the use of Orthene.

"Although this (Fraser Canyon area) is only one sixth of the total infested, careful studies show this is the best area in which to commence a control program," Waterland said.

"If allowed to go unchecked it could seriously affect the jobs and general economy of the entire area. Another concern is that the trees weakened by continued budworm attack will be susceptible to invasion by another destructive insect, the Douglas Fir bark beetle."

Police Acquitted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city policeman has been acquitted in county court of a charge of assaulting a fellow constable during an off-duty fight outside a downtown night club.

Constable John Cooper was found not guilty by Judge David H. Campbell of an assault on Const. Hector Maclean June 29 in which Maclean suffered a broken jaw and two fractured ribs.

Dennis Messinezis, 26, was found guilty of assaulting Maclean and was placed on a year's probation.

Messinezis said Maclean struck him during a dispute in a nightclub and that the fight resumed when they encountered each other later in front of the cafe.

Fraser Protection

VANCOUVER (CP) — An organization has been formed to protect the Fraser River from environmentally damaging developments.

The Fraser River Coalition comprises community groups and is headed by Helen Boyce, a former Vancouver alderman, who has recently been working for the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

Members of the coalition include SPEC, the British Columbia Wildlife Federation and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

Jailed for Slaying

VANCOUVER (CP) — Everett Edward Feeley, 39, was sentenced Wednesday to six years in prison after being convicted of manslaughter by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury.

Mr. Justice H. C. Mckay, in sentencing Feeley for the shooting death of Ivan George Hanson, 36, last Aug. 4, said the incident was "one more in a long line of killings directly related to the heroin trade."

Attempted Murder

MACKENZIE (CP) — Felix Dennis, 34, was remanded in custody Wednesday when he appeared in court on an attempted murder charge. Dennis was charged after Sam Dennis was wounded in the leg by a bullet in an incident at Ingenika Point, about 100 miles north of here on Saturday.

Kidnapping Term

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ivan Karastoyanov, 27, of Vancouver, was sentenced Wednesday to 2½ years in jail for kidnapping. Court was told a woman was forced into a vehicle at a hotel parking lot and made to engage in sex without payment.

One-Day Sentence

SURREY (CP) — Ronald Earl Wainwright was fined $1,000 and jailed one day when he appeared in provincial court Wednesday on a charge of abducting his eight-year-old daughter Shelly last Nov. 26. Court was told Wainwright and his wife had separated and custody of the girl had been granted to the mother.

Damages Cancelled

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal Tuesday set aside a damage award of $586,266 against First National Mortgage Ltd. for breach of a contract to lend money.

Grouse Nest Resorts Ltd. won the award in a B.C. Supreme Court suit after First National, a subsidiary of Block Bros. Industries Ltd., did not make a $175,000 advance on a mortgage for development of a 340-acre property owned by Grouse near Sooke.

In allowing the First National appeal, the court held that no damage had been proven and awarded $1.

Lie Detector Role Queried by Gibson

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson failed to find out Wednesday whether the department of human resources supports the use of lie detectors.

Gibson asked Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm "if an individual refuses a job on the grounds that it may infringe on his civil rights will he be refused social assistance?"

Vander Zalm took the question as notice, meaning that he'll think about it and come back with the answer at a future sitting.

Gibson's question was spurred by a March 2 letter from the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, to Vander Zalm, informing the minister of an incident in Vancouver. A man refused to take a job because he had to take company polygraph tests, and then was cut off social assistance because he wouldn't accept the job.

James Dybikowski, vice-president of the civil liberties group, told Vander Zalm that Surrey resident Robert Pritchard had been sent by the Provincial Rehabilitation Employment Program for a job interview at Executive Security Services Ltd.

Pritchard landed the job, wrote Dybikowski, but only after he'd signed a waiver allowing the company to subject him to polygraph tests at its discretion and to fire him if he ever told a lie. Pritchard later reconsidered his position and refused the job because he felt the lie detector tests an infringement of his civil rights.

He was then disqualified from social assistance.

Dybikowski said his associatinn backs Pritchard fully because he was "being asked to sign an almost blank cheque (in the waiver) which might have grave consequences not only for the job with Executive Securities, but also for his future."

"We find it very disturbing that individuals are being sent by the department of social welfare for jobs which are not protected by adequate safeguards to their civil rights and that social assistance is being withheld from them if they shoud refuse to accept these jobs."

Job Finder Figures Padded

Statistics tabled in the legislature Wednesday show more than one-fifth of the jobs attributed to the provincial government's job-finding program were found by Canada Manpower.

The statistics, tabled by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, show that of the 4,855 jobs found in the first seven and a half months of the program's existence last year, a total of 1,061 were found through Manpower.

Another 332 were jobs in which the employer was the B.C. government and of those, 304 were in the highways ministry.

It was revealed earlier this session that several offices in the highways ministry operated for weeks on the mistaken impression that they were not allowed to hire anyone except those referred by the program. The practice has been ended.

Program co-ordinator Ron Stew had set a goal of 12,000 jobs.

Other statistics tabled by Vander Zalm showed a total of 163 persons were charged with welfare fraud in the province last year, well down from the high of 1972 when 306 charges were laid.

The statistics show the ministry spent $87,433 on its welfare fraud investigation program in the first seven and a half months of its operation.

No breakdown was available for the number of charges laid in 1976 after the fraud squad began operations but the total number of charges was nine more than for 1975 when no such squad was operational.

The 163 fraud charges involved $148,623 and 80 of the charges have resulted in convictions.

Gov't Sells Panarctic

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal government has formally sold all of its stock in Panarctic Oils Ltd. of Calgary to PetroCanada for $80-million.

The transfer of the Panarctic shares to the federal petroleum company includes the capital stock purchase of $1.87-million by the government under Panarctic's eighth expansion agreement.

PetroCanada is paying for the Panarctic stock acquisition by giving the government 16 common shares, each worth $5-million.

How Your Garden Grows

Proper lawn care

From early spring until fall, your lawn needs continuous care if it is to remain green and healthy–

Spring renovation. Most lawns become compacted over the winter months, and the grass suffers from a lack of aeration. This can be remedied by punching holes in the turf with an aerator or digging fork. Next, rake to remove aerator plugs and thatch (accumulated clippings, etc.). Then, mow the lawn to improve its ragged appearance and give grass an even start.

Spring is also the time for Green Valley Dolomite Lime. Apply at the rate of 4 lbs. per 100 square feet and water in. After two weeks, apply Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8 at 1 lb. per 100 square feet and water thoroughly. In another three weeks, your lawn will be thick and healthy.

If your lawn is uneven, you may apply a top dressing of screened compost or a 50-50 mix of peat and sand. However, this is not recommended unless the lawn needs levelling. Where top dressing is over one inch deep, scratch in a little Penn-High Lawn Seed.

During the growing season. Proper watering is essential for a healthy lawn. A good soaking once a week during dry weather is recommended, ideally on a cloudy or cool day to avoid excessive evaporation. Do not sprinkle lightly, as this encourages shallow rooting. Fertilizing is also important. Three applications of Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8–in April, July and September–will maintain healthy, thick turf. If your lawn is growing vigorously, be sure to mow often–twice a week if necessary. If using a reel type mower, remove cuttings. With a rotary mower, cuttings may be left on lawn.

Fall care. To bring your lawn through the winter in the best possible condition, apply Green Valley Winter & Spring Lawn Food 3-15-6 at the rate of 2 lbs. per 100 square feet. October is the month for this final step.

MLAs Jocular as Break Starts

Tory leader Scott Wallace asked why it was necessary for the public works crews to close the women's washrooms on the second and third floors of the Legislative Buildings "at the same time and only on the opposition side of the buildings."

Wallace suggested the "health, welfare, comfort and productivity" of the female staff were affected by the closure.

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser promised to lookfinto it immediately.

But Wallace also wanted an assurance from Fraser that he would look into the use of "out-of-order" signs on the washrooms in question.

"This practice of merely locking the door causes some distress," Wallace said.

Fraser promised to investigate that as well, and some unidentified MLA suggested that Wallace would "flush out the answer."

The lighter vein of the normally-explosive question period was continued by NDP house leader Bill King who wanted an assurance from Health Minister Bob McClelland that during the Easter break he would "commit substantial medical resources to seeking a cure for the acute and chronic amnesia suffered by the minister of economic development (Don Phillips).

(The most frequent phrase used by Phillips in his testimony before the judicial inquiry into the Grizzly Valley affair was, "I can't recall" and since then he has had to put up with numerous opposition barbs on the extent of his memory.)

But McClelland had an answer ready: "I told the minister to take two aspirins and call me in the morning."

The scrutiny of Phillips' memory had come up earlier in the day too, but this time, it was Opposition leader Dave Barrett who was, for a change, on the receiving end.

"It's not very often I get to introduce visitors from the great constituency of South Peace River ..." began Phillips.

"It's the opposite in yours," came back Premier Bill Bennett before the laughter had died, "they can't remember your name."

Greenbelt Bill 'Sneaky' Tactic

The government's proposed greenbelt legislation is poorly prepared and designed to subvert the Agricultural Land Commission, Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) said Wednesday.

Skelly told the legislature during debate on the Greenbelt Act that the bill doesn't say what greenbelt land is, other than it is anything designated by the minister to be greenbelt.

The NDP environment critic said the bill would allow the cabinet to designate land frozen in the Agricultural Land Reserve to be greenbelt, and then, because of the open definition, the government could allow the land to be developed.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said in an interview later that the NDP was distorting the bill. The definition was open because "it offers unlimited opportunities to protect land."

He said the government has no intention to subvert the land commission. The cabinet already has powers to override the commission if it wants to.

Skelly called the bill "a sneaky piece of legislation" drafted by the cabinet with no consultation from the experts in the environment ministry.

Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) said the bill "is wholly political in creation, design and execution," and the government is attempting to pull the wool over the public's eyes.

Societies Rules Tightened

Large societies in B.C. will become more accountable to the government under legislation introduced Wednesday by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

The Societies Act, replacing a bill unchanged for 29 years, divides B.C.'s various societies into two groups — reporting and non-reporting.

Mair said that reporting societies will be, "subject to more stringent rules on public disclosure and filings at the registrar of companies office."

The minister said it will be mandatory to be a reporting society in the cases of, "orphanages, boarding homes for minors, ownership management or operation of a hospital, ownership or management of a social club, or any society created for the purpose of paying benefits or rendering services to its members."

Mair stressed that B.C.'s smaller neighborhood-style societies will not be affected.

"Take BCAA (B.C. Automobile Association)," he added, "we think anybody who gets that big ... ought to have some accountability, on the other hand the ladies' society of Kamloops, or whatever, you want to call it, shouldn't."

Cowichan Bylaw Test

NORTH COWICHAN — A test of North Cowichan's recently-adopted bylaw affecting the Cowichan Bay estuary land will go before B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria today.

Bert Rodenbush and Norman Rooke of Island Shake and Shingle Ltd. have asked the court to quash the bylaw.

The estuary land has been controversial for some time with one faction fearing further industrial encroachment, and another wanting more industry to ease unemployment.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan will preside.

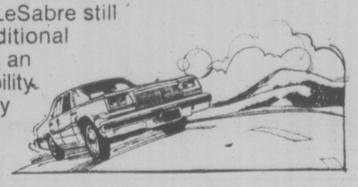
The Look of Success.
Buick's redefined, full-size LeSabre.

LeSabre Custom 4-Door Sedan

More than new sheet metal. Buick LeSabre for 1977 exhibits a new trimness of line. Efficient use of space, inside and out. It's a full-size car you'llenjoy driving.

Agile in traffic. LeSabre still delivers Buick's traditional comfort, but there's an emphasis on driveability. And maneuverability in city traffic. The new LeSabre is designed to be responsive to the wheel. Easy to turn. And to park.



It features four-wheel, coil-spring suspension. Forward-mounted steering gear linkage. And four-link rear suspension.

Room. And more of it. LeSabre provides all this Buick engineering know-how without asking you to give up one of the big benefits of a full-size car. Room.

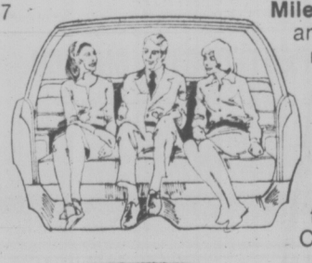
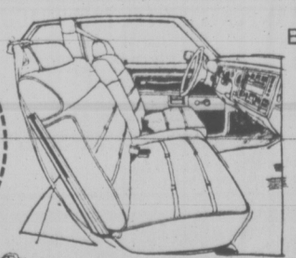
Trunk space? That's increased, too. The new LeSabre Sedan, for instance, has a trunk with over 25% more space than the trunk of the '76 Sedan. How's that for improvement?





Miles per gallon? The bottom line in any discussion of efficiency is gas mileage. And here, LeSabre has more pleasant surprises.

With the available 301 CID, 2-barrel V8, LeSabre is rated at 20 miles per gallon in city tests, 27 in highway tests. Automatic transmission, of course. These figures are based on Transport Canada approved test methods.*

In redefining the full-size LeSabre, Buick gave prime time to improving operating efficiency. Time well spent.

The Look of Success. LeSabre, redefined, looks like the success it is. In style, room and comfort, in ride and performance, it's a full-size car—a full size Buick!—you'll be proud of.

And it gives you the Buick standard of luxury. Thick, comfortable seating. Plush expanses of cut-pile carpeting. Intelligently-arranged, convenient instrumentation.

See your Buick dealer. And take a test drive you'll really enjoy—in a new Buick LeSabre.

*Gas mileage ratings are estimates. The mileage you get will vary, depending on the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition, and optional equipment.

Mrs. Lizette Hall reminisced recently in her Saanich home about the "good life" when she was a young girl near Fort St. James.

The daughter of Louis Billie Prince, hereditary chief of the Necoslie Indians, she remembered her father paddling along his trapliness in the fall.

"I can see the leaves falling on his paddle," she said. "I can see him clearing a place for our tent and building a big fire."

"Then we'd go out in the canoe again to get game for our meal. My mother would have a big kettle on the fire waiting for the mallard or goose he'd bring back. Then she'd cook it for supper. She always had a lot of faith in my father's ability to bring back food and he never failed."

That was the good life, Mrs. Hall said. "No traffic. No liquor. Things have changed a lot."

Some of her stories of her girlhood are included in books she has helped translate into the Central Carrier language.

Right now she is correcting a translation of the book of Acts. She has also worked on translations of Matthew, stories of Joseph and textbooks for use in schools in the Fort St. James area.

She works with two missionary families of translators based there — Dave and Kay Wilkinson and Dick and Shirley Walker.

The Walkers and Wilkinsons, Americans who came to British Columbia as Wycliffe Bible translators, are working to establish a combination chapel and Carrier language for both functions but the Carcentre.

They have used their homes rier work has made present quarters inadequate.

Wilkinson told Mrs. Hall recently that 42 Carrier graduates held certificates from the provincial College of New Caledonia as teaching and curriculum specialists.

Ten of these graduates teach in federal, public and private schools and 12 others are engaged in four curriculum projects to produce textbooks for classroom use.

The Wilkinsons are planning to sell their home to help pay for a larger property near the Carrier villages of Tachie and Pinchi where they hope to develop the language centre and chapel.

They also plan to build cabins to house native people who come from distant villages for their program. Their project is financed mainly by voluntary donations. They also need skilled help in their construction program.

Mrs. Hall's family has been involved with Carrier translations since the turn of the century when her father helped Rev. Morice Adrian, a Roman Catholic priest, compile the first dictionary.

Mrs. Hall with Carrier translation

Those were the days when all generations of a native family lived in communal houses in the winter. The roof was built of saplings, moss and bark stretched over a large circular dugout.

If there were windows, they were of scraped deer hide. In the summer the families lived in rude shelters or under skin tents.

Times have changed now. The chiefs do not inherit the position. They are elected.

Mrs. Hall doesn't like some of the changes but she believes that bringing the gospel to her people in their language will counteract evils such as excessive liquor.

She doesn't attend any particular church but she says that if people "just go by the Bible" they will find their way.

Minister emeritus

Church honors McLean

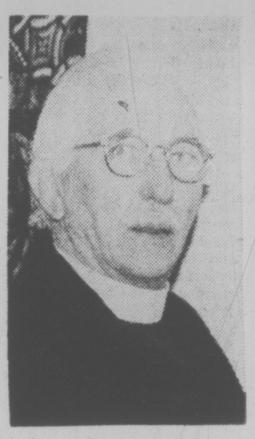
Very Rev. Dr. J. L. W. McLean was made minister emeritus of his church, St. Andrew's Presbyterian, at a Sunday morning service last month.

Extending the honor, Rev. Bruce Molloy, minister of the church, described the position of minister emeritus as essentially one of affection. It was, he said, a way of honoring a minister who had served with great distinction over a period of 34 years.

McLean, a former Victoria alderman, was minister of St. Andrew's from 1938 until 1972. In 1954-55, he was moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada.

From 1972 to 1975, he worked for his church's Board of World Missions at Gale Presbyterian Church in Elmira, Ont.

The McLeans returned to Victoria to live in the fall of 1975.



McLean

Last year, a plaque was unveiled in St. Andrew's to honor McLean on his retirement from active ministry in July, 1975.

Over the years he has held many posts in civic and community life. He was chaplain for the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) and president of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society.

Dawson with marquetry landscape

This retired cleric has plenty to do

He's chairman of the pelagonium group of the Victoria Horticultural Society, likes fine cabinet work and has a huge landscape of Mt. Rundle reflected in a lake near Banff, Alta., to prove his skill in marquetty.

The landscape, now displayed in his recreation room, took him six years to make — "I didn't work on it all the time" — of mahogany, rosewood, teak, oak, ash, birch, spruce and fir.

The Saskatchewan-born clergyman, who will be 75 this year, came to Victoria 10 years ago with his wife, Josephine, on retirement from St. Patrick's Anglican Church in Winnipeg. Previously he had served at St. Mary's Charleswood, in a suburb of Winnipeg.

Perspectives

Christians should not feel comfortable on Good Friday, for it is, whatever else it may be, a day of judgment on their evasions and failures in faith.

Archbishop Nathan Solderblom, a Swedish theologian and leader in the ecumenical movement in its early days, delineated the tragedy of Good Friday in these words: "The most awful thing in the death of Jesus is that it was brought about by men who were following, or believed themselves to be following, good and honorable reasons for their action.

"Men of various classes, the guardians of religion and public morals and of the order of society itself, united to crucify Jesus." Then he said to his fellow Christians, "They were men like you and me. That is why we keep Good Friday."

Jesus was not sent to the Cross by exceptionally wicked men, but by representatives of the best that the world at that time had to offer.

Pontius Pilate was a senior official in the strongest, most efficient, most just, political organization that the world had seen. Both judged Jesus to be a challenging and inconvenient troublemaker, and, in uncharacteristic compromises of principle, joined to have him put to death.

Here I must interject a comment on a crude and cruel prevision of Christianity, the blaming of the Jews for the crucifixion and assuming, by weird logic, that Jews of later centuries must somehow take that blame. This line of thought has at times in Christian history made Good Friday almost a festival of anti-Semitism.

If Christians wish to see representatives of the attitudes and prejudices which crucified Jesus they should look not at their Jewish neighbors but in their own mirrors.

It is one of the terrible ironies of history that the attitudes — moral compromise for the sake of convenience, the seeking of scapegoats, recourse to needless violence, to avoid having to face moral issues — which killed Jesus are attitudes which through the years have stoked the fires of anti-Semitism.

The history of anti-Semitism shows that much of it came from nominal Christians trying to compensate for their own feelings of guilt, guilt over their failures to be loyal to that for which Jesus lived and died.

Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the young German theologian who toward the end of the Second World War was hanged by the Gestapo because of his active opposition to Nazism, summed up the issue, when, writing for his fellow Christians, he said, "The cross is God's truth about us."

It is as Christians accept Good Friday as judgment on their evasions and failures in faith that they prepare themselves for receiving the assurance and the hope and the redemption which are in Easter.

JESUS CHRIST
THE LAMB OF GOD
"Christ Our Passover is Sacrificed For Us," 1 Cor. 5:7. The New Testament record informs us, speaking of Gods dealings with Israel in the Old Testament Times, that, "These Things Happened Unto Them (Israel) For Examples (or types)," 1 Cor. 10:11. Types, that is pictures illustrating grander realities. Likewise we are told of Ordinances of the Jewish Law being as Shadows, Col. 2:17. Heb. 10:1, Hence Images of a Grander Reality.
And it is just so with the Jewish Passover — It in fact illustrates in miniature a general overview of God's "Plan of the Ages," Eph. 3:11, Rotherham Trans. The Lamb Pictures. Jesus, Jn. 2:29. The First Born Pictures The Followers of Jesus, Heb. 12:23, James 1:18. Who Are Passed Over During This Christian Age. And Who Shall with Jesus, Bring Deliverance to the World of Mankind, pictured by the Families of Israel in the Passover.
Christ's followers are part of Abrahams Seed and Heirs of the Promise to Abraham. Gal. 3:29, and The Promise is "In Thee Shall All Nations be Blessed," Gal. 3:8.
We invite to consider more fully an outline of Gods "Plan of the Ages." Send for your free copy of The Divine Plan of The Ages.

Sadat Rejects Scheme For Israeli Defences

WASHINGTON (WP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, after lengthy talks with President Carter, Wednesday rejected Carter's suggestion that Israel be permitted to maintain defence lines beyond its sovereign borders in a Middle East peace agreement.

"We have discussed this," Sadat told a news conference on the final day of his Washington visit. "(But) sovereignty is indivisible, and we can't have two borders. There is always one border for any country."

While acknowledging differences with Carter on this and other issues, Sadat displayed optimism that a new Geneva conference on Arab-Israeli peace will be convened within 1977.

Saying he and Carter have agreed "not to waste time," the Egyptian leader called for the United States to begin preparations for the substantive negotiations at Geneva.

Washington sources said Sadat has become concerned that an ill-prepared Geneva conference might break down quickly after being convened, deflating the hopes of moderate Arab leaders and their constituencies and thus encouraging new wars and internal upheavals.

He said a U.S. task force headed by Secretary of State Cyrus T. Vance would be the best means to make preparations for Geneva and hinted that such a group is already planned.

The first of a succession of Arab leaders scheduled to visit Carter, Sadat is considered to be among the most flexible.

He is also the one most personally committed to a settlement, with his prestige and perhaps his continued rule riding on early progress toward peace.

Sadat's reactions to the new U.S. President and his ideas have been keenly awaited here and in the Middle East.

Publicly he praised Carter Wednesday as "a very dear friend" in whom he has "full confidence."

Sadat, however, flew home to Cairo without a U.S. agreement for arms purchases he sought or a commitment to his proposal for a Palestinian state.

Both offers were left wide open.

U.S. officials were unable to predict how Carter will react to President Sadat's desire for U.S. F-5E and F-5F fighter aircraft and other weapons.

There appeared to be no problem for a continuation of U.S. economic aid to Egypt, now about $900 million a year.

A White House statement Wednesday said he was "assured of continued U.S. economic support, subject to congressional approval." That approval does not seem to be in doubt.

Native Increase

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Delegates to a seminar have been told by 1985 the Indian and Metis population of Winnipeg will increase to 100,000 from a current 40,000. According to projected growth rates there will be 60,000 treaty Indians and 40,000 Metis in the city because of a lack of jobs and facilities in the remote northern communities.

ARSON HEARING APRIL 13

Two 16-year-olds charged with arson in connection with last Friday's fire at British Upholstery Ltd., 546 Herald, pleaded not guilty Wednesday in Victoria family court.

They were released on their own recognizance and ordered to return April 13 to set a trial date.

The fire, spotted at 5:30 a.m. by a passing policeman, caused about $25,000 damage, about $15,000 to the building and $10,000 to the furniture inside.

The two, whose names cannot be published because they are juveniles, were among four persons charged Wednesday in the same court with four breakings and enterings and one of the 16-year-olds pleaded guilty to one count, receiving a sentence of 50 hours community service work.

On the break-in charges, the youths were also released on their own recognizance to return April 13 to set a trial date.

Cost Curbs Seen Key To Profits

VANCOUVER (CP) — The two senior executives of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. say cost control and not price increases hold the key to improved profits in the future.

C. Calvert Knudsen, president of the giant forest products company, and chairman J. Ernest Richardson said in the company's annual report released Wednesday that the emphasis must be on controlling costs of the company is to remain competitive in the international marketplace.

They said almost 80 per cent of the total sales are in the form of commodity products in world markets, where the company must meet the price competiton of other large North American producers having equal or better forest resources and lower costs.

"To ensure the company's ability to compete and to grow and expand it must bring earnings up to levels which will enable it to raise, at reasonable cost, the new capital it needs for future expansion and improvements of its facilities world-wide," they said.

The company recently announced a $600-million, five-year capital spending program for modernizing its production facilities, and also decided to concentrate its activities in the traditional areas of logging, forest management, wood products, pulp, paper and packaging.

Knudsen and Richardson said in adopting the program, the company was acting on the basis of clear indications that the business climate in the province would continue to improve and that rational policies would be followed regarding timber rights, logging guidelines, environmenntal restraints, labor relations and taxation.

The company earlier reported profits of $22.8 million on sales of 1.5 billion in 1976, compared with a loss of $18.9 million on sales of $1.3 billion the previous year.

Danger in Fairy Tale Sex Roles

MINNEAPOLIS — The child who likes the story Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater may grow up to be a sadist and the girl who likes the tale of Little Red Riding Hood may be easy to seduce when she grows up.

And the girl who likes the Old Woman in the Shoe may have so many children she doesn't know what to do.

Such are the hazards of sex stereotyping hidden in fairy tales, nursery rhymes and children's television shows, according to Sue Hendrix and Linda Jones, staff members of the University of Minnesota College of Education.

They said fairy tales, once considered innocent, contain hidden messages — sex stereotypes that are harmful to youngsters.

Adults show the effects of stereotypes for years, they said, like the Cinderellas waiting for princes and Red Riding Hoods who are easy to seduce.

"Those who liked the little old woman who lived in a shoe may already have more children than they know what to do with," they said.

People who identify only with the "proper traits" of their own sex tend to score lower in analytic thinking, creativity and general intelligence, they added.

They quoted the story of "Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater. Had a wife and couldn't keep her. Put her in a pumpkin shell and there he kept her very well.

"Parents who don't want their daughters to grow up in pumpkin shells or their sons to plan on using them as keeping places for future wives had better look twice at what their pre-schoolers are learning from fairy tales and television shows," the educators said.

The Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater fanciers, they said, could mistreat or abuse their wives if they find it difficult to "keep them" in their place, the experts have said.

Hendrix and Jones listed examples of stereotypes that can cause problems:

—"The invisibile girl." Girls aren't shown nearly as often as boys in children's stories.

—"The fragile flower. Many fairy tale heroines wait in their best clothes for a prince or husband. They are sometimes stupid or silly to boot. Even the Bionic Woman usually needs help from her male supervisor."

Bi-Bi's Spicer Goes to CBC

TORONTO — Keith Spicer will join the CBC television network after his term as commissioner of official languages ends in July, CBC announced Wednesday.

Peter Herrndorf, head of CBC-TV current affairs, said in a statement that Spicer 43, will serve as host of a weekly current affairs program on CBUT Vancouver and as a regular contributor on 90 Minutes Live. Spicer also will act as program consultant on a new network series named Quarterly Report and on a multi-part documentary series on Quebec next season.

OTTAWA — Former Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said Wednesday that his wife Mary, has returned home from hospital after spending three months recovering from cancer surgery. Mrs. Stanfield has been a patient in the Ottawa Civic Hospital. Stanfield described his wife as "naturally weak, but I think she's going to be okay."

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Former child star Jackie Coogan has been cleared of petty theft charges. The 62-year-old actor was arrested last month for allegedly taking $1.12 worth of small screws from a hardware store. Coogan said he made a "horrible mistake," dropping the screws in his pocket as he shopped for other items and forgetting about them when he paid his bill. The district attorney's office dropped the charges Wednesday because the store management refused to press charges.

BRISTOL, England — Speed-demon Mary Victor Bruce, 81, hadn't flown a plane for 37 years. But propped up by three cushions, she got back in the groove Wednesday with an aerial loop-the-loop. "It was super. It made me feel 50 years younger," declared Mrs. Bruce, a nobleman's daughter who made headlines as a stunt flier and race driver in the 1930s. The 20-minute spin in a Chipmunk light plane was so much fun that Mrs. Bruce declared, "I am thinking of buying a little plane and taking my pilot's licence again."

MOSCOW — Sofia Misilevich died and came to life again 24 times, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Wednesday. It said the causes of her deaths and revival are still a mystery. Tass said the 50-year-old woman simply died without warning one day, then came to life again 24 times in a phenomenon the doctors called "electrical instability of the heart." Tass said Miss Misilevich is now alive and back at work as an assistant in a shop.

MONEY WASN'T ANSWER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former Brinks guard who said he took more than $400,000 because "I thought it would solve my problems and it didn't" was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in prison.

Richard Charles Rees, 27, had pleaded guilty March 2 to a charge of bank larceny and to a charge of transporting stolen money from California to Texas.

He was sentenced to the maximum 10 years on each count, to run concurrently.

Rees vanished Feb. 11, 1976, after asking his armored truck driver to stop at a restaurant in suburban San Mateo so he could deliver a box of champagne to a girl. He was captured Jan. 13 by the FBI in a small New Mexico village southeast of Sante Fe.

Rees said he spent most of the loot on gambling and women in Texas.

Fiedler Presence Stirs Symphony to Heights

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The authoritative baton and presence of Boston's Arthur Fiedler on the podium for the first of two du Maurier Pops concerts Wednesday stirred Victoria Symphony Orchestra to a level of vitality, precision and discipline much above its general accomplishment this season.

The snowy-haired octogenarian conductor, familiar to millions through his televised Boston Pops performances, projects a no-fuss, no-nonsense sharply focused image from the moment he steps on stage.

It's all very much to the point, like his short speech in accepting his 38ist honorary fire chief status and golden helmet from Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons: "I am very honored to be made an honorary fire chief in this fine city you have. I love it very much."

Fiedler acknowledges as his second preoccupation after music, a passionate interest in firefighting services; an interest to which he brings a characteristic positivism.

The Royal Theatre was virtually filled to capacity and the audience was swept along on a sparkling melodious tide that begun with a high-stepping military beat — Planquette's Le Regiment de Sambre et Meuse — and ended with the rousing up-tempo Love Will Keep Us Together which brought the audience to its feet in a prolonged standing ovation.

In between there was the colorful Overture to Lalo's Le Roi d'Ys, Offenbach's Suite from Gaite Parienne, Merry Widow waltzes and selections from No, No, Nanette, and Grieg's Piano Concerto.

It's a lovable, singable program that will be repeated tonight to what will almost certainly be another sell-out.

For habitual symphony-goers Wednesday's concert was not without its problems and disappointments, however. The orchestra came up to Fiedler's demands with regard to attack, discipline and energy and special mention should be made of an extended solo cello passage in the Lalo, very well performed by principal Larry Skaggs.

But there were difficulties at times in the wind section that included faulty intonation and episodes of imbalance, some of the faults being particularly noticeable in the concerto.

The Grieg was the biggest disappointment of the evening. Piano soloist Anne-Marie Levine, for one thing established a much slower tempo than is customary. Chestnut though it is, the Grieg, in its best presentation, has a beauty of theme, an onrushing pulse-stirring quality to affect all but the most blase lisfener.

Night Beach Ban Eyed in Saanich

Saanich council will consider banning access to municipal beaches between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m. when it meets April 18.

The council's parks and recreation committee has recommended municipal solicitor Doug Patterson investigate the "usefulness" of a bylaw.

The committee made the recommendation after being told by Mrs. Christine Thom, 4061 Vantreight Drive, that she's willing to pay for a sign at Margaret Beach, stating beach fires and parties are not permitted.

She told the aldermen she's reluctant to call the police "every time I am kept from sleeping by drunken yelling and primal screaming."

Ald. Mary Casilio said it's time area residents are given some protection and Ald. Robert Cameron quipped, "Erect a sign 'Make Love, Not Noise'."

He conceded there is a problem but is concerned that enforcement of the bylaw will be left to the discretion of police.

"If we have a bylaw it should be enforced. There should be no half measures," he said.

Extra Sailings

The B.C. Ferries added extra sailings between Nanaimo's Departure Bay and Horseshoe Bay on tthe Mainland today and Monday to handle holiday traffic.

The two extra sailings from Nanaimo are at 4:15 and 8:45 p.m. while the ones from Horseshoe Bay leave at 6:30 and 11 p.m.

Public Notice

Ottawa,

COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY INTO THE NATIONAL BROADCASTING SERVICE

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission has determined that it is in the public interest to hold an inquiry into the manner in which the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is fulfilling its mandate, particularly with respect to public affairs, news and information programming.

The Commission has as a consequence established a Committee of Inquiry into the National Broadcasting Service. The Committee will be presided over by Harry J. Boyle, Chairman of the C.R.T.C. The Chairman will call on the part-time members of the Commission and a number of other individual Canadians to assist him in the inquiry.

In embarking on this inquiry, the Commission considers itself duty-bound to safeguard three principles which lie at the heart of the Canadian broadcasting tradition and indeed of broadcasting in a free society.

The first is the principle of freedom of expression, restricted only by specific legal requirements and prohibitions.

Second, professional ethics and competence are paramount. Discrimination by reason of race, national origin, colour, religion, sex, or political views has no place in broadcasting.

And thirdly, the Commission reaffirms its commitment to the principle of public broadcasting in Canada.

The Committee of Inquiry will report periodically to the Commission, and will be asked to submit its final report to the Commission before July 1st, 1977. The inquiry is being undertaken pursuant to the Commission's mandate under s.15 of the Broadcasting Act, "to regulate and supervise all aspects of the Canadian broadcasting system with a view to implementing the broadcasting policy enunciated in section 3 of the Act."

Section 3 reads as follows:

"3. It is hereby declared that

(a) broadcasting undertakings in Canada make use of radio frequencies that are public property and such undertakings constitute a single system, herein referred to as the Canadian broadcasting system, comprising public and private elements;

(b) the Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to safeguard, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada;

(c) all persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression and the right of persons to receive programs, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations, is unquestioned;

(d) the programming provided by the Canadian broadcasting system should be varied and comprehensive and should provide reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expression of differing views on matters of public concern, and the programming provided by each broadcaster should be of high standard, using predominantly Canadian creative and other resources;

(e) all Canadians are entitled to broadcasting service in English and French as public funds become available;

(f) there should be provided, through a corporation established by Parliament for the purpose, a national broadcasting service that is predominantly Canadian in content and character;

(g) the national broadcasting service should

(i) be a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion,

(ii) be extended to all parts of Canada, as public funds become available,

(iii) be in English and French, serving the special needs of geographic regions, and actively contributing to the flow and exchange of cultural and regional information and entertainment, and

(iv) contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity;

(h) where any conflict arises between the objectives of the national broadcasting service and the interests of the private element of the Canadian broadcasting system, it shall be resolved in the public interest but paramount consideration shall be given to the objectives of the national broadcasting service;

(i) facilities should be provided within the Canadian broadcasting system for educational broadcasting; and

(j) the regulation and supervision of the Canadian broadcasting system should be flexible and readily adaptable to scientific and technical advances;

and that the objectives of the broadcasting policy for Canada enunciated in this section can best be achieved by providing for the regulation and supervision of the Canadian broadcasting system by a single independent public authority."

The Broadcasting Policy for Canada represents the goals and values towards which the national broadcasting service must strive.

In this context, and in view of the time constraints, the Commission has determined that the Committee's mandate should be as follows:

1. The Committee will examine and take into consideration all representations from the public submitted in response to this Announcement. This appeal to the public is based on the fact that the national broadcasting service in its entirety is owned and maintained by the people of Canada;
2. The Committee will conduct interviews with members of the CBC and of the public in order to gain a fuller understanding of how information and other programming is perceived by them, and actually carried out.
3. The Committee will undertake research on specific matters related to programming and scheduling, as well as on the historical relationship between the French language and English language services of the CBC;
4. The Committee may selectively analyze particular programmes.

The public is hereby invited to submit in writing information and comment relevant to a proper assessment of the manner in which the CBC carries out its mandate. Any representations about specific programmes that the public may wish to bring to the Committee's attention should be as factual as possible. The Committee would appreciate receiving letters by April 25, 1977, and they should be sent to the undersigned at 100 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N2.

Duo Pianist Recital At Art Gallery Tonight

A recital of works for two pianos centred in Les Six, a group of six French composers who for a short time in the 1920s came under the spell of composer Erik Satie and writer-philosopher Jean Cocteau, will be presented at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria tonight at 8.

The duo pianists are Allen Reiser, a teacher at the Victoria Conservatory of Music which is presenting this concert in conjunction with the Gallery.

A student of Robin Wood and also working with Bela Siki at the University of Washington, Reiser has as his partner in this concert Walter Prossnitz, well known for many performances throughout the city.

The composers are Auric, Duhy, Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc and Taillefere who during their group activity strove to return to French music a clarity and simplicity they considered lost.

Included in the program will be Scaramouche by Milhaud and Novelettes by Poulenc. Gallery doors open at 7 and there is a 50-cent admission charge for non-gallery members.

VICI POLLING OPENS

In Hollywood, only members of the Academy of Motion Pictures, Arts and Sciences can cast ballots for Oscar winners, but in Victoria the public is invited to vote in the 1977 Vici awards.

Local theatre clubs have submitted nominations in 23 categories. These names are on a ballot which can be picked up at the McPherson Playhouse, Eaton's ticket centre and numerous community centres.

The public has until April 20 to vote. The results will be kept secret until the Vici Awards night May 7 at the Cedar Hill Community Centre.

Tickets for the awards night are $5 advance and $6 at the door. Advance sales start April 15 at the Cedar Hill Community Centre and the Hillside Mall ticket office.

Engineer Raps Sewer Plan

Speaking at a meeting of the Capital district's public works committee, he said a brief made public last month by Charles Keenan on sewage disposal at McMicking Point was "a rather irresponsible outblast" which eroded the integrity of the engineering profession.

Howard said it appeared to stem from a personal vendetta between Keenan and the region's engineering consultants.

In a lengthy "discourse" which he sent to the newspapers, Keenan said he was exasperated by the stupidity taking place respecting the sewage outfall at McMicking Point. No sewage pumping station is needed, simply an extension of the present McMicking outfall, he said.

Keenan, who lives at 192 Beach Drive, is a retired engineer, formerly a senior partner in Ker Priestman Associates, consultants to the regional board.

He is also former director pollution control board sets provincial government. The pollution cntrol brrd sets standards in such matters as ocean disposal of sewage.

Howard told the committee Wednesday that Keenan's proposal to simply extend the McMicking outfall would violate minimum standards set when Keenan himself was pollution control director.

Float tests show sewage from an extended out fall would end up on the golf course beach on flood tides and in McNeil Bay on Ebb tides, Howard said.

An extended outfall would have sewage discharged at a maximum depth of 50 feet in Enterprise Channel when guidelines call a minimum depth of 100 feet.

And Keenan's proposal to extend the outfall to 600 feet in fact would have the pipe crossing the channel at its deepest and ending in shallower water as the bottom rose to Trial Island, said Howard.

When completed it will see some sewage from all three municipalities piped to Clover Point and discharged to sea through a long outfall.

The committee later voted 4-2 to recommend the station be built at 495 Beach Drive on the shore of Shaol Bay. The full regional board will consider that recommendation next Wednesday.

Counterfeit U.S. $20s

Police warned Wednesday that counterfeit U.S. $20 bills of excellent quality are circulating in the Vancouver area and the Okanagan Valley.

The bills carry a serial number beginning with L800 and ending with C, police said.

There is no indication the bills are being passed in Greater Victoria but a Victoria police fraud squad spokesman said local businessmen will be warned.

Merchants Split Down Middle On Casino Bid

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria merchants are split evenly on the value of a gambling casino to the local economy.

Of 100 who answered the Victoria Chamber of Commerce questionnaire, 40 favored a casino, 40 were against and 20 said they couldn't decide until they had more information.

Victoria chamber president Alan Emery set up the questionnaire in response to suggestions from some Victoria businessmen that a casino would be a tourist attraction.

Emery said a casino that is clean and well-managed like the one in Monte Carlo could be an asset to the city but the chamber is not taking a stand on the question. Results of the survey will be forwarded to city council for action.

Chamber manager Brian Small today said there are indications that another 50 to 100 merchants may respond to the questionnaire before final results are tabulated.

On one questionnaire, a Victoria merchant said the city is missing out on millions of dollars because it does not have a casino.

There were few comments on the negative questionnaires.

One man said he is against casinos because "they would add to Victoria's crime problem."

One man who strongly favored casinos said all of Salt Spring Island should be converted to a miniature Las Vegas.

FIVE YEARS FOR TRAFFICKER

A 30-year-old Nanaimo fisherman was sentenced to five years in prison Wednesday and had his boat confiscated by the Crown for trafficking in marijuana.

Ronald Richard Larsen pleaded guilty to the charge after RCMP arrested him last June 25 when he landed at Maple Bay, near Duncan, with 660 pounds of marijuana transported from the Olympic Peninsula.

The marijuana had a street value of more than $200,000.

Judge Montague Drake brought down the sentence in Courtenay after deciding it was more convenient to hear the case there than in Nanaimo today, as had been originally planned.

4-Month Billing For City Water?

Victoria residents will receive their water bills every four months instead of every two months, if a finance committee recommendation is accepted by city council.

The committee was told today that the change would mean an average water bill of around $17. The savings to the city, including the salary of one meter reader, postage, transportation and billing supplies, would be around $18,350.

The only committee member to express some doubts about the proposal was Ald. Larry Ryan, who said householders on lower incomes would be hit by a "substantial bill" every four months.

"From the city's point of view we do save some money . . . but I don't see the saving as all that significant in the total picture," he said.

Mayor Mike Young, however, said he did not think anyone would really object to the longer billing period.

Listen to Volga's Varo-o-o-m

Russia's Sports Car Of the Sea

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The Soviet Union has invaded local waters with a strange looking craft that can whip up to 30 knots in seconds.

Here to stay, she's the first of the fleet of Volga-70 29-foot hydrofoils to be brought here by Jeremy Hewett of the Victoria Boat Mart at West Bay Marina and will sell for about $18,000.

She's capable of getting to Port Angeles in 20 minutes or the Rosario resort on Orcas Island in an hour.

Commercial fishermen and others on the water looked bewildered as the Soviet "sea sports car" whipped by them this week.

It was easier than driving a car.

A single-lever control pushed forward gets you quickly under way. Lever pulled back, the hydrofoil moves smoothly astern. One thing to remember, however, is that, once in the neutral position, you have to take into account she'll have a further momentum of about 100 yards.

These hydrofoils are the same as those used as shore boats aboard Russian warships. As far back as 1943 the Russians were developing hydrofoils.

The eight-passenger hydrofoil in Victroria opens up a new type of boating, Hewett said.

The Russian's equivalent of our Ministry of Transport must be tough on marine regulations if the equipment aboard the new import is any indication.

She comes equipped with eight lifejackets, each with a flashing light and whistle. The unusual English instructions for the light state, "In the dark time pull out the cord."

She has a two-foot high foghorn that roars like a Russian bear.

In addition to flares and other safety gear, the hydrofoil comes packed in a 30-foot steel crate that contains a complete set of tools and spare parts. There's even a Russian pair of binoculars.

On Tuesday the seas were smooth but Hewett says the hydrofoil comes into her own when the waters are rough. This, combined with her speed, makes her ideal for search and rescue work, he says.

Three watertight compartments make her virtually unsinkable, according to Hewett.

Easing back to her berth in Esquimalt, she idled quietly along at one knot, an ideal trolling speed for sports fishermen.

As we secured lines a covey of shorewatchers gathered to ask questions and study the stranger in town.

Ask the Times

Q. Would you please tell me how to cleanly cut the necks off bottles so they may be used as flower containers?—M.M.

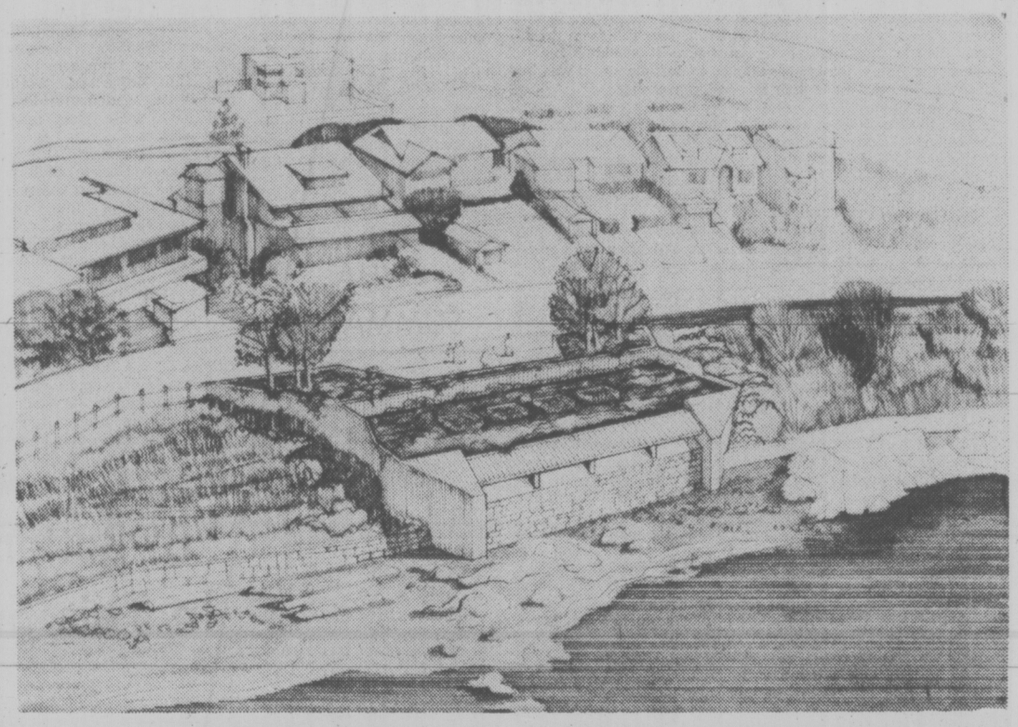
A. Hobby shops sell devices that can be used for this purpose.

Q. What is first-degree and second-degree murder?

A. The Criminal Code was changed by Parliament last summer to these new descriptions of murder. First-degree murder is when it is planned and deliberate, and irrespective of whether it is planned and deliberate when the victim is a peace officer or prison worker or when death occurs in connection with specified offences such as hijacking an aircraft, kidnapping, rape and indecent assault. It is also first-degree murder when there has been a previous conviction of first- or second-degree murder.

All murder that is not first-degree is second-degree.

Sentence is imprisonment for life for both degrees, without eligibility for parole for at least 25 years on first-degree conviction and for at least 10 years and as much as 25 years on second-degree.



ANOTHER VIEWPOINT will be added to the shoreline at Shoal Bay if a controversial sewage pumping station is built where the home of Colonist publisher Richard Bower now stands at 495 Beach Drive. Architectural rendering of what station would look like reveals roof would be at street level and, with guardrails, would serve as a public lookout. Regional public works committee Wednesday chose it as preferred site of six studied in area, despite yearlong battle by neighbors. Full regional board will vote on recommendation next Wednesday. See story page 20.

The Screamin' Jimmies Are Coming for City Firemen

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The old yellow fire trucks won't be what they used to be when Victoria fire department gets through with them.

The department has launched a major program to replace its gas-powered engines with diesels — big, booming Detroit diesels, known in the trade as Screamin' Jimmies.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell says it's an ambitious undertaking, the first attempted by any fire department in the province and will take years to complete.

The plan calls for conversion of three of the department's six trucks from gas to diesel. The other three will be replaced by new trucks — all diesel-powered.

The conversion program started a week ago with the department's 1968 LaFrance pumper. The truck's 820-cubic inch Continental gas engine has been replaced with a new V-six 426-cubic inch diesel and the transmission changed from standard shift to automatic.

The work — budgeted to cost $14,070 — is being carried out by the department's master mechanic Ray Barron and assistant Ken Searle at the main fire hall on Yates Street.

Heppell says the 12-year-old number one aerial truck is next in line for the changeover — hopefully sometime next year — and in 1982 another pumper, a 1973 Thibeault, will be converted.

Heppell gives some compelling reasons for the changes which, he says, are geared to increase economies and improve the efficiency and reliability of the fire equipment.

The automatic transmission, he says, will ensure engines are always running at the correct r.p.m. With standard shift there is the danger of lugging or over-revving motors, increasing wear and tear.

Diesel engines, he says, have proven reliability, — 100,000 mile dealer warranties are the rule not the exception — are considered more efficient, less prone to mechanical failure, easier to maintain and use cheaper fuel. They will also greatly extend the life of the equipment, he says.

HEPPELL

The LaFrance, for example, once converted is to remain in service until 1998. Without the changes the truck would probably have to be replaced in 10 to 15 years and new pumpers at today's prices cost $90,000 plus.

Heppell says a number of fire departments in B.C. are making the switch from gas to diesel but Victoria is unique in converting its older trucks. Burnaby fire department is planning to follow with a similar program later this year.

Why didn't the change come sooner?

"Blame it on tradition," says Heppell. "Firemen are a conservative lot. We've always had gas engines in the past. That's the way it's been. It takes a major occurrence to make us change."

That has been a combination of two developments. One is technological advances in perfecting diesel engines. Ten years ago small diesels didn't deliver enough revs or power suitable for fire truck use. Now they do.

"We've come to the point where we just can't buy parts for the motor any longer," he says.

If there is a breakdown, the mechanic has to hand-make the part — a time-consuming and costly operation.

Heppell says the decision to go diesel was made last fall after senior officials examined the Seattle fire department which has changed over 95 per cent of its equipment to diesel power.

"What we're doing is taking their background and experience and applying it to our own," he says. "For us it's a venture into a whole new idea."

Bruins Push Cougars Into an Early Summer

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria partisans suspect there may be better ways to reach the end of the line, but New Westminster Bruins failed to co-operate with the Cougars and manger-coach-owner Pat Ginnell.

New Westminster's 4-1 victory Wednesday was the finishing touch on a 4-0 Bruin sweep of a best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League playoff series.

Not to be forgotten is the fact that it may hav been Ginnell's final appearance as manager, coach and owner of the Cougars.

Sale of the Cougars to a group headed by Vancouver hotelman Lorne Williams is expected to be officially announced shortly.

Ginnell, one of the most successful coaches in the history of major junior hockey, may be back but only as a coach of a rival entry. It's not known where Ginnell plans to relocate but you can have your choice of several rumors that include Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Flin Flon — his old stamping ground. Plus others.

While he alienated some of the anti-violence crowd, Ginnell did manage to carry the Cougars to respectability in the 12-team league.

In three and a half years, the Cougars were always counted as contenders. They started out the 1976-77 season as contenders and no one was more disappointed than Ginnell to discover that "summer" arrived shortly after 11 p.m. on April 6.

The Cougars did not go out in a blaze of glory. They stumbled badly in the final weeks, failing to win a game in their last 12. New Westminster's sweep was the salt rubbed into the wound.

But Ginnell wouldn't criticize his players.

Although out-scored 23-9 in the four playoff games, it was the inability of Victoria's front-line leaders to produce that enabled Bruins to sweep the series.

The defence may have stumbled at times, but the forwards didn't help. Throughout the series they struggled for goals, for good reason. They shot ineffectively and passed badly.

Captain Curt Fraser scored four goals and two assists to top the team but marred his leadership role by consistently refusing to pass and by checking weakly. Wednesday, for example, he was on the ice for all four Bruin goals.

Paul Enquist managed two goals and three assists but the team's other 30-plus goal-scorers suffered miserably. Gary Lupil, who topped the team with 116 points during the regular season, managed only one goal; Geordie Robertson's total included only two assists while Gregg Anderson, Victoria's top gunner with 46 goals, was held to only one assist.

They consistently resorted to stickhandling instead of passing and New Westminster defencemen had no difficulty in smothering Victoria's attacks.

Victoria's problems also were compounded by the fact that Bruin netminders Carey Walker and Blaine Peterson both came up big in the series.

Both teams missed players because of suspensions as a result of their actions in a bench-clearing brawl in Sunday's third game. Victoria winger Archie Henderson was set down for one game while teammate Brent Gogal and New Westminster's Don Hobbins drew two-game suspensions.

Hobbins will serve his second game in the Western Division final. Bruins will meet either Portland Winter Hawks or Kamloops Chiefs in the second round.

Before summer plans can be implemented, Cougars will have one more outing. The team will play a benefit game for Ron Trafford Saturday night, starting at 8:30.

The season ended on a sour note when a local imbecile threw egg and soda pop on New Westminster coach Ernie McLean at game's end.

The Majors Come West Or, See You in Seattle

The term "professional baseball" nearly always suggests magical connotations, especially when it's close to home; and, sure enough, travel plans this summer include Seattle on the itinerary with the Mariners the newest major league baseball story in the northwest.

It was many moons ago that Victoria boasted some pretty fair ballplayers, and some even performed for pay.

Or did you know that it was in 1890 in the area now known as Windsor Park that a park was constructed and the Oak Bay Ball Club played against Seattle and Tacoma? One man became famous. Hal Chase went to the Chicgo White Sox and was regarded as possibly the finest first baseman of his time.

It was after the latest conflict between nations that Victoria became a part of the scene again with an entry in the Western International League. One championship under manager Cec Garriott came our way during that tenure which ended in mid-season in 1954, just as the British Empire and commonwealth games were being held in Vancouver.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver a high-grade semi-pro league flourished for many years before the advent of the Western International and later the Coast League.

Bob Brown's Fifth Avenue ball lot was the home then of the better amateurs and a first baseman manager named Coleman E. Hall, who once gave a young man a chance to do his thing.

Then came the Capilanos, and still ensconced in that band-box called a park with that ridiculously short, right-field fence; and I can see Victoria pitcher Len Kasparavish yet, walking by the centre-field fence and swinging an old-fashioned coal-oil lantern one particularly foggy night. Len only wanted to get some light on the subject even though the umpires failed to agree it was absolutely necessary.

The Caps were followed by the Mounties. I think it was in 1956 because a note from the past recalls a golf game at Colwood with one Frank (Lefty) O'Doul. He was the manager of the Mounties that season and may be recalled also as the man who changed Ryne Duren from a thrower to a pitcher.

It was in the Mounties' second year that things really started to happen for this Pacific Coast League team. The fellows in charge were Cedric Tallis and Charlie Metro and their names have popped up in several places, several times, since then.

The Mounties were winners and one night Vancouver fans filled the new ball park, Capilano Stadium. There were 10,000 there for a key game against San Francisco. The team drew over 300,000 fans that season; a figure it wouldn't reach again. Inevitably, the crowds started to dwindle and it was in 1969 the Mounties made their farewell appearance.

A few of the players may be recalled. Brooks Robinson played third base for a while. Jim Marshall was a handy first baseman; George Bamberger, Don Ferrarese, Chuck Estrada and Moe Drabowski were some of the pitchers, Charlie White was a catcher, Lenny Green an outfielder; and the president was Nat Bailey. Yep, Nat was always right there when baseball was concerned.

Meanwhile, in Seattle a move was afoot to get a major league franchise. It actually started in 1964 when the Cleveland Indians, beset by poor attendance, wondered about moving West to Seattle.

Baseball fans even bought tickets on that assumption, but the Indians stayed in Cleveland and the tickets were cashed in. Then in 1967, Charles O. Finley (the same) who was then owner of the Kansas City Club, gave Seattle a hard look before deciding on Oakland.

Later it was more or less agreed that Seattle would get a franchise in 1972. But suddenly, for what reason it can't be recalled, the process was speeded up and the entry date set for 1969. Ironically, the major shareholder was William R. Daley, former president of the Cleveland club.

The first manager was Joe Schultz. He had been third-base coach for St. Louis Cardinals and he got the Pilots off and winging. They won their first game 4-3, over the Angels on April 8, 1969, and a few days later won their home opener 7-0, over Chicago White Sox.

After that, little went right, the Pilots managed to hold on to third place for a time, then slipped back, attendance fell off, the city wanted its rent money and Dave Bristol was hired to replace Schultz in November. Bristol must have wondered what he got himself into, because the club ended up in Milwaukee the next spring and there was to be no more major league baseball in Seattle until Wednesday of this week.

Things should go more smoothly this time around. Judging by the tremendous response to the Seattle Seahawks of the NFL and the SuperSonics of the NBA, the Mariners should be able to provide a greater impact on the community than their ill-fated predecessors.

And those are just some of the reasons why there will be more than one excursion from this port, just as there was in assorted days long ago of Chick Ellsworth . . . Fred Hutchinson . . . Mike Hunt . . . Kewpie Barrett. Who? Well at least Leo Lassen would remember.

OTTAWA TRIES AGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of local sportsmen and businessmen wanting a professional hockey team here hope that Bill McFarland, World Hockey Association president, will have some good news next week.

The 500-member Ottawa Professional Hockey Club is hoping to entice an existing WHA franchise into the 9,000-seat Civic Centre. Calgary Cowboys and Phoenix Roadrunners appear to be the best bets.

McFarland will be in town for the group's annual dinner.

A year ago, Ottawans watched the death throes of Ottawa Civics, the short-lived sequel to Denver Spurs, which was disbanded by its United States owners after Ottawa hockey interests couldn't produce $1.5 million fast enough to take over the franchise.

Now It's 'Ion Power'

By The Canadian Press

Four teams face elimination tonight from the National Hockey League playoffs, but two of those will have the home-ice advantage in an effort to turn the best-of-three preliminary series around.

Minnesota North Stars, 4-2 losers to Buffalo on Tuesday night, face the Sabres at Bloomington, Minn., while Atlanta Flames take on Los Angeles Kings at the Omni in an attempt to avenge a 5-2 defeat Tuesday night in Los Angeles.

The other two teams facing an early exit from the Stanley Cup trail are Pittsburgh Penguins and Chicago Blacks Hawks. The Black Hawks can blame the rock group Led Zeppelin for their loss of home-ice advantage but the Penguins can blame no one but themselves.

Chicago Stadium, home of the Black Hawks, was booked months ago for the rock concert featuring the British group. The Black Hawks will wear home whites and will get the last line change although playing before an expected capacity crowd at Uniondale, N.Y., the same arena in which New York Islanders beat Chicago 5-2 in the opening game Tuesday night.

The Penguins were surprised 4-2 Tuesday night by Toronto Maple Leafs before a sparse crowd at the Civic Centre. Tonight, the Penguins will be trying to even the series before the usual packed house of 16,485 at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Penguins will have to put up with the highly-partisan Leafs crowd and Toronto's "ionic men."

Leafs coach Red Kelly, who said he found success last season with pyramid power as the Leafs took Philadelphia Flyers to seven game in the quarterfinals, has announced that Tuesday night's win over the Penguin was due in part to an abundance of negatively charged ions.

"Upgrading the number of negative ions in our dressing room before the game helped us deliver a strong game on the ice," a serious Kelly said. "I can't tell you where I got my supply of ions, but they certainly worked."

"I've been doing some studying on my ions," he said. "It's been established scientifically that the nature of the ions in the atmosphere govern people's outlook.

"When there are too many positive ions, they are listless and not interested in what they are doing. When the ion field around them is negative, they operate at a much higher level."

Chicago coach Bill White hasn't concerned himself with the plusses or minuses of negative ions but plays down the Black Hawks loss of a home arena.

"There's nothing really we could do about that," White said at the Islanders' arena after the opening-game loss. "We're disappointed we can't play at home, but we don't mind coming here."

Rene Robert, Buffalo's veteran right winger, was being more cautious than his rookie team-mate, goalie Don Edwards, following the Sabres' victory over Minnesota.

"I wouldn't be surprised if it goes three games," said Robert. But Edwards crowed: "We won the first game and now we've got the winning feeling."

"If we play in our building as well as we did in the playoffs last year, we'll be back in Los Angeles Saturday night," he said of the Kings' 1-0 victory over the Flames in Atlanta a year ago.

'B' Better Than 'A' In This School Test

Don Horwood, who coached Oak Bay Bays to the B.C. title this season, proved his talents aren't confined to one team by guiding the "B" Division to an 86-70 victory over the "A" Division in the inaugural high school boys' all-star basketball game Wednesday at the McKinnon gymnasium.

Playing before approximately 300 fans, "B" stars took a 42-33 lead by half-time and retained control after the break.

Bill Barber of Esquimalt set the pace for "B" Division with 18 points while Craig Higgins and Ken Kirzinger of the Bays fired 17 and 11 points, respectively.

The "A" stars, coached by Rick Mark of Spectrum, received 13 points from Neil Cunningham of Claremont, 12 from Don Davenport of Belmont and 10 each from Harb Sanghara of Spectrum and Greg Witt of Dunsmuir.

A Diplomatic Victory

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Ten South Dakota basketball players representing the United States lost a two-game series with Cuba but have made their mark in diplomatic history.

Their losses, 91-72 in Tuesday night's opener and 88-69 in Wednesday's farewell game, won the applause and respect of the Cubans who twice filled the 15,000-seat Coliseum and those who saw the game on national television.

"You've made a great contribution in the relations between countries," Senator George McGovern (Dem. — S.D.) told coaches Gene Zulk of the South Dakota State Jackrabbits and Jack Doyle of the University of South Dakota Coyotes.

The athletic exhange originated during a meeting here two years ago between McGovern and Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro. The two men saw the sports arena as a way to renew the relations which came to an end between the two countries on Jan. 3, 1961.

President Carter lifted a travel ban to Cuba last month and rescinded prerequisites before the U.S. would normalize relations with the country that lies only 90 miles from Florida.

BRISTOL, England (AFP) — An English soccer league First Division club is taking steps to ensure than no supporters of one of England's most illustrious clubs visit their ground next month.

Bristol City has withdrawn 5000 tickets offered to Manchester United for the league match here May 7 — and with the blessing of sports minister Dennis Howell.

United, seven-times English champions and the only English club to win the European Cup, is followed by the worst behaved supporters in the country.

Manchester United officials and players have condemned their own fans and ironically the team is likely to win the fair-play title this year.

BOSTON (UPI) — John Havlicek became the fourth player in NBA history to reach the 25,000-point plateau during Wednesday night's game between Boston Celtics and Houston Rockets.

Havlicek's seventh point of the night, on an uncontested layup at 5:26 of the second quarter, was followed by a two-minute ovation from the near capacity house at Boston Garden.

Havlicek went on to score 21 points but the Rockets, after trailing in the early going, took charge and posted a 104-93 win to clinch first place in the Central Division, their first-ever divisional title.

The 15-year veteran, who will turn 37 on Friday, joined Wilt Chamberlain (31,419), Oscar Robertson (26,710), and Jerry West (25,192) in the select group. Earlier in the year, Havlicek overtook Hal Greer as the all-time NBA leader in games played.

Playing in his 1184th game, the Ohio State product currently maintains a career scoring average of 21.1 points per game.

A's Put the Boot To Viking Hopes

An edge in penalty-kicking accuracy Wednesday helped Victoria Athletics gain a playoff final berth for premier division teams in the Vancouver Island Soccer League at Royal Athletic Park.

Neither Athletics or UVic Vikings could score through 90 minutes of regulation time and a 30-minute overtime period.

Vikings had the edge in play throughout the match but couldn't connect.

Victoria West and Nanaimo City are scheduled to clash in the other semi-final Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Golden Opportunity for Montefusco

By The Associated Press

The first hit off John Montefusco today will not only be a blow to his ego, but to his pride as well.

The San Francisco pitcher who believes he can do anything will try to do something only one person has ever done in baseball—pitch two consecutive no-hitters.

"I'd really like to pitch another no-hitter because I may never get the chance again to throw two in a row," Montefusco said as he prepared to pitch the Giants' opening game against Los Angeles Dodgers.

The game is one of eight baseball openers on the second day of the major league season.

Elsewhere, it's St. Louis at Pittsburgh and New York at Chicago in National League inaugurals. In the American League, Chicago will be at Toronto, Kansas City at Detroit, Texas at Baltimore, Milwaukee at New York and Cleveland at Boston.

In opening games Wednesday, the Reds defeated San Diego Padres 5-3 in the National League and California Angels spoiled the debut of the expansion Seattle Mariners with a 7-0 victory in the American League.

Cesar Geronimo smashed a two-run homer and Ken Griffey drilled three hits as Cincinnati roughed up 1976 Cy Young winner Randy Jones. The chilly season opener attracted 51,937 at Riverfront Stadium despite a three-inch snowfall prior to the game and dropping temperatures.

Veteran left-hander Woodie Fryman, the National League's oldest starter at 36, survived a shaky start to win his first outing with the Reds. Fryman walked six in 5 1-3 innings, while giving up three runs and seven hits.

Southpaw Frank Tanana scattered nine hits and Joe Rudi drove in four runs with a home run and a double, leading California over Seattle. A record Kingdome crowd of 57,762 welcomed big league baseball back to Seattle.

Tom Seaver makes his 10th consecutive opening-day start for the Mets. The New York ace has never lost in that role, with five victories and four no-decisions.

Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., has been nominated to pitch the opener for Boston against Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley. A crowd of 35,000 is expected at Boston's Fenway Park.

'Aaaaaa Bays'—Rugby's Spiritual Leader Speaks

RUGBY
max low

Even if you've been no more than a casual rugby observer at Macdonald Park over the last four years, you have undoubtedly heard The Voice.

"Aaaaaa Bays!" it says at regular intervals, along with other similarly elegant phrases extolling the virtues and prowess of the home club — James Bay Athletic Association.

"Oh, that's only Mother Hubbard."

But how many of those fans know just how deep the loyalty runs and how much work goes on behind The Voice? Well if you, for one, didn't know, Jim Hubbard, though a relative newcomer to the game of rugby, is much more than a loud noise in the park.

Mother Hubbard, as he is well known, hadn't played rugby in his life until four years ago. At that time, he was 27 and weighed 260 pounds. He'd played softball, been president of the Stuffy McGinnis League and had a go at soccer.

"But it just wasn't my game," he says with a grin, "so I tried rugby."

Now 31 and a trim 210 pounds, Jim Hubbard has had to stop playing and must face the reality that he may never play again. He has been plagued by an old back injury and must undergo a spinal fusion operation.

"Well, you see I became captain and coach of the Bays' third fifteen, and was also called on to play for the seconds," says Jim, who admits he wasn't one to turn down a game of rugby. "I was playing two games every weekend, always . . . . just what a guy needs to do with a bum back!"

Even though he can't play, Mother's still involved with the game and the club he loves. He's still third-division coach; he's bar manager at the James Bay clubhouse; and right now he's also serving as the Bays' first-division manager.

If you plan to be at Macdonald Park on Saturday, you should see some good fast rugby — and Mother Hubbard in action. James Bay is hosting the Vancouver Island Rugby Union's seven-a-side tournament and Jim is running it.

The tourney kicks off at 11 a.m. and runs all day to the finals at 3:30 p.m. Games, involving all Island clubs, will be seven minutes each way with a one-minute break in the interval. The final will be 10-minute halves.

Cowichan and the young UVic Vikings are expected to test the highly favored Bays and you can bet, as well as getting things organized, Jim will be there with a cheer or two for his club.

So why not pause the next time The Voice shatters the quiet of Macdonald Park (and perhaps your eardrums) and remember the toil behind it.

And think, too, that in this man who gives so much of himself in his own way to the game and the club he loves, James Bay has something special. After all, in the Island Union's handbook on the page reserved for the James Bay Club's officers it reads:

Spiritual Leader: Mother Hubbard.

Liverpool Wins

Liverpool won its first leg semi-final 3-1 in Zurich Wednesday night to pencil in a place in the European Cup final. The English champions were a goal down in six minutes to a Peter Risi penalty, equalized eight minutes later and moved ahead in the second half.

Defender Phil Neal scored twice, one a penalty when Steve Heighway was brought down and Heighway sandwiched a goal between them.

In the other semi-final, Borussia Moenchengladbach, bidding to keep the cup in West Germany, lost 1-0 to Dynamo Kiev in the Soviet Ukraine.

A header by Vladimir Onischenko 20 minutes from the end was all Dynamo had to show for tremendous pressure on the West German champions and league leaders.

Dynamo had Mikhail Fomenko booked for fouling Rainer Bonhof. Bonhof's World Cup colleague, Berti Vogts, was also cautioned.

In the Cup-Winners Cup, Anderlecht, the Belgian holders, went down 1-0 in Italy to Napoli before a 90,000 crowd. Giuseppe Bruscolotti scored the vital goal with nine minutes left.

Celtic, Rangers In Final

LONDON (Reuter) — Celtic qualified to meet Glasgow rivals Rangers in the Scottish FA Cup final when they scored a 2-0 semi-final win over Dundee Wednesday night.

Joe Craig scored both goals in the last 11 minutes to earn Celtic their May 7 meeting with Rangers. It will be Celtic's 40th Cup final.

In the English First Division, Derby County drew 2-2 with Norwich to extend their unbeaten run to six matches. Roger Gibbons scored both Norwich goals. Welsh international Leighton James and Steve Powell scored for Derby.

BURNABY (CP) — England's Cheshire County under-19 schools team defeated the Vancouver Junior Reps 12-8 in an international rugby game Wednesday night.

Cheshire County remains unbeaten on its British Columbia tour. They beat the Victoria junior reps, 9-3, and defeated the James Bay junior reps of Victoria, 12-9.

THE GAS SAVERS

It's for you to decide.
Do you want to save gas . . . or waste gas?
The choice is easy. And so is your choice of medium-duty trucks.
Only the International Loadstar and Cargostar have MV 404-446 V8 gas engines with emission control as part of their basic design. They clean up the air without cleaning out your wallet.
Even if gas was free and plentiful, there are lots more reasons to choose International. Road test a gas saver for maneuverability, and you'll know one of the reasons.
The cab-over Cargostar was born and bred for city traffic, narrow lanes, and congested loading docks.
There's a Loadstar or Cargostar designed to save gas on every medium-duty job. Learn more about them at your IH truck dealer.

Get Green Cross Lawn Green Fertilizer
The top-quality food to give your lawn a proper start this Spring.

- Its balanced formula contains two types of nitrogen—quick release for fast growth and greening, slow release for sustained rich growth and green colour.
- Also contains potash for sturdy root structure, and phosphorous for overall structural strength to roots and leaves.
- Contains no sand—just lawn food ingredients mixed with lightweight vermiculite for uniform coverage.
- One easy-to-carry 22-lb. bag covers 5,000 sq. feet of lawn—or as much as two 40-lb. bags of ordinary heavyweight fertilizer.

BOWLERS OF WEEK

Capturing men's awards during 24th week of 14th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest are Jim Parry (right) and Jamie MacGregor. Jim collected fivepin laurels by posting 237-370-324—931 series in Friday Legion League at Wilson Bowladrome. He's been bowling three years and this was personal high as well as top series so far this season at Wilson. Jamie, back bowling for first year after 10-year absence, found new ball and tip from pro helped improve average enough to earn tenpin honors with 227-203-205—635 series rolled in Major "A" League at Mayfair Lanes.

New Courts Set For Net Lessons

Victoria City, Saanich and Esquimalt recreation departments have all added new courts to existing tennis facilities and most will see action during the annual spring adult instruction program.

Instruction will again be at two levels — beginners and advanced — under the guidance of Gordon Hartley, a qualified B.C. Tennis Association professional.

Hartley will be assisted by a team of ranking local players who graduated from the tennis instructor's course offered by Camosun College.

In addition, Saanich will offer instruction to people aged 55 and over this year.

Balls are supplied and students need only furnish themselves with a racquet. The fee is $18 for beginners and $20 for advanced students.

Registrations will be accepted at the following times and places:

SAANICH: Gordon Head Recreation Centre, Feltham Road, April 18 to 22 from 10 a.m. to noon and 7 to 9 p.m.; April 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

VICTORIA CITY: Beacon Hill Park courts, April 19-20 from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

ESQUIMALT: Esquimalt Recreation Centre, Fraser Street, April 21-22 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Victoria High Squad Beaten

DUBLIN, Ireland — Wesley College of Dublin turned on the power in the dying minutes Wednesday to down Victoria High School Titans 31-4 in an exhibition rugby match here.

The Canadians had held their own throughout an even first half and trailed 13-4 until a few moments from the end when Wesley took control and raced over for several tries.

It was the third loss in six matches in Vic High's tour of Britain (Victoria has two wins and a tie). Final game is Saturday against Barry Comprehensive School in Wales and the Titans leave for home Sunday.

Spartans Flash Power

Joe McAlister and Dean Craven scored two tries each Wednesday to lead Claremont Spartans to a 35-9 win over visiting Spectrum during the final day of regular-schedule play in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

In other matches, Parkland bounced visiting Reynolds Roadrunners 33-13 and Belmont Braves nipped visiting Oak Bay Barbarians, 10-9.

Semi-finals for the Howard Russell Cup are scheduled for Wednesday with division-champion St. Michael's University School playing host to Spectrum and Claremont visiting Victoria Titans, who are currently on a tour of Great Britain.

Both matches are at 3:30 p.m.

Spartans came up with a 22-9 lead by half time and completely dominated play after the break.

Darryl Stubbs sparked Parkland with a try, a drop goal and three conversions while other single tries were contributed by Andy Robertson, Chris Flint, Larry Wedgewood, Brett Hartley, Garth Taylor and Darryl Stubbs.

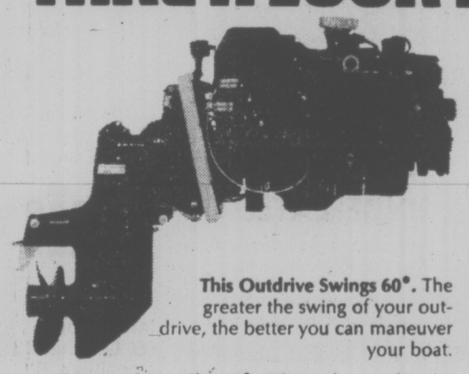
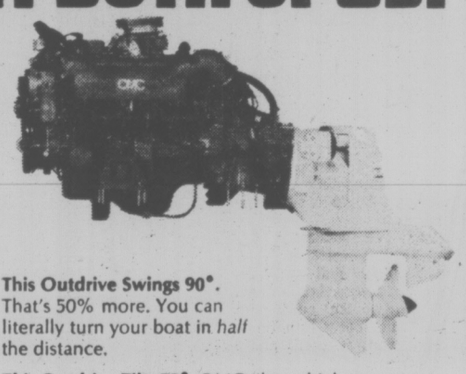
BEFORE YOU ORDER A STERN DRIVE, TAKE A LOOK AT BOTH OF US!





This Outdrive Swings 60°. The greater the swing of your outdrive, the better you can maneuver your boat.

This Outdrive Swings 90°. That's 50% more. You can literally turn your boat in half the distance.

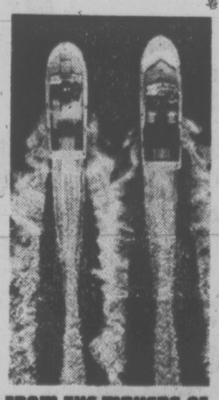
This Outdrive Tilts 75°. OMC tilts so high you can usually change a prop without getting into the water, or hauling your boat out of the water.

The Trim on this Stern Drive is Part of the Tilt System. It has hydraulic cylinders outside the boat.

The Trim System* on this Stern Drive is Separate from the Tilt System. By being separate, it is easier to "fine tune" your ride with independently controlled precision. And it is mounted inside the boat, for reduced corrosion.

The Steering System on this Stern Drive Uses a Tiller Arm. The wheel should be held firmly or it may spin to port or starboard during a trim angle change...especially in a hard turn.



The Steering on this Stern Drive Uses a Worm and Sector Gear*. This helps keep you on course in a turn, straight ahead, at trolling speed or at any speed. And, should you lose your grip on the wheel, it stays put until you turn it.

This Outdrive is Bolted Directly to the Transom. Drive unit vibration and noise are transmitted to the transom and the hull.

This Outdrive is Mounted Directly to the Engine. The OMC outdrive doesn't touch the transom. This results in a low level of noise and vibration.

Ask your OMC Stern Drive Dealer for more information on OMC exclusive features such as 90° turning, 75° Hi-Tilt™, SelecTrim™, Tru-Course™ steering, Uni-Mount™ and Power Shift.

$47,000 TO UPGRADE CENTENNIAL STADIUM

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will contribute more than $58,000 for the upgrading of sports facilities at two universities, the health department announced Wednesday.

The department said the University of Victoria will receive $47,000 to upgrade the track at its Centennial Stadium.

Sir Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S., has been granted $11,170 for construction of a new field hockey facility.

So far this year 10 universities have been granted more than $1,850,000 in federal funds.

49ers' Owner Fires Coach

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Edward De Bartolo Jr. swept into town for the first time since purchasing the San Francisco 49ers and dropped a bombshell Wednesday when he announced Monte Clark, who had the National Football League team in title contention until the waning weeks of the season last year, would not be back as head coach.

At a news conference — scheduled several weeks ago and expected primarily to formally introduce the 31-year-old De Bartolo, the youngest owner in the NFL, to the Bay area — turned into a sombre affair with the announcement of the new owner's inability to re-define Clark's vast duties in the 49ers' organization.

Coupled with the termination of Clark's contract, which still had three years remaining, De Bartolo named highly successful NFL Executive Joe Thomas as vice president and general manager.

Despite the somewhat cruel ending, both De Bartolo, whose purchase of the team from the Morabito family was approved last week by the NFL, and Thomas held out an olive branch to Clark.

"I, more than anyone in this room, want Monte Clark to coach the San Francisco 49ers," De Bartolo said. "If (Joe) Thomas was not involved here, I still would have renegotiated Monte's contract. Under his contract with the previous owners, he had authority and duties that were far beyond those of a coach.

"I chose Thomas to be general manager and the duties that went along with it. Unfortunately, the contract Monte had was in direct conflict with that of a general manager.

"All I wanted was to redefine Monte's duties. I want Joe Thomas to run this club. But until we do anything definitive, he (Clark) can coach this team.

Clark, who turned the sagging 49ers around as a first-year coach in 1976 and finished with an 8-6 record, was not available for comment.

Thomas, who has had great success in building powerhouses in Minnesota, Miami and Baltimore only to be dismissed from the Colts after a near-revolt last season, said, "We asked him to stay. We even went as far as to offer him more money. I think he's a fine coach and a fine person. It's just too bad it didn't happen."

Sockeyes Sock It To Clippers

NANAIMO (CP) — Richmond Sockeyes won the British Columbia Tier Two junior hockey title Wednesday with a 5-0 win over Nanaimo Clippers to complete a sweep of their best-of-five series.

Aaron Fader scored what proved to be the wining goal at 24 seconds of the first period. Don Bliault and Don Davis added the other first-period goals.

Sockeye goalie Ron Patterson stopped 28 shots to whitewash the B.C. Junior Hockey League winners. Clipper goalies Steve Hannah and Andy Gourlay combined to stop 33 Sockeye shots.

The Sockeyes now meet Calgary Canucks in a best-of-seven Alberta-B.C. playoff along the Centennial Cup trail. That series starts Tuesday at Vancouver.

VICTORIA KINSMEN PLAN FITNESS TRAIL

The Victoria Kinsmen Club is investigating the possibility of establishing a participark, better known as a fitness trail, to encourage physical fitness for all ages.

"There is strong opposition to establishing a trail in Beacon Hill Park because people think there are already too many installations of one kind or another in the park," he explained.

Esquimalt, he said, offered High Rock Park, near Lampson Street and Esquimalt Road, but the club is looking for an area in a more densely populated district.

The trail construction would cost $3,000 to $5,000.

A participark consits of a trail (for walking or jogging) up to 2½ kilometres (1½ miles) through a park setting.

Every 200 metres there is an exercise station consisting of a sign on a post describing the exercise to be performed. Simple, inexpensive equipment made of wooden posts, poles or bars is set up at each station to suit a specific exercise.

The concept originated in Europe and the trails there are popular.

There are already two in Greater Victoria.

The Capital Regional District has almost completed one at Portage Park in View Royal but it is used by children. The Juan de Fuca Recreational Centre also operates one.

In Canada, participarks are in varying stages of planning and construction in about 200 communities and within five years it is expected there will be as many as 1,000.

Konchak said participarks are being promoted by Kinsmen across the country with the co-operation of the Sun Life Assurance Co.

Bill Johnson, program director of Oak Bay Recreation Centre, said a fitness trail seems to be more successful if established near a recreational centre and running through secluded, wooded area.

"This is what has been done in Alberni," he said. "People like to jog or walk on such a trail and end up with a shower or swim. Many people also seem to prefer to go through their exercises in a wooded area — not in full view of everyone."

He said Oak Bay soon hopes to have a fitness trail.

Indeterminate Terms Cut Prison Staff Need

★ NOWHERE NEAR MANSON

VACAVILLE, Calif. (CP) — Two Canadian members of Parliament did not get within one-half mile of killer Charles Manson Wednesday as they visited the California Medical Facility, a tight security hospital prison in which Manson has been held since 1972.

Prison authorities would only tell British Columbia MPs Simma Holt, a Liberal, and John Reynolds, a Progressive Conservative, that Manson is in a segregation unit.

Manson has been in prison since the Sharon Tate murders of 1969 in Los Angeles.

He is being held in protective custody in a section of the prison hospital far removed from the part the MPs were shown during their visit.

Holt was angry at news reports that she had a message for Manson from a follower, Lynette Fromme she and Reynolds interviewed Monday in a prison in San Diego.

"It was only a dumb message," Holt told committee chairman Mark MacGuigan, an Ontario Liberal, as they rode 55 miles from San Francisco to Vacaville.

She said she knows there is a law against carrying messages from one prisoner to another and she would not break it.

However, she did ask to see Manson.

VACAVILLE, Calif. (CP) — Prisons in California are able to operate with one-third, sometimes one-sixth, the staff of their Canadian counterparts but that may change after July 1 when the indeterminate sentence is abolished in the state and fixed sentences become law.

Currently, a prisoner is sentenced by the courts to, say, one year to life for rape. The time he actually serves depends upon his behavior in the institution and the impression he can make on the authority which decides upon parole.

"They don't tell a prisoner anything until they decide on his parole," Supt. T. L. Clanon of the California Medical Facility, a prison hospital, told visiting Canadian members of Parliament on Wednesday.

Under the new law, which is retroactive, fixed sentences—say five years for rape—must be imposed. About one-third of the 22,000 men and women now in prison will have to be released as a result.

"It was time for a change," Clanon told Yukon Conservative MP Erik Nielsen. "But I foresee some problems."

"I think they're going to be in trouble the minute they do that," Nielsen said in an interview later.

The California Medical Facility's 1,900 prisoners—450 are in a reception centre and will be transferred to other prisons—include some of the wildest names in crime.

Charles Manson, whose followers carried out the Sharon Tate killings in 1969, has been in a special wing of this prison since 1972.

Other prisoners have ranged from LSD guru Timothy Leary, who spent a year here during the 1960s, to Juan Corona, convicted of the sex slayings of a couple of dozen migrant men whose bodies were unearthed along the Sacramento River. Corona was transferred to another prison after losing an eye here when he was attacked and stabbed.

Security is tight. Marc MacGuigan, the subcommittee chairman, was almost refused release when he couldn't find a visitor's slip he had been given on entry.

Although British Columbia MPs Simma Holt, a Liberal, and John Reynolds, a Conservative, wanted to see Manson, they and the others were taken instead to the opposite end of a row of 10 yellow three-storey buildings in which the cells are located.

Striding down a long concrete corridor past numerous prisoners, including a few transvestites dressed as women, they were led by psychiatrist Alvin Groupe to a maximum-security unit. He said it is more secure than the death-row cells at San Quentin, which the MPs will visit today.

About 20 professionals lead therapy sessions here and each follows his own method, Groupe said. At "Penetang," which has a professional staff of five for 150 men with violent pasts, the more experienced patients lead group therapy sessions. Groupe said these would turn into "bull sessions." But the MPs regard Penetang as apparently effective.

Both MacGuigan and Nielsen said they were impressed by the prison hospital, 55 miles north of San Francisco.

"We were impressed by how they operate with such a small staff and maintain a comparatively (to Canadian prisons) relaxed atmosphere," MacGuigan said.

$15 MILLION CONSUMER AID URGED

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Carter Wednesday asked Congress to create a $15 million "agency for consumer advocacy," and within hours, in a closely co-ordinated display of enthusiasm, bills were introduced in the House of Representatives and the Senate to that effect.

In a special message to Congress, Carter endorsed a package of four consumer proposals, including essentially the same Consumer Protection Agency which Congress passed in 1975, but never sent to the White House because of a promised veto by then-president Ford.

Wednesday's actions mean consumer groups stand a good chance of getting the agency they've lobbied for eight years, years.

The new bills are almost identical to the 1975 versions. Senate aides rate their chance of passage by both houses as excellent.

Presidential aide Simon Lazarus said the president's proposals are "substantially or completely met by provisions which appear in one or the other of those bills."

Gene Research Guideline Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration Wednesday urged that, despite potential dangers, recombinant DNA research be allowed to go forward under interim safety guidelines while stricter government regulations are drawn.

DNA is the genetic material that carries the characteristics of life, and recombinant research involves transplanting the such material from one micro-organism to another.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano outlined the proposed administration bill on DNA research before the Senate health and scientific research sub-committee.

Califano said recombinant DNA is a "scientific tool of extraordinary potential" but one which poses risks "of uncertain magnitude."

Recombinant DNA could alter a micro-organism in an unpredictable and possible undesirable way.

Should the altered substance escape, he said, "it might cause disease or modify the environment."

Although some scientists have proposed a total ban on DNA research until the safety questions can be answered, Califano said the administration wants the research to continue under safety guidelines drafted last year by the National Institute of Health.

Government intervention into the controversial subject is unusual, Califano said, but added that legislation is needed not only to safeguard the public but also to assure "that basic research in this potentially fruitful area is allowed to continue."

Until more information on the nature of the risks is available, Califano said, the administration believes "the best course is to allow recombinant DNA research to go forward — but only under strict conditions to insure safety."

U.S. Flood Victims Head Home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Thousands of Appalachia flood refugees have begun returning to their water-ravaged homes as government agencies set up to feed and assist them.

President Carter declared parts of southeastern Kentucky a disaster area Wednesday after a White House official toured the stricken counties.

Officials in West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee also were seeking federal disaster declarations to make flood victims eligible for government assistance.

The U.S. Geological Survey said that although some rivers were still to crest today, waters have begun receding across the region.

Warmer temperatures also were to provide a respite from the cold and snow that followed the Monday downpour and resultant flooding, blamed for at least 14 deaths.

Among those fleeing the waters in West Virginia was Lillian Mounts, who said her house in Williamson was washed into the street.

"We were stranded on the third floor of the Masonic Temple," she said. "The water got up into the second floor and we had to stay there for 24 hours. My little girl didn't have anything to eat or drink all that time."

DYING MAN BLAMES N-TEST

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Paul Cooper is dying of leukemia. His doctors say it's because he stood unprotected about 3,000 yards from a nuclear test blast in the Nevada desert nearly 20 years ago.

But the Veterans Administration (VA) says the disease — which his doctors say will kill him any day—was not caused by radiation from the blast and has turned down Cooper's request for $820 a month in disability pay.

An army report says the purpose of the exercise was to test soldiers' reactions to the blast, which was about twice the size of the nuclear devices that devasted Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Cooper said in an interview Tuesday that he was in a company of 250 men who were marched to within 3,000 yards of a 700-foot steel tower containing the nuclear device.

Dressed in fatigues and without protective masks, he said, they were told to face away from the tower with their hands over their eyes.

When the device was detonated, Cooper said, he could see the bones in his hands "like an x-ray," even though his eyes were closed.

"The heat was quite intense and almost unbearable for 10 to 20 seconds," he said. "We were then told to turn around. We did, and watched the fireball rise into the sky."

Cooper said the resulting shock waves knocked most of the men to the ground.

Teamsters' Pep Rally Picketed

By HELEN DEWAR
Washington Post

WASHINGTON

Teamsters Union officials staged a huge pep rally here Wednesday to help improve their image with the union's two million members.

But what the world saw was grim-faced sergeants-at-arms blocking the entrances, dissidents picketing outside and reports of a rank-and-file complaint seeking the ouster of Teamster president Frank Fitzsimmons.

No one got a chance to see what was later described as a resounding unanimous vote of confidence from the 2,000 participants for Fitzsimmons and other union leaders inside the closed doors of the meeting room at the Washington Hilton Hotel. Nor did people see what participants later described as a persuasive defense against media criticism and government attacks.

Instead, they saw pickets outside the hotel carrying signs reading "Clean Up Your Act" and "Throw the bums out."

Seeking to upstage the meeting even before it started, three rank-and-file members affiliated with PROD, a dissident organization of Teamsters members, went to the union's Washington headquarters to file charges aimed at Fitzsimmons' removal.

The charges — alleging misuse of union funds, nepotism and hiring of "disreputable individuals" with organized crime connections — were dismissed by a Teamsters spokesman as a publicity gimmick.

Fitzsimmons declined to discuss the charges with reporters as he entered the meeting, but issued two statements, immediately before and after the three-hour session, assailing press coverage of the union.

In the statements, Fitzsimmons, who took over as Teamsters president in 1971, also adamantly denied speculation that he may resign and said he will be a candidate for re-election at the union's next convention in 1981.

The meeting, which was arranged amid tight secrecy over its purpose, was called to clarify what officials described as "confusion" among rank-and-file members over grand jury investigations, charges by union dissidents, unfavorable publicity and government action to remove Fitzsimmons and other union officials as trustees of the union's largest pension fund.

Invitations went out to all 800 Teamsters locals, and about 2,000 of roughly 7,500 union officials from the United States and Canada attended, according to a union spokesman.

One participant said most of the discussion at the meeting was devoted to assurances that the pension fund was sound.

BRONX BANK ROBBER PUSHES LUCK, LOSES

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Robbing a bank in New York City is hardly news. But robbing two banks across the street from one another on the same afternoon? That's news, and, in this case, bad news for a suspect identified as Richard Deveuto.

Police said Deveuto, 34, got away with $8,000 from a bank in the Bronx where he flashed a hand grenade.

Flushed with success, Deveuto went across the street to the second bank, where he again displayed the grenade and demanded money.

By that time, police had arrived on the scene and seized Deveuto.

Three-Year 'Pill' Developed

CHICAGO (AP) — A birth-control method involving a single injection that might be effective for as long as three years is ready for testing on humans, a medical researcher says.

Gopi Gupta, senior scientist at the Population Council in New York, said Wednesday a tiny pellet that can be injected under the skin of either men or women may prevent conception for up to three years.

He said the pellet differs from other experimental under-the-skin contraceptives because it does not require surgical removal after its period of effectiveness expires.

If someone injected with the pellet changes his or her mind during its life span, however, it can be removed by a minor incision.

Gupta cautioned that it will take several years before scientists can determine whether the pellet is safe and effective in humans.

Gupta said the pellet, which prevented conception for up to four months in experimental rats and monkeys, is about the size of a grain of rice and contains the widely used oral contraceptive hormone d-norgestrel and minute amounts of cholesterol.

U.S. Consumer Group Seeks Candy Ad Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. consumer group, citing the estimated 20,000 television commercials the average child sees every year, wants the government to ban most TV ads for candy.

Action for Children's Television, which filed the petition with the Federal Trade Commission Wednesday, also lodged specific complaints against four candy companies.

The group cited commercials it said unduly influence children to eat candy to the detriment of their teeth and health.

Children tend to prefer foods advertised on television, the group said.

"The child may believe the entire commercial message, parrot its words and remember the name of the product without appreciationg the motive of the advertiser," ACT said in a statement.

ACT President Peggy Charron said the group was hopeful of getting some affirmative response from the commission because the new chairman, Michael Pertschuk, made a reference to sugar-coated approaches in his recent Senate confirmation hearing.

Pertschuk said at the time he has a "love-hate relationship" with advertising and some ads "drive me up the wall; hammering home false slices of life, trafficking in greed, envy, loneliness, alienation, sexual insecurity."

THE FOUR CHAIRMEN — Al Todd, Hugh Watson, Gerry Walkey and Bud Simpson — practise their four-part harmony in preparation for the annual Barbershop Quartet Show in the McPherson Playhouse next month. The four are members of the Village Squires locally and affiliated with 9,500 other quartets around the world. The international society celebrates its 39th anniversary this month.

Harmony Reigns Next Month

Locally, the Victoria Village Squires hold an annual Barbershop quartet show in the McPherson Playhouse. They are a chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, the largest organized male singing group in the world with 38,000 members.

When the Squires hold their show the middle of next month they will be looking for new members, so any men interested in joining a harmony group are encouraged to come out to the auditions program May 13 and 14.

In addition to the social aspects of the organization, members over the years have conributed almost $2-million internationally to a charity that helps children with hearing and speech handicaps.

Everglades Ski Hill Proposed

MIAMI (UPI) — Near the edge of the flat, steamy Florida Everglades, an Atlanta promoter says he will build a ski resort.

Bruce Kauffman, president of Ski Venture Inc. of Atlanta, announced Tuesday he plans to spend $10 million on a 150-foot. man-made mountain with artificial snow near U.S. 1 a mile south of Florida City, 20 miles south of Miami.

COMMUNISTS PREFER TOP CLASS CUISINE

PARIS (UPI) — French Communists may be more traditional-minded than their Socialist allies or right and centre party opponents — at least when it comes to food.

According to a nationwide food habits survey published by the French culinary critics Henri Gault and Christian Millau, French Communists are fond of good wine, rich dishes in sauce, Scotch whisky, refined home cooking, goose liver and caviar.

Their Socialist allies instead go in for broiled steaks without sauce, possibly "Slimness Cuisine" dishes without fat or flour, and perhaps caviar for celebrating.

DC-3 Crash Kills 10

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Ten persons, all scientists, were killed Tuesday when a DC3 survey aircraft crashed into a fog-shrouded hilltop about 120 miles north of Madras, India's Samachar news agency reported today.

The scientists, who belonged to the Indian government atomic energy commission, were engaged in conducting air survey operations for collecting data on natural resources, land use patterns and mineral exploration.

Samachar said the bodies were charred beyond recognition and, quoting eyewitnesses, said the aircraft hit the hilltop in "zero visibility" and burst into flames.

MOSCOW TAXI BOYCOTT

MOSCOW (AP) — Angry over sharp fare increases, Muscovites are deserting the city's taxicabs in the first major consumer boycott in memory in the Soviet capital.

Taxi drivers who once cruised the streets "bestowing" rides on customers who begged and bribed for lifts now line up by the score at taxi stands.

The state controlled taxi monopoly said the increases, which went into effect April 1, were justified by better service.

It now costs the equivalent of 41 cents to travel a mile, double the old rate. The basic fee for starting a trip has also risen, to 23 cents from 13 cents.

The government-controlled press has carried no complaints about the fare increases and the consumer boycott is not organized. The boycott apparently is the result of thousands of individual Muscovites deciding that a ride in one of the city's 14,600 cabs is just not worth the price.

He Knows Hotels from the Ground Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victor Burt had his first taste of hotel work when he was 14.

He was a valet-runner, picking up clothes for pressing at Toronto's King Edward Hotel.

It was a 14-hour day; the pay, $1.50, but he pocketed an additional $7 in tips which seemed a fortune.

Now, 30 years later, Burt has returned to Toronto to manage the Harbour Castle Hotel, the third-largest in Canada.

Since that first job at the King Edward, Burt has been a hotel gardener, golf caddy, room-service waiter, bartender, room clerk, restaurant manager and hotel manager.

The jobs have taken him to various parts of Canada, the United States, the Bahamas and Australia, where two of his four children were born.

Burt attended St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S. and Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto and took the Hilton hotel chain's training courses.

But he said the only way to learn the hotel business is to do the work.

Burt's move to Toronto came after 11 years as manager of the Hotel Vancouver. He is widely credited with restoring a reputation the grand old Georgia Street edifice had lost.

He said the hotel's owner, Canadian National, spent $8 million between 1964 and 1967 to modernize the hotel and refurbish the 562 guest rooms.

The Hotel Vancouver was opened in 1939 under the joint ownership of Canadian National and Canadian Pacific. In 1962 Canadian Pacific sold its interest to CN and two years later Hilton International was brought in on a management contract.

Hilton has a similar arrangement with the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal and now is stepping in to manage the Harbour Castle on Toronto's waterfront.

The hotel, which is owned by the Campeau Corp. of Ottawa, is being renamed the Toronto (Harbour Castle) Hilton.

A spokesman for the corporation said the luxury hotel has been losing money and cited stiff competition and a drop in convention business.

Hilton's involvement with the Harbour Castle gives the international hotel group its first convention centre in the Toronto area.

Pilots Receiving On-Ground Training

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada pilots are getting takeoff, flying and landing training without leaving the ground.

The airline's aircraft simulator recently added a new dimension—an electronic visual system that lets pilot trainees look out of the simulator's cockpit and see the airport, its runway lights, terminal buildings and even fog.

Computer-generated images are projected on to a darkened mirror which replaces the cockpit windshield. Captain Charles Simpson, Air Canada's vice-presiden of operations, says almost all training now can be done in the simulator rather than in real aircraft.

"We can do things in the simulator which would be impossible for us to do in an aircraft without placing it at extreme hazard," Simpson said.

Marchand Must Answer Court

OTTAWA (CP) — A provincial court judge has ruled that Senator Jean Marchand, a former cabinet minister, must answer questions in court about certain discussions among cabinet members.

Marchand has been testifying at a preliminary hearing into a charge of unlawful conspiracy laid against Senator Louis Giguere and two Quebec businessmen.

Judge B. T. Ryan ruled that executive privilege is not involved and Senator Marchand must answer prosecution questions about discussions among cabinet members concerning government influence peddling.

Giguere and Quebec businessmen Jean Dionne and David Belhumeur face three charges of unlawful conspiracy to obtain advertising work for Canadian Advertising Agency Ltd., and Publicor Ltd., a holding company. The companies are also charged.

The conspiracy charges alleged payments of $87,000 to Senator Giguere between 1965 and 1973 contrary to sections of the Criminal Code dealing with giving money to government officials in return for exercising influence in gaining government business.

Crown witnesses appearing at the preliminary hearing include Eric Kierans, a former finance minister; Leon Simard, a Montreal financier, and Paul Boudreau, press counsellor for the Canadian embassy in Paris and former vice-president of Canadian Advertising Agency Ltd.

Ottawa Exodus Begins

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs began streaming out of Ottawa Wednesday after the New Democrats dropped a threat to deny them an 11-day Easter vacation.

The NDP forced the Commons to take a recorded vote on the motion to adjourn for the holiday only to get swamped 141 to 11 by the Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and Social Credit members.

When the MPs return Monday, April 18, they resume debate on last Thursday's budget. It was the budget, which contained minor tax cuts and major concessions to business, that accounted for much of the NDP's opposition to adjourning.

Only NDP members spoke in debate Wednesday.

Lawyer Stu Leggatt (NDP — New Westminster) said the budget, "which is clearly inadequate," should have been the object of a concerted attack by the Opposition.

But instead, the opposition parties have spent some of the budget debate attacking each other.

They should have also forced the government "to sit here and mediate next week about the one million unemployed," he added.

Clamps Kept On CBC Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission is keeping a tight lid on specific information about its inquiry into the CBC, despite earlier comments by CRTC chairman Harry Boyle that he wanted the inquiry public.

Guy Lefebvre, top administrator of the inquiry into the government-owned corporation, refused Wednesday to make public about 250 letters of comments about the CBC and said it has not yet been decided whether the letters, a key part of the inquiry, will ever be made public.

Lefebvre said it also has not been decided whether the inquiry will include public hearings.

When asked almost a month ago about the inquiry holding public hearings, Boyle told a Commons committee "I'm in favor of doing it all in public."

Lefebvre also refused to disclose what specific areas of the CBC the inquiry will be examining, the number of workers hired specifically for the inquiry which is to report by July 1, or whether any politicians have responded to Boyle's requests for comments about the CBC.

But later, Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve told the Commons it is her understanding that some federal politicians have written the CRTC about the CBC, although there is no government policy requiring that they do so. She did not release any names.

The inquiry was called at Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion following a spate of harsh criticism by cabinet ministers and other top Liberals that Radio-Canada, CBC's French-language service, was filled with pro-separatists.

Asked why the letters cannot be made public, Lefebvre said their release might prejudice the results of the inquiry and the confidentiality of the letter writers' must be respected.

Lefebvre acknowledged that all other letters of complaints about broadcasters written to the CRTC are open to the public, but said keeping the CBC letters private is not a departure from policy because it is a "special inquiry."

Lack of French Cited For Whelan's Woes

GOV'T ACTION HINTED ON JOBLESS ISSUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday the government will take direct action to generate jobs later this year if private business fails to use new tax breaks to boost productive activity.

He was asked in the Commons whether the government will use "direct federal expenditure" to fight unemployment if it appears by September that budget incentives are not working.

Macdonald said Wednesday that, "having made room for the private sector in terms of tax changes . . . if the private sector does not take this opportunity for the purpose of creating further economic growth in Canada, there obviously will be pressure."

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says his troubles with Quebec farmers over federal dairy policy last year resulted in part from his inability to speak Fench.

Whelan said opponents of the government had spread "lies" in the province about the policy that he could not deal with personally because of his language limitations.

"I was not able to go in there and confront them in their own language," he told a news conference.

Whelan, who comes from the Windsor area, said he grew up in a region where about 30 per cent of the people are of French origin, but had no chance of learning French in elementary school and no real opportunity in high school.

Asked who is to blame for his lack of opportunity, the minister replied: "I blame it on every conservative government since confederation."

He also said he believes Ontario has "failed miserably" in its commitment to confederation in this regard.

A number of other provinces had also been highly critical of the 1976-1977 federal dairy policy, but were less graphic in their protests.

TOP BRASS FLEE PETRO-CAN POSTS

CALGARY (CP) — Two senior executives of Petro-Canada, the federal government's oil company, have resigned over differences about the company's direction.

Donald Axford, senior vice-president, exploration strategy for Petro-Canada and R. H. Edmunds, southern region exploration manager for Petro-Canada subsidiary, resigned last week.

Both men refused to comment on their resignations, but industry sources said both were unhappy with the way Petro-Canada was operating its exploration activities.

Axford, who has been with Petro-Canada since its inception in 1975, is the most senior of Petro-Canada officials to leave.

Other executives who have recently left include Ernest Drayton, controller; David Scrim; manager of corporate planning; and Marie Choquette, a senior civil servant involved in the public relations department.

William Hopper, Petro-Canada president, confirmed the resignations but said he did not think there was anything unique about the staff turnover.

Chances for Growth Stymied in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The election of a separatist government in Quebec has badly hurt the province's prospects for economic growth this year, says an economic forecast prepared by the Bank of Montreal.

Many of the province's major industries will do well this year compared with last year, but the new investment frightened off by the possibility of separatism will more than offset this, the forecast says.

John Parish, the bank's chief economist said in an interview Wednesday that Quebec's growth rate will be "at least" one per cent lower this year then it would have been if businessmen hadn't been concerned about the prospect of separation.

The Conference Board in Canada, an Ottawa-based economic research organization, predicted Wednesday that economic growth in Quebec will be 2.9 per cent in real terms — after adjustment for inflation — this year.

It forecasts growth of three per cent for Canada.

Parish said he couldn't predict what the province's growth rate would have been without the separatism issue, but added that it might have been above the national average.

A recent survey of the bank's customers indicated that 34 per cent of them have changed their investment plans since the election of the Parti Quebecois government Nov. 15.

What did you do with your gang last weekend?

If you've been looking for something the whole family can get involved in, you'd do well to look into Honda's dual purpose XL's.

Honda XL's are street legal for the road, yet tough enough to take on anything off the road. So you can explore old trails, or no trails at all and open up a whole new world with your family.

You can take an XL camping or to the cottage for all kinds of extra vacation fun. And back home, there's no better way to get to work or school.

There's an XL to suit everyone, from the smaller XL-75 for teenagers and beginners, to the bigger XL's for mom and dad. Each is powered by a dependable Honda four-stroke engine you'll be able to count on for years to come.

And the price is right. The 1977 XL-75 is $689,* the XL-100 is $889,* the XL-125 is $1,048* and the XL-175 is $1,199*.

And because Honda has made more bikes than anyone else, you can feel confident knowing your family is riding on the world's best reputation.

Breakfast Special Honey Buns

When you wake in the morning your body has gone without food for several hours. Favoring yourself with a good healthy breakfast will supply your body with the nourishment it needs.

Without breakfast, the system slows down and becomes sluggish so that you become tired and listless and unable to function as well at work or school.

Vary your breakfast foods occasionally to help make your morning meal a little more interesting. Try this delicious breakfast bread made by adding corn flakes and raisins to a basic yeast dough and baking with a honey-nut mixture which becomes the sweet topping.

HONEY BUNS

BUNS
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter, softened
- 1 cake (1 oz.) yeast
- ¼ cup lukewarm water
- 1½ cups Corn flakes
- 2 cups regular all-purpose flour
- 1 egg
- ¼ cup seedless raisins

Filling
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon

Topping
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup liquid honey
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ cup chopped nuts

Scald milk. Remove from heat. Stir in 2 tablespoons sugar, the salt and 2 tablespoons butter. Cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Set aside.

Stir together corn flakes cereal and 1 cup of the flour. Add scalded milk mixture and yeast. Mix well. Beat in egg and raisins. Gradually add remaining flour to form soft dough, mixing well. Place in greased bowl, turning once to grease surface. Coiver lightly with tea towel. Let rise in warm place until dough has doubled in volume (1½ to 2 hours).

Punch dough down. On lightly floured surface, roll dough to 14 x 10-inch rectangle. Brush with 1 tablespoon butter. Sprinkle with a misture of 2 tablespoons sugar and the cinnamon. Starting with shorter end, roll up lengthwise, jelly roll fashion. Seal edge. Cut into ten 1-inch slices. Set aside.

For honey topping, melt 2 tablespoons butter. Stir in honey, 2 tablespoons sugar and the nuts. Spread evenly in 8-inch round cake pan. Arrange rolls, cut side down, over honey mixture.

Cover lightly. Let rise in warm place until dough has doubled in volume (30 to 40 minutes). Bake in oven at 375 deg. F. (190 deg. C) about 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from oven. Invert on serving plate.

Make 10 servings.

HOW TO EAT A PAINTED EGG

The modern custom of decorating and giving eggs at Eastertime is regarded by Christians as a symbol of the Resurrection, but history reveals the custom originated in pre-Christian times. The custom was already established in China in 722 BC. One provident chieftain accumulated supplies of painted eggs and set the fashion of dispensing them as gifts to friends and acquaintances. Persian history also maintained that at the beginning of every religious year, each spring, travellers were to give colorfully dyed and painted eggs to friends and strangers alike. Similar traditons were carried out by the Egyptians, Romans and Greeks.

In keeping with the rest of the festival, egg decorating this Easter can be a lot of fun for the entire family.

If you plan to eat the eggs soon after they're decorated, use hard-cooked eggs. If you wish to save the eggs, they should be "blown" before being decorated.

Before blowing eggs, let them stand at room temperature or a while, then wash and dry them. Pierce both ends of the egg with a darning needle. Enlarge the holes to about one-eighth of an inch and insert the needle to pierce the yolk.

Holding the egg over a bowl with the large end up, blow into the hole, so that the inside contents are blown out of the egg and into the bowl.

The liquid egg may be used for scrambled eggs, omelettes, cakes or puddings. Check some of the suggestions below.

Rinse the empty egg with water and blow through it once again to clean. Let the eggs dry before decorating.

To decorate the eggs, use dye, paint, crayons, marking pens, ribbons, yarn, paper, fabric swatches, beads, felt tissue or seeds — just stretch your imagination to its fullest. You'll probably discover hundreds of ways to create an egg that's exclusively yours.

FRENCH OMELETTE
- 2 Tbs. margarine
- 6 eggs, beaten
- 1-3 cup milk.
- Salt and pepper
- ¼ pound sharp, cheddar cheese, shredded

Melt margarine in skillet over low heat. Combine eggs, milk and seasonings, pour into skillet and cook slowly. As egg mixture sets, lift slightly with a spatula to allow uncooked portion to flow underneath. Sprinkle with shredded cheese on top; fold in half and serve. Yield: 2 servings.

BREAKFAST SALAD
- ¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 1 green pepper, diced
- 1 cup chopped green onion
- 8 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup shredded crisp lettuce
- Salt and pepper

Saute mushrooms in a little melted butter. Add green pepper and onion, saute 2 to 3 minutes. Add beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring occasionally over medium heat. Add lettuce just before eggs are set. Serve immediately. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Hearty Hungarian Main Course Soup

- 2 medium cooking onions, chopped
- 3 tbsp. butter (or margarine or oil)
- 2 lbs. stewing beef cut into 1" cubes
- ½ lb. beef liver, cubed
- 2½ tsp. salt
- 1½ tsp. paprika
- 2 green peppers, cored and coarsely chopped
- 1 19-oz. can tomatoes (or 2 large, fresh, chopped when in season)
- 2 long carrots scrubbed and diced
- 3 medium potatoes, pared and diced
- 1 tbsp. parsley flakes (or fresh chopped parsley)
- 2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 6 cups water.

In a very large, heavy frying pan or soup kettle saute onion and green peppers in butter (or margarine or oil) until limp but not brown. Add beef and liver cubes and stir to brown them on all sides. Add all remaining ingredients and combine thoroughly. Cover, bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 1½ to 2½ hours or until tender.

Serve very hot with bread.

Hawaiian Steak Teriyaki

By MARY MOORE

A request from Rie Van S. for Teriyaki Steak as served in Hawaii was answered but I have tested another recipe which is longer but better.

Steak Teriyaki is served in two ways: on a skewer and broiled or broiled in the piece.

I tried it on guests both ways and they said the skewer method was better by a slight edge.

STEAK TERIYAKI
(For Rie Van S.)
(Serves Approximately 5)

Marinade:

½ tsp. powered ginger
½ tsp. garlic powder
2 tsp. sugar
⅓ cup soy sauce
⅓ cup pineapple juice or sherry

Note No. 1: If you use sirloin tip I would advise you to sprinkle it with tenderizer on one side and let it soak ½ hour. Turn it over and repeat other side.

In a 10" pie plate or shallow dish to fit steak measure the ginger, garlic powder, sugar, soy sauce, pineapple juice or sherry. Carefully mix to blend. Remove all fat and bone from steak and place steak in marinade. Marinate 2 hours turning steak over at halftime. Note No. 2: If you can plan well in advance marinate the steak 48 hours, covered, in refrigerator. Naturally it is much better flavored.

Drain steak and place on board. To make skewer teriyaki cut into 1½" pieces. Impale about 6 pieces on steel skewers. (I used 9" long skewers.) As each is ready place on greased broiler pan. Have broiler burner very hot and broil until top side is golden brown. Using pot holder turn each over and broil other side. Time depends on whether you want your steak rare, medium or well done.

Have ready cooked rice on each dinner plate. Place a skewerful of steak on it and with a knife slide all steak off the remove skewer.

To broil whole teriyaki steak lift from marinade, drain, snip edges with scissors to prevent curling and place on broiler and broil under very hot preheated broiler burner until golden brown and sizzling. Turn over and broil other side. As I said above for broiled teriyaki timing depends on your taste — rare, medium or well done.

The skewered method is how they serve it in Hawaii and is better. Note No. 3: Discard leftover marinade for you will realize some of the raw meat juices have seeped into it.

MUSHROOMS BECHAMEL

12 to 16 oz. whole mushrooms, scrubbed
1½ tbsp. margarine
2 tbsp. flour
1 cup hot water
1 sachet chicken soup base (or cube)
¼ chopped parsley.

In top part of double boiler over direct heat blend margarine and flour, then stir in water and chicken soup base until quite thick. Add scrubbed whole mushrooms, place over boiling water in bottom of double boiler, cover and cook 15 minutes. Add parsley. Note: The moisture in the mushrooms thins the sauce a little. This is a perfect accompaniment for any beef dish and makes the most of mushrooms.

Reducing Fat Intake: Three Steps to Health

The recent Food Consumption Patterns Report from Ottawa states that many Canadians consume too much fat. Do you have any tips for lowering our fat intake?

ANSWER:

(a) Choose lean cuts of meat, trim off visible fat and discard the fat that cooks out of meat.

(b) Avoid fried foods and use cooking methods that help to reduce fat content such as baking, broiling and boiling.

(c) Decrease the amount of visible fat incorporated into foods (butter and margarine have similar caloric contents, and while the type of fat in these products differ, it is more important to consider the total quantity consumed).

(d) Select foods that are relatively low in fat. Stress should be placed on total reduction of high fat foods rather than choice between high fat foods.

QUESTION:

My two-year-old son does not like meat. What else can I offer him and how much does he need each day?

ANSWER:

The Meat and Meat Alternates group includes meat, fish and poultry, eggs, peanut butter and dried peas, beans and lentils. Three or more small servings daily are required by a pre-school child. A workable guideline to follow is that one tablespoon of food for each year of life equals one serving.

QUESTION:

Are old or new potatoes the best buy?

ANSWER:

The exception would be during the summer when new potatoes are widely available. The Vitamin C content of potatoes decreases during storage. Potatoes used after they are recently dug have 26 milligrams Vitamin C per cup. After three months storage the Vitamin C content drops to 12 milligrams per cup and after six months to 8 milligrams per cup.

NAVY BEAN SOUP

1 smoked ham bone
1 lb. dried white (navy) beans
1 tsp. salt
½ bay leaf
1 medium onion, chopped
12 c. water
1 chicken bouillon cube
¼ c. chopped celery leaves
¼ tsp. MSG

Mix all ingredients. Soak 2 hours or over night if room is cool. Simmer covered, about 5 to 7 hours or until beans cook down to a puree and any meat falls from bones. Remove bone. Taste before serving to see if it requires more salt.

Serve this as a main course soup with toasted rye or whole wheat bread or with homemade whole wheat rolls. Make a generous bowlful of green salad with Roquefort dressing and a magnificent blueberry pie. Serve a generous slab of Cheddar cheese with the pie.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BREAKFAST AIDS STUDY

Over the past few years, a number of studies have added to our understanding of how hunger and malnutrition affect learning and behavior, particularly in children. Many of these are summarized in an easily understandable way in a new booklet called "Malnutrition, Learning and Behavior," published by the Institute of Child Health and Development, a section of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Hunger and malnutirtion are not the same things, and the word hunger itself can have many meanings. To almost all of us fortunate well-fed Americans, "hunger" means that empty, but faint feeling we get when we have had only juice for breakfast, skipped lunch and have three hours to wait for dinner.

But to much of the world's population, "hunger" means something a great deal more serious. It is undernutrition — the more or less permanent condition of not having enough food, a hunger of the cells themselves and never-satisfied appetite.

Malnutrition is something often just as serious. It produces specific physical symptoms that may be caused not only by a prolonged lack of calories but also of one or more specific nutrients. In this kind of malnutrition, we see growth failure in children and weight loss in adults, such deficiency diseases as anemia, caused by iron or folic acid deficiency and rickets, caused by lack of vitamin D.

Deficiency Diseases Not Rare

Certain deficiency diseases, such as iron-deficiency anemia, are not rare in North America. Much of our malnutrition problem, however, stems from too much, rather than too little, food. Atherosclerosis, diabetes, hypertension and other of the degenerative diseases are associated with overindulgence in the wrong kinds of foods — those high in fat, sugar and salt. In fact, about 40 per cent of our population is overweight or actually obese because of too many calories.

The long-term effects of the first kind of malnutrition on learning and behavior are still being debated. Laboratory experiments show that a chronic lack of calories during pregnancy and in early infancy may lead to a smaller brain size and to fewer nerve connections. But a 20-year follow-up study of Dutch men who were born right after the Nazi-imposed winter of starvation early in the Second World War showed no long-term effects, because prior to and after the war, the Dutch had a basically good diet.

Other studies, such as one done in Mexico on chronically malnourished children, show that it is extremely difficult to be sure just how many learning problems are specifically due to malnutrition. Children from disadvantaged families with a low social status, little money, little education and little health care are profoundly and adversely affected by these social and environmental factors as well as by poor nutrition.

Hunger Pangs Come Later

It is estimated that about one-fourth of all North American school children go to school without having eaten breakfast. Many of these youngsters would have eaten breakfast if it had been available: there is no question about it, these children are hungry when they arrive at achool. And then there are those who skipped breakfast because they were not hungry when they got up, who often feel hunger pangs by midmorning as well, for children require food more often than adults.

There are still many unanswered questions about the ways in which this type of hunger affects learning and behavior. Be that as it may, many experts agree that it does influence behavior. For one thing, it increases a child's nervousness, irritability and inattentiveness in the classroom. These in turn produce a disinterest and inability to concentrate which can contribute to learning failure, especially when the child habitually arrives at school hungry.

Ideally, of course, a family should have established a routine of having a good breakfast. Since this is far from an ideal world, however, we should probably provide a school breakfast or better, a mid-morning snack to be served all children, whether they have eaten breakfast or not, to get them through the rest of the morning in top form. Such programs will certainly relieve the first kind of hunger.

They can provide extra stores of specific nutrients that may be low in a child's regular diet. In the long run, they may help to prevent the pattern of hunger-disenterest-learning failure from developing. And this will benefit all of us, since the future of our nation depends upon its citizens being educated, concerned, and involved.

Grapefruit Mould

1⅔ cups drained membraneless grapefruit sections (3 medium grapefruit).
⅔ cup grapefruit juice (obtained from draining sections)
1 3-oz. pkg. cherry jelly powder.

Patiently pare grapefruit over a bowl to catch juice. With sharp paring knife cut out each section. Place in lange sieve over another bowl. Squeeze leftover membrane by hand to save as much juice as possible. Gently press grapefruit sections in sieve to get the 2-3 cup of juice you need.

Bring juice to boil. Remove from heat. Immediately stir in jelly powder until you are sure it is dissolved. Add grapefruit sections. Pour into bowl or mould and chill until firm. If to be used for dessert pour into individual stemmed glasses. If to be used as one of your favorites a colorful jellied "salad" — turn out on fancy plate to serve with a main course. If used for dessert pass 10 per cent pouring cream.

Irish Cooking Simple, but with a Flair

craig claiborne

Although only a few generations removed from the land of the Yeatses, the O'Gradys and Mullaneys and O'Dohertys, I have, to my enormous regret, set foot but once on the Emerald Isle. But over the years I have known many acquaintances recently arrived from Ireland and have read many books on that land's cooking.

My one brief visit to Ireland was an unforgettable one, memorable chiefly for three things.

It was during the Second World War and I landed in Dublin, a sailor, young, innocent and with the heart of a deer. It was in spring and my broadest remembrance of the Irish countryside is that of a paysage the glory and likes of which I had never known before.

My silliest memory is that of a Sunday afternoon when another sailor and I decided that a nice cup of hot Irish tea, with Dublin pastries, would not be at all amiss. We took ourselves to a modest but enthusiastically endorsed tearoom, but hold! There was at the entrance a sign: "No prams allowed."

We stared at each other uneasily. We had both been conditioned earlier in Norfolk, Va., when signs on some local lawns cautioned: "Dogs and sailors keep off the grass." So, not quite certain whether we were prams or not, we slowly turned and walked away.

Only later, when we recounted this tale to a local friend, did she explain that pram was Irish for a baby carriage or perambulator, and no offense intended.

The third remembrance was of the profound and unstinting hospitality of the Irish. Utter strangers would stop us on the streeet and invite us into their homes for lunch or dinner or to pass the night. And they offered us such meagre refreshment as they had in cellar or cupboard.

A concentrated study of Irish cookery will show that it has over the centuries been based on the soil and the sea, and some of the most easily cultivated, least sophisticated products of the soil. The basics include potatoes and leeks, turnips, onions and carrots. Pigs are probably the easiest of all barnyard animals to cultivate and a variety of pork meats, including the feet, liver, ham and bacon are prominent in the Irish kitchen. The two most luxurious and covetable of Irish ingredients are from the local waters; these are salmon and prawns, especially those of Dublin Bay.

Dairy foods figure prominently in the Irish diet. Much use is made of buter and milk, both sweet milk and buttermilk. The most famous pastries are, of course, Irish soda bread, which is much like the soda breads of the American South, and scones. Irish oatmeal is famous. And one of the nation's finest and tastiest dishes is a spiced beef which is, in fact, a kind of corned beef.

IRISH COFFEE

1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
3 cups piping hot, freshly brewed, strong coffee (see note)
12 teaspoons brown sugar or more to taste
8 ounces Irish whiskey.

1. Whip the cream and as it starts to thicken beat in the granulated sugar. Do not whip the cream until quite stiff. It should still be fairly stiff but capable of being poured. Refrigerate briefly.

2. Pour half a cup of coffee into each of six hot stem glasses and add two teaspoons of brown sugar to each serving. Or add more sugar if desired.

3. When the sugar dissolves, add one and one-half ounces Irish whiskey to each serving. Stir briefly and pour in whipped cream to the top of each glass.

Yield: six servings.

Note: The proportions listed here are largely arbitrary. For example, increase or decrease the volume of coffee, sugar and whiskey, according to taste.

BOILED AND BAKED BACON WITH CABBAGE

20 cups water
2 small peeled onions
2 carrots, scraped
2½ pounds cabbage
Salt to taste
12 whole cloves
¼ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons fresh bread crumbs
Freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Place the slab of bacon in a dish and add cold water to cover. Let stand overnight.

2. Drain the bacon and place in a kettle. Add the water, onions and carrots and bring to the boil. Cover and simmer one and one-half hours or until quite tender.

3. Meanwhile, core the cabbage and cut the head into eight wedges. Shortly before the bacon is cooked, place the wedges in a kettle with cold water to cover and salt to taste. Bring to the boil and simmer 15 minutes or longer, depending on the desired degree of doneness.

4. When the bacon is tender, drain it. Carefully slice off and discard the rind. Dot the top of the bacon with cloves. Blend with brown sugar and crumbs and sprinkle over the top of the bacon. Place under the broiler until nicely glazed. Serve cut into thin slices. Drain the cabbage, sprinkle with pepper and serve with the bacon.

Yield: six or more servings.

IRISH LAMB STEW

3 pounds meaty neck and shoulder of lamb bones
6 cups water
Salt to taste
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoons dried
4 sprigs fresh parsley
½ to three-quarters pound rutabaga, cut into half-inch cubes, about two cups
1 cup finely chopped onion
½ pound carrots, scraped and cut into quarter-inch cubes, about three-quarters cup
1¾ pounds potatoes, peeled and cut into ¾-inch cubes
¼ cup finely chopped parsley.

1. Place the lamb in a kettle and add the water. Bring to the boil and add the salt, bay leaf, thyme and parsley. Cook 45 minutes.

2. Add the rutabaga, onion, carrots, celery and potatoes. Cover and cook one hour. Add the parsley and serve hot.

ORANGE BAVARIAN CROWNING TOUCH

Anyone who thinks orange juice is just for breakfast is missing many opportunities for creative, colorful meals. This regal Orange Bavarian molded dessert, prepared with frozen Florida orange juice concentrate, makes an impressive finale for a special occasion luncheon or dinner.

ORANGE BAVARIAN

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar, divided
2 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt.
¾ cup cold water
1 can (6 ounces), frozen Florida orange juice concentrate, thawed, undiluted
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
2 cups (1 pint) chilled Florida orange and grapefruit sections, drained.

Mix together gelatine ¼ cup sugar and salt in saucepan. Beat together egg yolks and water; stir into gelatin mixture. Place over low heat; stir constantly 4 or 5 minutes until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat; stir in undiluted orange concentrate. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatin mixture, fold in whipped cream. Turn into 5-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve with orange and grapefruit sections. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and John (not his real name) is 29. We've been dating steadily for two years.

John is a fireman paramedic, which brings me to my problem. About three months ago John's squad responded to a car accident in which a very pretty 26-year-old blonde was slightly injured. (I'll call her Nancy.) Nancy wasn't seriously hurt, but she was hospitalized for 24 hours and then released. John happened to be the paramedic who treated her at the scene of the accident, and since then Nancy can't do enough to repay him for "saving her life."

She found out his name and station and wrote him a thank you letter, which I thought was very nice. But she didn't stop there. She's been dropping in to visit him at the station, bringing little gifts. She even baked him a birthday cake!

I think she's carrying her gratitude a little too far, don't you? John says he has no interest in her, but he can't stop her from coming to the station and bringing him gifts, and he doesn't want to be rude or hurt her feelings.

How would you handle something like this, Abby? Should I talk to Nancy and ask her to please lay off my guy? — IN LOVE AND INSECURE.

DEAR IN: No. He's not "your" guy. (Nobody owns anybody else.) If John wants to discourage Nancy's visits and gifts, he'll find a way. Let him handle it.

DEAR ABBY: Our first child died shortly before his second birthday. In offering condolences some of our friends said, "You'll have another one." Or, "It's all for the best." Or, "It was a blessing."

In behalf of all of us who have lost children, I have this message:

We will never again see that child who was with us for such a brief time. He wasn't just "a baby." He was an individual — entirely different from any other child we may have in the future.

If my husband were to die, I doubt that anyone would say, "You'll have another one."

Abby, please tell those well-meaning people who want to say somethng comforting to parents who have lost a child to just say, "I'm sorry."

I hope you find this letter worthy of space in your column. — A MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: I do. And thanks for setting many of us straight.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who gave up cigarettes because his doctor said he had to. Now this friend smokes a pipe! I think he's just kidding himself and told him so. He insists that he doesn't inhale when smoking his pipe, so its perfectly harmless. Meanwhile he's got a pipe stuck in his face all the time, and he's busy lighting it every two minutes, creating huge clouds of smelly smoke.

Is a pipe harmless? — SKEPTICAL.

DEAR SKEPTICAL: Only if you don't light it.

The GLC, by Mazda.

A car with a split personality, in the form of an ingenious rear seat.* A seat that is split in the middle, so you can fold all or just half of it forward. (If you have a family consisting of two adults, one child and a large dog, this is the feature you've been hounding us for.) There wasn't much we could do to improve on the vast and versatile nature of the GLC's carrying capacity, so we concentrated on making all that space easier to get in to.

With a wide hatchback (that opens from inside on deluxe and five-speed models).

With a door wider than other cars in its class.

With an ingenious jump-seat that slopes and slides forward for entry to the rear seat.

Things like a tough, five main bearing, 1300 cc four cylinder engine. Incredible attention to rust prevention. Standard four-speed transmission (with optional three-speed automatic).

A rear window washer/wiper and special interior are standard on the deluxe version. A five-speed GLC includes all the features mentioned plus radial steel cord tires and an optional striping kit...spectacular! And still under $4000!

The GLC's, by Mazda. See them now at your Mazda dealers.

Early Esperanto Club Started Here Back in Mid '20s

elizabeth forbes

It's amazing how the mention of a happening in this present day and age will sometimes bring to light a similar happening that took place years ago.

One that is still remembered by those who were close to it but that is lost to practically everyone else, through the welter of more recent events.

I'm thinking, at the moment, of a column I wrote a week ago about the Esperanto language.

In it I quote Wally Du Temple, president of a local Esperanto Club as saying the movement started in Canada in 1969 and that the first club, in this country, was formed in Regina, a year later.

Du Temple spoke in good faith. He believed that statement to be true. And it was true, as far as his memory stretched.

However, I've now learned there was a group in Victoria studying Esperanto, back in the mid-1920s, more than 50 years ago.

INSTITUTE SPONSORED

And, believe it or not, that group was formed within the ranks of the Victoria Women's Institute.

I have these facts from Mrs. Cecil Marryatt, the former Dorothy Urquhart, whose mother, Mrs. Fred W. Urquhart, an active institute member, headed the Esperanto circle.

To sharpen her memories of that long ago study circle, Mrs. Marryatt has a much treasured black-covered exercise book in which her mother recorded Esperanto words and phrases as she learned them.

Also several copies of an Esperanto magazine from the year 1926, titled International Language, that the circle received during the time it was active.

How did the women's institute in Victoria hear of — and become interested in — this auxiliary language, as it is described today?

"I'm almost certain it was through an English woman named Weeks who visited the institute and spoke about that language," Dorothy Marryatt recalls.

No doubt this is right, for in one of the old-time magazines in her possession, there is a picture of an Alicia Weeks, L.L.A., headmistress of Hackford Road Girls School in London, England, who was very active in the Esperanto movement, back in the 1920s.

Whether Miss Weeks was on a cross-Canada tour, Mrs. Marryatt doesn't remember. Nor does she know if there was other Esperanto groups in Canada at the time.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

What she does know is that those were the days when the old League of Nations was striving to promote peace around the world and it was suggested that Esperanto would be an excellent medium to assist with this work.

That it would be invaluable in spreading the idea of international relations and of publicizing the constitution and work of the League.

So, to help in their own small way with these aims, Victoria institute members decided to form an Esperanto group and to learn the language by correspondence — from England.

They sent to London for the printed lessons — some of them are still tucked into Mrs. Urquhart's old exercise book today.

Unfortunately that book does not have the names of those who joined in learning Esperanto.

It is known, however, that among them were Mrs. Emily Terry, whose husband J. R. Terry was with the provincial agricultural department; her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Kerr, and two young girls just a year out of high school, Mrs. Urquhart's elder daughter Winnie and her friend Kitty Daniels.

PORTIA SPEECH

"I was still in high school," Dorothy Marryatt says, "and while I didn't join the group or try to learn the language, I did give a talk on it at Portia Club, the high school girls' debating society."

One of her high school friends was Iris Kerr (now Mrs. Horace Lamb) who still remembers her mother going over the lessons and practising the Esperanto words.

These two friends recall that the group met in the institute rooms, then comfortably established in the Surrey Block on Yates Street.

"Interest kept up for over a year," Mrs. Marryatt remembers, "but eventually the learning by correspondence proved far too difficult. The little circle dissolved and the members closed their lesson books for all time."

Nevertheless, even if it was of short duration, we had an Esperanto language group in Victoria back in the 1920s and there are still those in Victoria who remember it.

Postscript — Coming back to the present, don't forget the Festival of Flowers and Folk Arts the present Victoria Esperanto Club is staging tomorrow (Good Friday) afternoon and evening in the Empress Hotel Georgian Room.

The afternoon program is free but there will be an admission charge of $1 in the evening with all proceeds going to the Victoria Branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Diabetes Can Be Inherited But Can Also Be Controlled

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, MD

All through my family there is someone who has diabetes. I now have three young children of my own and even though I don't have it I live in fear that they will inherit the disease. I am 36. Is there anything that can be done to ward off such a possibility? — Mrs. K. de L., N.Y.

DEAR MRS. de L.: Fears and confusion can compound themselves. They serve only to erode your rightful happiness with your children. In addition, there is always the possibility that your personal fears, even though well guarded, will transfer to your children.

Young children seem to have built-in, sensitive "radio antennae" that hear and store the fears and anxieties of their parents.

There are some very definite facts about diabetes that you should know in an effort to lay out a planned program of family helath.

(1) Diabetes can be inherited.

(2) Diabetes is easily diagnosed.

(3) Diabetes can be controlled.

(4) Diabetes and prediabetes must be recognized if it is to be effectively treated.

There is no doubt that people with a family history of diabetes have a greater chance of becoming diabetics. Consequently, the aim of all medical educators is to discover diabetes at the earliest possible time. When diabetes is diagnosed early and faithfully treated, the diabteic can live a healthy, normal and productive life.

There are many mild diabetics who can be kept in control simply by diet. There are others who, with insulin and diet, can lead healthy lives.

Special medications taken by mouth may, in some instances, replace the cumbersome insulin injections. Whatever the mode of treatment is, diabetes mellitus no longer poses the threat it formerly did.

It is well established that there is a relationship between obesity and diabetes. Therefore you can program the family's dietary habits to be sure that overweight is avoided.

Your doctor, aware of the family background of diabetes, will carefully keep your children under observation during adolescence and young adulthood. Only in this way can the very earliest evidences of diabetes be recognized.

Once you program yourself in this way, you have a most important obligation to yourself and to your children. You simply cannot go through your lives with a constant threat that diabetes inevitably will occur.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I'm trying to grow some hemp plants from seeds. They get about four inches tall and then start dying. I put them in the morning sun and at night I put them under a 60-watt lightbulb. I mist them every day and I have them in a four-inch-high window planter. I heard it's a pretty plant and I'd appreciate it if you'd help me if you can. If you don't, I'll understand why. — G.M.

DEAR G.M.: Well, after avoiding the literally hundreds of letters we get regarding the cultivation of marijuana in the home, we've finally decided to come out and deal with the situation once and for all.

In the first place, it's illegal to grow marijuana and for that, if for no other reason, we do not want to become involved in dispensing any information about how it is done.

In the second place, and please don't consider us to be Goody Four-Shoes, we really don't think its use is necessary, especially if you have a home filled with lovely, legal plants and a happily occupied mind.

We will admit one thing: a properly grown hemp plant CAN be a beautiful plant, tree-like, round-topped shape, especially if topiaried into a tree-like, round-topped shape. There are many books on the market to help you.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a real tough one to play correctly. Its difficulty arises out of the fact that an instinctive and apparently automatic play is the wrong one. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

NORTH
♡ 7 6 4
◇ A K 3 2
♣ K Q 10 6

WEST	EAST
♠ Q 10 7 2	♠ J 9 6
♡ A Q 3	♡ 5
◇ J 6 4	◇ Q 10 9 8
♣ 9 8 2	♣ A J 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠ K 8 4 3
♡ K J 10 9 8 2
◇ 7 5
♣ 4

South	West	North	East
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

The queen of clubs was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East captured the trick with his ace. East then came up with a good play: he returned his singleton trump. When South put up the jack, West won with the queen and continued trumps, playing his ace. Next came a third trump, South taking the trick with his ten-spot.

Declarer's cause was now lost. While he was able to discard one of hiss losing spades on dummy's king of clubs, he was unable to avoid the loss of a spade trick; and, in time, he suffered a one-trick set.

When West opened the club nine, East certainly figured to have both the ace and jack. It should have been apparent to declarer that he didn't want East in the lead, since a trump lead by East might result in all of dummy's trumps being eliminated (as they were). At trick one, dummy's six of clubs should have been played. Assuming that the nine won the trick, declarer would now be home safely. No matter what West returned at trick two, he could not prevent South from ruffing out one of his spade losers (after South cashed the ace and king).

After ruffing a third spade lead, the king of clubs would be led, covered by East's ace and trumped by South. On dummy's now-high queen of clubs, South would later discard his spade loser.

Had the six of clubs been played from dummy on the opening lead, if East elected to overtake his partner's nine with the jack in order to return a trump, declarer would still have fulfilled his contract. In this case, he later would have played dummy's club king, and trumped East's covering ace. Dummy's queen and ten of clubs would now be winners, and upon them South would discard his losing spades.

But South was in hurry to create a club trick — and his haste cost him a game contract.

Friday, April 8

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Try new ways to communicate. Utilize natural qualities, abilities to break through red tape. One who seems pompous, distant will show that he actually is an ally. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Travel plans require review.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Report concerning fiances should be taken with proverbial grain of salt. Partner or mate may be striving for something for nothing. Review, check sources, articulate requirements. Budget is spotlighted. Aquarians figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight natural qualities of versatility — ask questions, display intellectual curiosity, expand horizons. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could figure prominently. Accent partnership, public relations joint efforts. If single, there is talk of marriage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may have surrounded yourself with too many details. Key is to get rid of red tape. Streamline procedures — throw out nonessentials. Emphasis on communications, basic material, ability to learn ways of overcoming obstacles. Scorpio, Aquarius, Leo individuals could play significant roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance, creative activity, love — these are spotlighted. Significant change is due — don't resist progress. Element of luck — or timing — is on your side. Gemini, Cancer, Virgo individuals are part of your personal scenario. Young person confides problem. Avoid casting first stone. Be understanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain expert counsel in connection with property, security issues, legal affairs. Family member is involved: Be diplomatic. If you attempt to force issues, you lose. The choice is your own. Taurus, Libra figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid trying to do too much at once. Organize plans, priorities. See places, people in realistic light. Steer away from self-deception. Close neighbors, relatives could be involved. Short journey may be necessary to conclude transaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check possessions — count your change. Accent on buying, selling. Avoid basing actions on impulse. Key is to be logical, to weigh various possibilities — and costs. Your position is stronger than might be apparent on surface. Know it and builder inner confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Aura of mystery works to your advantage. Cycle is favorable; you land on your feet. Don't tell all — be discreet, especially where property, security enter picture. Finish project. Imprint your own style. You're due for wider recognition Aries, Libra figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friendship and money may mix as if oil and water. Know it and act as if aware — means don't risk losing something of value merely to put off embarrassment. You can't buy loyalty. If honest in appraisal of situation, you can win greater commitment, eventually have more cash, too. If too weak to stand tall for beliefs, you will suffer consequences.

PISCES. (Feb. 19-March 20): You get action and plenty of it! There could be conflict of interest. Protect self during in-fighting: study Aquarius message. Diversify — be versatile, flexible, willing to ask, to learn, to broaden horizons. Diet is likely to change. You become more aware of weight — and nutrition.

IF APRIL 8th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are powerful, determined, stubborn, independent, creative, capable of making key decisions under pressure. If a woman, many men fear you. if a man, the opposite sex finds you attractive. Man or woman, the opposite sex is fascinated, drawn to you. August should be outstanding for you in 1977, a year in which you complete project, broaden experience, improve style, display, distribution. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life.

NEW HOMES FROM $64,750

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.

Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

Visit our furnished display house. Located off Lodge Avenue between Saanich Road and Quadra Street. MLS

Your Horoscope

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, April 9

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on career, responsibility, prestige, standing in community, civic pursuits and programs. Individual with "axe to grind" might attempt to involve you in dispute. Measure words, actions, reactions. One at the top intends to make room for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with long-distance communication, travel, publishing, pursuit of educational-philosophical project. You get what you need by experimenting, but giving free rein to intellectual curiosity. Break bonds of timidity!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain valid hint from Gemini message. What had been obscured — or too costly — is brought into balance and focus. Check fine print; be aware of basic material and how best to utilize it. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on partnership, legal matters, marital status. Be aware of public relations — listen, observe, gather and analyze information. You do better now by planning rather than taking direct action. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for change of scenery — and attitude. Dig for information. If you permit creative juices to flow, you could strike pay dirt. Family adjustment, home decoration, where and how you reside — these are spotlighted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlight perception, interpretation of inner feelings, dreams, children, creativity, affair of heart — you are more concerned with these areas than in recent past. You're asked to pass judgment on value of object — or individual. Impulse could fight to dominate logic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on "reaching conclusions," evaluating property, building for future security. Organize, bring priorities into focus. You will be given additional authority, responsibility — and additional compensation also is indicated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Message or call results in short trip. Finish what you start. Deal with Aries, Libra persons. The number "9" figures prominently. Be versatile enough to stop chasing a losing proposition. Relative who seems to "know it all" concedes a major point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New, more independent approach to income potential is required. State needs. You might be amazed to find that wishes can come true. Leo person figures prominently. Financial outlook is brighter than might be imagined.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid superficial judgments. Look for hidden clauses. Examine motives, get "backstage" view. You might be asked to be spokesperson for organization, special group of charity. Gemini is in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on romantic interlude, ability to attract what you need. Be willing to dismantle for purpose of rebuilding on more solid structure. Surprise due — of pleasant variety. Business endeavor begins to show signs of producing dividends.

IF APRIL 9TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you are aggressive, courageous, a fighter for justice. You can also be "bossy," somewhat arrogant and stubborn. You are attractive to opposite sex, fascinated with law, acting and medicine. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You succeed in new project this year; you make valuable contacts and you are rid of losing proposition, July should be your most significant month of 1977.

POLICE CRACK FORGERY RING

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard have cracked an international forgery ring that has flooded European tourist areas with millions of counterfeit U.S. dollars for five years. U.S. police were reported to have accompanied Scotland Yard detectives and Sussex police in the raid in Pagham, 60 miles southeast of London. London newspapers reported that several persons were arrested simultaneously in London.

Cabinet Lone Power On Rents

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair introduced legislation Wednesday allowing the cabinet to set and adjust the ceiling on rent increases without first going to the legislature.

Bill 51, the Landlord and Tenant Amendment Act, removes the 10.6 per cent rent increase ceiling and substitutes "a prescribed amount" to be established by cabinet.

Premier Bennett announced last week that the government intended to lower the rent increase ceiling to seven per cent, effective May 1. Bill 51 gives the mechanism to make that move and allows the cabinet to adjust the seven per cent figure up or down in the future as circumstances dictate.

"In a fluctuating market it would be impractical to have a ceiling etched in stone," Mair said.

The minister said the bill gives the government the flexibility it needs to keep fair rent controls in effect through changing economic climates.

Mair hoped the laws of the marketplace will adequately control rents, and pointed to currently increasing vacancy rates and dropping rents as an indication they will.

"I see some rent controls coming off this year, if you look at a geographic criteria as well as an economic criteria ... but I don't think we'll ever see controls off entirely."

He said the constant high demand for low-cost housing will probably mean that rent controls will have to remain in that area of housing.

Directors Get More Control

Amendfents to the B.C. Companies Act introduced in the legislature Wednesday would allow directors of B.C. reporting companies to set dividend rates and redemption provisions before issuing shares without calling a shareholders meeting.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair, in introducing the amendments, said the powers would remain with the shareholders but, with the changes, they could delegate their powers to the directors.

Calling a full meeting of shareholders every time there is a share issue can be an awkward and expensive process for companies, Mair said.

Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario have similar provisions enabling shareholders to delegate their powers to the board of directors.

"The change will give British Columbia corporations the flexibility needed to adequately finance their new programs and put them in a more competitive position in going to capital markets," Mair said.

Amendments also strengthen the provisions for persons to obtain financial assistance from a company to purchase it.

For the first time, B.C. companies will be permitted to carry on business as a trustee in bankruptcy, under federal legislation. Previously, only individuals could be licenced to carry on the activity.

In a minor amendment, B.C. companies expanding into Quebec will be permitted to use the French Limitee (for Limited) at the end of their name.

Elderly Ferry Pensioned Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Langdale Queen, which until last September was the oldest operating ferry on the west coast, will be saved from the scrap heap.

She has been sold to a Vancouver boat charter company which will be keeping the vessel docked in Coal Harbor in the downtown area.

The 74-year-old ferry is now the property of Granson Yacht Charters Ltd., which bought the ship for $50,000 through its leasing company, Coal Harbor Maritime Leasing Co.

Vern Granberg, president of Granson Yacht Charters, said the Langdale Queen would be refurbished to supply a mixture of maritime functions.

Pierre, Maggie Meet in Passing

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre and Margaret Trudeau chatted for about 35 minutes Wednesday, then Pierre went off on a business-pleasure trip and Margaret went home to tend the kids.

The meeting of the prime minister and his wife, whose apparent marriage difficulties have made news around the world, took place at Ottawa airport.

Mrs. Trudeau flew in from New York, where she had concluded a photograpy assignment for People Magazine. Trudeau delayed his scheduled departure for California on a transport ministry Jetstar to make sure he met his wife.

Witnesses said they had an animated conversation in a prime ministerial limousine behind a wire fence at the airport.

Four-year-old Sasha, the middle of the Trudeau's three children, drove out to the airport with his father. The family's new nanny took the boy to the prime minister's plane while father and mother talked.

Later, Mrs. Trudeau refused to say a word to reporters.

The conservation took place amid at least one report — by a TV commentator — that the prime minister and his wife, married six years, plan a 90-day trial separation.

But other reports have said she will join her husband in California. The prime minister said Tuesday he is going alone.

PM PROTEST

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — About 20 demonstrators protesting Canada's seal hunt were on hand Wednesday night as Prime Minister Trudeau arrived here.

The prime minister went into the luxurious Fairmont Hotel without speaking to the demonstrators.

One of the demonstrators, supporters of the Fund for Animals, said more people would be preotesting today at Trudeau's speech and he should expect some heckling.

The orderly demonstration featured signs like 170,000 Senseless Deaths for Fur Trim, and With Nowhere to Run, Another Baby Seal is Beaten to Death.

A Canadian consulate official said California, with its large number of animal welfare groups, is a centre for protest activity against the annual seal hunt off Canada's East Coast.

Food Prices, Gasoline Spur Living Cost Hike

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The cost of living, led by higher petroleum and food prices, soared upward by one per cent in March, Statistics Canada reported today.

The new increases in consumer prices pushed the 12-month rate of inflation to 7.4 per cent, the highest increase since the middle of 1976.

The federal agency's consumer price index, the most widely-used measure of inflation, stood at 157.0 in March, up from 155.4 in February. This means that a standard basket of consumer items which was worth $100 in 1971, now would cost $157 and would have cost $155.40 in February. Last March, it would have cost $146.20.

Since last December, food prices, which account for more than one-quarter of the index, have risen by 4.7 per cent.

In contrast, for the 12-month period ending in December, food prices dropped by seven-tenths of one per cent.

Among food items, fresh fruit led the way to higher prices, with an 8.2-per-cent rise in March over the previous month.

Prices for these items were also 26.4 per cent higher than a year ago.

There was also a five-per-cent rise in one month in prices of frozen food and a 2.3-per-cent increase in beverage prices, which includes coffee.

The fuel and utilities component of housing rose by 3.9 per cent in a month, largely due to higher home-heating fuel prices.

There were also price increases for seasonal clothing, plane fares, postage, cigarettes and in some cities for electricity and urban transit fares.

The purchasing value of the 1971 consumer dollar was 64 cents, down from about 68 cents a year ago, the agency reported.

The strong advance in prices is expected to be followed by a period of more moderate price movements, an anti-inflation board spokesman said.

"A quickening in recent months in the rate of price increase was due primarily to two well-known factors: The increases in petroleum prices and the impact on food costs from severe weather in southern U.S. food-growing areas," the spokesman said.

RECORD JUMP FOR U.S. FOOD BILL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices soared 1.1 per cent in March for there the biggest monthly gain in almost a year and a half, the U.S. labor department said today. Higher prices on coffee and other food were chiefly to blame.

Wholesale prices, which many economists believe are the government's best inflation barometer, have nearly doubled in the past decade for the worst inflation rate since the decade beginning in 1941.

B.C. Will Do Best

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — British Columbia's economy is expected to record the strongest growth performance in 1977 of all provinces, 4.5 per cent in real output terms, according to the latest quarterly provincial forecast of the Conference Board of Canada.

This will represent a moderate slowdown from the 6.4 per cent growth estimated for 1976.

Employment growth, it is anticipated, will keep pace with increases in the labor force. As a result B.C. is the only province which will not experience a higher unemployment rate this year.

Wages and salaries and personal income should grow at a rate that is greater than that anticipated for the nation as a whole. It will keep retail sales growth at a buoyant 12.1 per cent for 1977, an increase from the 11.8 per cent posted for 1976.

In the other provinces, the slowdown will be more marked, with exceptional declines in areas where agriculture is a major activity.

The recent budget will do little to improve the bleak outlook, the Conference Board said.

Total output in Canada is forecast by the board to increase by only three per cent in real terms this year, compared with 4½ per cent in 1976.

"While this forecast was completed prior to the presentation of the recent federal budget, an analysis of the measures contained therein suggests no major revisions to the outlook for the current year," it found.

The expected decline in agriculture will hit hardest at Saskatchewan, the board said. Last year Saskatchewan led the nation in "real output growth with the important agricultural sector providing much of the strength.

COLONEL WHELAN . . . ON THE FLY

BRIGHTON, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says he is in favor of members of Parliament using armed forces aircraft and uses one himself because he is an honorary colonel.

"They (armed forces personnel) have to put in a certain amount of flying time anyway, so they might just as well fly our members of Parliament around so you get to see them," Whelan said at Liberal association meeting Wednesday.

"I use DND planes quite a bit because I'm an honorary colonel."

By using armed forces aircraft Whelan can attend more public meetings and let more persons "see that the minister is at least half-way human."

Crown Corp. Check

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A special legislative committee to provide public accountability for B.C.'s major Crown corporations will be set up under legislation introduced Wednesday.

The move is an attempt to end what Premier Bill Bennett described as "governments and ministers being captives of the Crown corporations."

The Crown Corporation Reporting Act allows for the establishment of a year-round legislative committee of 14 MLAs whose sole purpose will be to inquire into the operations of Crown corporations.

Only five of the major corporations will come under scrutiny initially — B.C. Hydro, B.C. Ferries, Insurance Corp. of B.C., B.C. Railway and the Housing Corp. of B.C. — but others are expected to be added later.

The committee will be made up of backbenchers — no cabinet ministers — and its composition will reflect the proportion of political parties in the legislature.

The committee has the authority to hire research staff which Bennett said will allow it the expertise to ask the right questions.

The premier said the act, together with the provisisons for an auditor-general and an ombudsman in B.C., gives the province "a level of public accountability . . . not existing anywhere in Canada."

Bennett, along with his own ministers and opposition MLAs, has often complained of the massive capital investments and the lack of public accountability of such complex corporations as B.C. Hydro.

"This is a cure for more than just Hydro," he said while introducing the bill.

"It's just a bit of window-dressing."

Barrett said the committee has basically the same powers as the existing public accounts committee, also comprised of MLAs, whose purpose is to examine government expenditures during a specific fiscal year. (For example, the public accounts committee sitting now is examining the expenditures of the 1975-76 fiscal year.)

"This is only a minor adjustment to the already existing public accounts committee," he said.

Barrett said that although in theory the public accounts committee is restricted to a specific year, it in fact examines the current operations of Crown corporations.

The new committee, he

Grade 2 Girl Saves Mother

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

If seven-year-old Tracy Shaw had a "show and tell" class at Rockheights school this morning, she had a dandy story to get the attention of her grade 2 classmates.

Esquimalt police say the cool-headed younster probably saved her mother's life when fire broke out early this morning in their home at 815 Old Esquimalt Road.

They said Brenda Shaw, 30, nodded off while smoking and reading in bed.

Tracy, asleep beside her, awoke to the sound of the family's two dogs barking, and the smell of smoke.

"My eyes were all blurry, I could hardly see," said Tracy.

She shook her mother but was unable to rouse her so went into the kitchen and called her grandfather, William Shaw, a security guard at the legislative buildings.

"He's a policeman. I figured he'd know what to do," she said.

Shaw called Esquimalt police.

Tracy said she went into the living room and sat down looking out the window to wait for police.

Within seconds a cruiser arrived and Constables Bruce Cowick and Norm Smith rushed into the house.

Cowick carried out the mother, who was unconscious, while Smith reached for the smouldering bedding. As he lifted one of the pillows it exploded in flames.

"When I crash nothing wakes me up," said Miss Shaw, who is divorced and has reverted to her maiden name. "One moment I was reading. The next I was in this guy's arms being carried outside. I remember looking up at him and saying 'I know you . . . didn't we go to school together.' "

Neither she nor her daughter suffered burns although the fire had eaten away almost three-quarters of the mattress.

SHIPS COLLIDE, BLAZE

TOKYO (UPI) — A Panamanian-registered oil tanker and a small Japanese freighter collided in rainy, windy weather on Japan's Inland Sea Wednesday, spreading thousands of barrels of burning crude over the waters.

The 89,000-ton tanker and the freighter both caught fire as a result of the collision about 500 miles southwest of Tokyo, but there were no injuries.

The fire was controlled within a few hours.

The Japanese government's Maritime Safety Agency said the tanker was carrying 30,000 barrels of crude oil from Borneo to Kikuma on the island of Shikoku.

The ships were the Panamanian tanker Astro Leo with a crew of 35, and the Ilushun Maru a 2,770-ton Japanese coastal freighter based in Kobe and carrying 23.

They collided in stormy weather off Matsuyama City on Japan's small island of Shikoku, the maritime agency said.

Second Rebel Tory MP Ousted by Clark

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Conservative MP David MacDonald has been dumped from Opposition Leader Joe Clark's select strategy committee because he voted against the party over government immigration legislation.

MacDonald, 40-year-old MP for the Prince Edward Island riding of Egmont, said today Clark stripped him of his spot on the 20 member committee shortly after he voted against Liberal government legislation that would overhaul the country's immigration laws March 23. The party had agreed to support the government on the legislation.

MacDonald, who has represented Egmont for 12 years, is considered a moderate Conservative, one of the so-called "Red Tories."

He said Clark has allowed him to retain his job as party regional development critic, but that he has been turfed out of the strategy committee which sifts and sets the party's political direction.

The committee is handpicked by Clark.

MacDonald said he does not consider his dispute with Clark as serious as the one between the 37-year-old Opposition leader and Alberta MP Jack Horner.

Tuesday, Clark took similar action against Horner after learning that the MP for Crowfoot discussed the possibility of joining the Liberal government with Prime Minister Trudeau.

In a related development, the Toronto Sun reported today that a group of dissatisfied Progressive Conservatives had planned a meeting for last Monday at which they intended to pass a resolution calling for Clark's resignation.

The meeting was cancelled when cooler heads prevailed, the paper adds. It says those dissatisfied include some riding officials, some delegates to last year's party leadership convention and defeated Conservative candidates.

SPEECH FROM CIDA DOESN'T COME CHEAP

OTTAWA (CP) — The words of Paul Gerin-Lajoie, former president of the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), did not come cheaply for the Canadian taxpayer.

In fact, it cost more than $20,000 to prepare and publish a speech he gave last May in Montreal, entitled The Arab World and Canada: Prospects for Co-operation.

Printing and binding the 7,540 copies of his speech cost $5,164.90. Layout cost $4,133, paper $1,721, and typesetting $1,135 plus an additional $1,100 for an Arabic version.

Research and preparation of the speech ran to $5,400, and translation into Arabic cost $650 compared to about $800 paid to translate it into the former CIDA president's native French.

With $440.07 thrown in for distribution, Gerin-Lajoie's speech cost the tapayer $20,544.97.

Iran Quake Toll Rises to 170

TEHRAN (AP) — The official news agency said today 170 persons had been counted dead in Wednesday's earthquake in a rugged mountain region of western Iran.

The agency quoted Gov. Ahmed Bradarnor of Chaharmahal-Bakhtiari province as saying 100 bodies were recovered in the village of Noughan, while 50 were found in Ardal and 20 in the villages of Shalamzar and Chogharkoor.

The quake, measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale, rocked a large region between Brojen and Shahr-Kurd 80 miles west of Isfahan and 250 miles south of Tehran.

Radio Iran said that by late today rescuers, including medical teams, had established operations throughout the entire earthquake region.

The region is populated by nomadic Bakhtiari tribesmen who raise sheep and make rugs from the wool.

About 250 miles farther south, the towns of Gir and Karzin, near Shiraz, felt the quake Wednesday and new tremors today, but no damage or casualties were reported.

TEAPOT SHOWS UP

A Vancouver woman told police Wednesday an antique Chinese teapot she lost while moving household effects has turned up on display in the Provincial Museum here.

Grace Leong said she spotted the dragon motif teapot and pewter tray in the museum last month after losing them while moving in February.

She said she'd been afraid to tell police when the pieces were lost, but had contacted authorities Wednesday on the advice of her lawyer.

Museum director Yorke Edwards said today he hasn't yet been contacted, but wouldn't be surprised if her story is true.

"This sort of thing happens quite often around the world," said Edwards.

"If it's good it's stolen, and it's not unusual for it to turn up in a museum after a couple of bounces."

Carter Halts Plutonium Reactors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a move to stem supplies of deadly plutonium in the United States, President Carter today halted work on the controversial fast breeder nuclear reactor and outlawed extraction of plutonium from spent reactor fuel.

Carter's move reversed a long-standing administration policy and cancelled programs considered vital by the nuclear power industry to stretch uranium reactor fuel supplies.

Unlike past presidents, however, Carter accepted arguments that plutonium — one of the most deadly poisons known to man, and the material from which nuclear bombs can be easily made — offers more risks than benefits.

"The benefits of nuclear power are . . . very real and practical," Carter said. "But a serious risk accompanies world-wide use of nuclear power — the risk that commponents of the nuclear power process will be turned to provide atomic weapons."

A panel of senators warned Carter Wednesday that a few terrorists could build a crude atomic bomb with only stolen nuclear material, unclassified instructions and a simple workshop.

In addition to cutting off construction of a demonstration breeder and banning fuel recycling, Carter today pledged to urge other nations to follow the U.S. lead.

Merchants Split Down Middle On Casino Bid

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria merchants are split evenly on the value of a gambling casino to the local economy.

Of 100 who answered the Victoria Chamber of Commerce questionnaire, 40 favored a casino, 40 were against and 20 said they couldn't decide until they had more information.

Victoria chamber president Alan Emery set up the questionnaire in response to suggestions from some Victoria businessmen that a casino would be a tourist attraction.

Emery said a casino that is clean and well-managed like the one in Monte Carlo could be an asset to the city but the chamber is not taking a stand on the question. Results of the survey will be forwarded to city council for action.

Chamber manager Brian Small today said there are indications that another 50 to 100 merchants may respond to the questionnaire before final results are tabulated.

On one questionnaire, a Victoria merchant said the city is missing out on millions of dollars because it does not have a casino.

There were few comments on the negative questionnaires.

One man said he is against casinos because "they would add to Victoria's crime problem."

One man who strongly favored casinos said all of Salt Spring Island should be converted to a miniature Las Vegas.

FIVE YEARS FOR TRAFFICKER

A 30-year-old Nanaimo fisherman was sentenced to five years in prison Wednesday and had his boat confiscated by the Crown for trafficking in marijuana.

Ronald Richard Larsen pleaded guilty to the charge after RCMP arrested him last June 25 when he landed at Maple Bay, near Duncan, with 660 pounds of marijuana transported from the Olympic Peninsula.

The marijuana had a street value of more than $200,000.

Judge Montague Drake brought down the sentence in Courtenay after deciding it was more convenient to hear the case there than in Nanaimo today, as had been originally planned.

4-Month Billing For City Water?

Victoria residents will receive their water bills every four months instead of every two months, if a finance committee recommendation is accepted by city council.

The committee was told today that the change would mean an average water bill of around $17. The savings to the city, including the salary of one meter reader, postage, transportation and billing supplies, would be around $18,350.

The only committee member to express some doubts about the proposal was Ald. Larry Ryan, who said householders on lower incomes would be hit by a "substantial bill" every four months.

"From the city's point of view we do save some money . . . but I don't see the saving as all that significant in the total picture," he said.

Mayor Mike Young, however, said he did not think anyone would really object to the longer billing period.

Russia's Sports Car Of the Sea

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The Soviet Union has invaded local waters with a strange looking craft that can whip up to 30 knots in seconds.

Here to stay, she's the first of the fleet of Volga-70 29-foot hydrofoils to be brought here by Jeremy Hewett of the Victoria Boat Mart at West Bay Marina and will sell for about $18,000.

She's capable of getting to Port Angeles in 20 minutes or the Rosario resort on Orcas Island in an hour.

Commercial fishermen and others on the water looked bewildered as the Soviet "sea sports car" whipped by them this week.

It was easier than driving a car.

A single-lever control pushed forward gets you quickly under way. Lever pulled back, the hydrofoil moves smoothly astern. One thing to remember, however, is that, once in the neutral position, you have to take into account she'll have a further momentum of about 100 yards.

These hydrofoils are the same as those used as shore boats aboard Russian warships. As far back as 1943 the Russians were developing hydrofoils.

The eight-passenger hydrofoil in Victroria opens up a new type of boating, Hewett said.

The Russian's equivalent of our Ministry of Transport must be tough on marine regulations if the equipment aboard the new import is any indication.

She comes equipped with eight lifejackets, each with a flashing light and whistle. The unusual English instructions for the light state, "In the dark time pull out the cord."

She has a two-foot high foghorn that roars like a Russian bear.

In addition to flares and other safety gear, the hydrofoil comes packed in a 30-foot steel crate that contains a complete set of tools and spare parts. There's even a Russian pair of binoculars.

On Tuesday the seas were smooth but Hewett says the hydrofoil comes into her own when the waters are rough. This, combined with her speed, makes her ideal for search and rescue work, he says.

Three watertight compartments make her virtually unsinkable, according to Hewett.

Easing back to her berth in Esquimalt, she idled quietly along at one knot, an ideal trolling speed for sports fishermen.

As we secured lines a covey of shorewatchers gathered to ask questions and study the stranger in town.

Q. Would you please tell me how to cleanly cut the necks off bottles so they may be used as flower containers?—M.M.

A. Hobby shops sell devices that can be used for this purpose.

Q. What is first-degree and second-degree murder?

A. The Criminal Code was changed by Parliament last summer to these new descriptions of murder. First-degree murder is when it is planned and deliberate, and irrespective of whether it is planned and deliberate when the victim is a peace officer or prison worker or when death occurs in connection with specified offences such as hijacking an aircraft, kidnapping, rape and indecent assault. It is also first-degree murder when there has been a previous conviction of first- or second-degree murder.

All murder that is not first-degree is second-degree.

Sentence is imprisonment for life for both degrees, without eligibility for parole for at least 25 years on first-degree conviction and for at least 10 years and as much as 25 years on second-degree.

The Screamin' Jimmies Are Coming for City Firemen

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The old yellow fire trucks won't be what they used to be when Victoria fire department gets through with them.

The department has launched a major program to replace its gas-powered engines with diesels — big, booming Detroit diesels, known in the trade as Screamin' Jimmies.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell says it's an ambitious undertaking, the first attempted by any fire department in the province and will take years to complete.

The plan calls for conversion of three of the department's six trucks from gas to diesel. The other three will be replaced by new trucks — all diesel-powered.

The conversion program started a week ago with the department's 1968 LaFrance pumper. The truck's 820-cubic inch Continental gas engine has been replaced with a new V-six 426-cubic inch diesel and the transmission changed from standard shift to automatic.

The work — budgeted to cost $14,070 — is being carried out by the department's master mechanic Ray Barron and assistant Ken Searle at the main fire hall on Yates Street.

Heppell says the 12-year-old number one aerial truck is next in line for the changeover — hopefully sometime next year — and in 1982 another pumper, a 1973 Thibeault, will be converted.

Heppell gives some compelling reasons for the changes which, he says, are geared to increase economies and improve the efficiency and reliability of the fire equipment.

The automatic transmission, he says, will ensure engines are always running at the correct r.p.m. With standard shift there is the danger of lugging or over-revving motors, increasing wear and tear.

Diesel engines, he says, have proven reliability, — 100,000 mile dealer warranties are the rule not the exception — are considered more efficient, less prone to mechanical failure, easier to maintain and use cheaper fuel. They will also greatly extend the life of the equipment, he says.

HEPPELL

The LaFrance, for example, once converted is to remain in service until 1998. Without the changes the truck would probably have to be replaced in 10 to 15 years and new pumpers at today's prices cost $90,000 plus.

Heppell says a number of fire departments in B.C. are making the switch from gas to diesel but Victoria is unique in converting its older trucks. Burnaby fire department is planning to follow with a similar program later this year.

Why didn't the change come sooner?

"Blame it on tradition," says Heppell. "Firemen are a conservative lot. We've always had gas engines in the past. That's the way it's been. It takes a major occurrence to make us change."

That has been a combination of two developments. One is technological advances in perfecting diesel engines. Ten years ago small diesels didn't deliver enough revs or power suitable for fire truck use. Now they do.

The other is a critical shortage of parts for Continental gas engines.

"We've come to the point where we just can't buy parts for the motor any longer," he says.

If there is a breakdown, the mechanic has to hand-make the part — a time-consuming and costly operation.

Heppell says the decision to go diesel was made last fall after senior officials examined the Seattle fire department which has changed over 95 per cent of its equipment to diesel power.

"What we're doing is taking their background and experience and applying it to our own," he says. "For us it's a venture into a whole new idea."

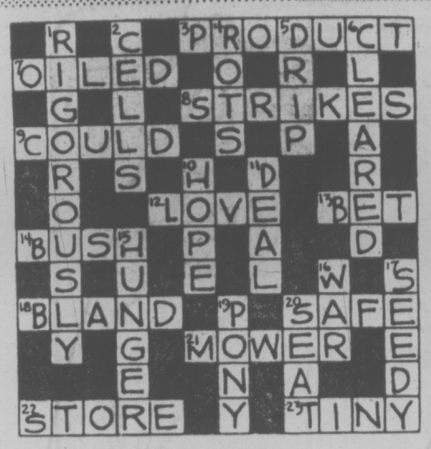
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

3. PRODUCT not produce. The clue suits a definite PRODUCT, rather than produce, the quality of which may be in others' hands and not as controllable as a manufactured PRODUCT
7. OILED not filed. The idea of parts "needing to be filed" links up with expediency, rather than with "the normal course of events."
8. STRIKES not striker. STRIKES may be regarded as pigheaded if that is one's opinion, in the circumstances mentioned, of the leadership involved — for which the individual striker is hardly responsible.
9. COULD not would. Aptly, "the police COULD do nothing" reflects sad regret, whereas "the police would do nothing" is rather the view of one angrily dissatisfied with the police.
12. LOVE not lose. The clue's last five words have more point for LOVE. If a girl should lose something, the fact that it may have been given to her by her sweetheart is quite irrelevant to the losing of it.
13. BET not yet. Being lowly paid, a husband who loses money BETTING would certainly cause the wife to worry. In the case of "get," the money the husband is not getting is what causes the worry.
14. BUSH not rush. The clue hints that "this" may have an interesting popular name (as opposed to an uninteresting "botanical" one), favoring BUSH rather than rush, since many bushes have colorful or fanciful descriptive names.
18. BLAND not blind. It is the BLANDness, more directly, that links up with mildness. There is no link with blindness and any particular characteristic.
21. MOWER not power. A MOWER is handy but (electric) power is an "essential."
22. STORE not storm. The clue's phrase "on certain occasions" is wanted more for a STORE, e.g., in emergencies or during a big sale. There is always excitement in any big storm.
23. TINY not tidy. The tone of the phrase "quite used to . . ." suits a case of coping with a familiar disadvantage.

CLUES DOWN

1. RIGOROUSLY not vigorously. The clue suggests that, having given the routine every chance, one is entitled to feel disappointment. RIGOROUSLY is the stronger answer, since mere vigor (perhaps applied too briefly, or not with RIGOROUS consistency) may not be sufficient to get proper results.
2. CELLS not wells. Wells may be hardly accessible. Also, CELLS (suggesting the possibility of something to scavenge) more reasonably attract rats.
6. CLEARED not cleaned. The sense of the clue relates to the removal of a hindrance, favoring CLEARED. In any case, one may doubt if an overgrowth of vegetation constitutes dirt, to be cleaned away.
17. SEEDY not needy or weedy. "Visualise" as SEEDY, or shabbily dressed, yes; but being needy is an abstract condition not giving a mental image. Against weedy, many poor slum dwellers are quite sturdy, or even fat in some cases.
19. PONY not pond. The clue suggests muddiness as a disfiguring influence (as when a PONY gets bespattered with mud when ridden, etc.) but, normally, a muddy pond is accepted as naturally so.
20. SEAT not sect. A more suitable SEAT could be a matter of practical advice, as suggested; but conversion to a different sect is a matter of persuasion, conviction, etc.

Kissing Could Cause Cavities

"There are reasons to believe dental diseases can be transmitted from person to person," says Dr. Paul Keyes, a scientist at the National Institute of Dental Research.

PHOTOGRAPHERS' CORNER

Dull, Lifeless Landscapes?

By JERRY WINDLE

Have you tried to take interesting landscape pictures only to have them turn out dull and lifeless?

You are not alone. This is the rule rather than the exception. The problem does not necessarily lie with the photographer's technique. It comes from the fact that we are the victims of landscape photography overkill.

Most people try to make their black-and-white and color landscape shots similar to pictures we have all seen hundreds of times on calendars and travel magazines. We have been inundated for so long with these outstanding color shots of magnificent mountains and desert vistas that anything is going to look pale in comparison.

But there is hope. You can use some of the following techniques to improve your pictures. They may not make masterpieces out of your pictures, but I can guarantee some improvement.

Look for unusual weather conditions. This could be a perfect time for your landscape picture. Sunlight breaking through heavy rain clouds or fog drifting in from the ocean make good landscape scenes.

Choosing an unusual time of the day to take your pictures can make a difference. The rose-colored skies just before sunrise, the golden light at daybreak, or the orange of a sunset and the bluish light as night falls can prove very effective for landscape pictures.

All these techniques can help, but it still takes a lot of time to analyze a scene and decide when to take a photograph.

What can we do to improve landscape pictures if we only have a few minutes?

One good tool will be the light. By controlling the light, we add interest, depth and texture to scenes to improve the impact and effectiveness.

The old rule of the sun over the shoulder just doesn't work here. True, it provides a nice even light, but it is a flat light. Without shadows, the scene will have no depth.

From previous discussions on perspective, we know that th ephotographer must create the illusion of depth, since the film only can record height, and width, not depth.

For landscapes, cross or strong sidelighting works very well. This introduces shadows, which will help separate the objects in the picture. Rolling hills now will take on shape, and trees will stand out against the background. With light coming from the side, the textures of trees or ground will be emphasized.

Backlighting also can be used, but caution should be exercised. It does not work well with shots involving long distances of several miles. Haze will be emphasized by backlighting.

Filters for landscapes should be used minimally. Haze, skylight and polarizing filters will decrease haze, but the latter also will cut down glare from the air, metal objects and water.

When using the polarizing filter, don't eliminate glare completely. This will give an unnatural appearance to your picture. Water with no glare will appear lifeless, often disappearing completely. A lens shade is a must for landscape photography. It helps eliminate glare when working with sidelighting.

Landscape pictures should follow the rules of good photo compositions. It is best to have something in the foreground to add interest: a twisted tree trunk, a stream or a fence. Be careful, however, not to use something too interesting or it will detract from the landscape picture.

When using color film, be aware of color shifts in the light. They may be very slight, but they can add interest to your pictures. The quality of the light is important if you include people in the foreground. If the light is too blue or too far off, you might want to use a small flash to return color to flesh tones of your subject.

By studying the work of the landscape master Ansel Adams and the photographers in "Arizona Highways," you can see what techniques create good pictures.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $750.00
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE ON PAGE 2

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!

THIS CROSSWORD is not a game of chance or a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a word list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully for you must think them out and give every word its true meaning.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

Mae West: Still a Siren at 84

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The wailing may be somewhat subdued but Mae West is still a siren, at least in her own mind, and she's back at work in a new movie appropriately titled "Sextette."

At 84, Mae is making only her 12th motion picture. Her first was "Night After Night" in 1931.

"I know it seems like I've made more, honey," said Mae, her voice heavy with the allure of the vamps of old. "I could have made a hundred pictures. But I didn't want to saturate the public with myself.

"Some of the other ladies made one picture after another and the first thing they knew it all stopped."

Mae apparently is unstoppable. Her most recent movie was "Myra Breckinridge" with Raquel Welch in 1970. It was a bomb. Prior to that she hadn't made a picture since "The Heat's On" in 1943.

In all her films Mae is an unabashed sex symbol. She continues to play the siren in "Sextette" — a lady who goes through six husbands.

On stage and off, Mae plays the part to the hilt. In her trailer dressing room at Paramount Studios, Mae lounged on a couch. She wore a white, satin-like dressing gown with white fur-like material at the collar and cuffs.

Part of her blonde hair was piled atop her head, long tresses tumbled past her shoulders. Her hairdo hasn't changed in 45 years. One could not detect a wrinkle on the smooth textured skin of her face, impossible though it may seem.

Her dainty, manicured fingers were heavy with diamonds the size of searchlights.

Mae, still single and living in the same fancy apartment she has inhabited for almost a half century, looks like a Reubens' painting. One suspects, as in the case of Dorian Gray, that in a closet somewhere her portrait is in tatters.

When, if ever, will the old sex appeal fade for Mae?

"Age has nothing to do with it," she said in a throaty contralto. "Look at the young actresses today. I don't know why none of them are sex symbols.

"It's all in a girl's personality and body movements. It's also in the voice and mind.

"Sex is an attitude. I can read a line one way and get into trouble with the censors. Another actress can read the same line and nothing happens. Maybe it's just that I'm aware of sex.

"I'm not against women's lib but I believe in maintaining the differences between the sexes. A woman is never too old for romance — and neither is a man."

"I've got a style that's all my own. I've got a smile that stands alone. I've got a different walk, a peculiar sway. I'm not acting, I was born that way."

She smiled enigmatically and added, "I never was nude or anywhere near it in my pictures. And there was never any naughty language, not even a 'damn' or 'hell.' But the censors were after me all the time."

Mae recalled that her three most famous lines are still quoted the world over. "Come up and see me some time," "Peel me a grape," and "When I'm good I'm very good and when I'm bad, I'm better."

She was one of the few actresses who had full control of her scripts. In the old days the Hays office went through her scripts searching for blatantly sexy lines. Mae outfoxed them.

"I'd put in lines I knew I'd never use," she said. "I was sure they'd be taken out while the ones I really wanted—the tamer but funnier ones — were left in. That kept the censors happy and didn't ruin the picture.

"I wrote this script, 'Sextette,' a long time ago and played it in summer stock for 10 weeks back in 1960.

"Among my leading men in the pictue are Ringo Starr, George Hamilton, Keith Moon and Alice Cooper. Also nine muscle men just to keep things interesting."

Why, Mae was asked, has she chosen to return to the strain of movie work?

"I owe it to my fans," she said. "I get hundreds and hundreds of letters from people begging me to make another movie. It's not hard work. In fact, I'm enjoying it."

When Mae isn't acting she busies herself writing. Her most recent epic, "Sex, Health and ESP," recently was published in England. She's also completed a novel, "The Pleasure Man."

As she rose to leave, Mae said, "Come back and see me sometime, big boy."

Classic Quality Enduring In Allen's 'Bits, Pieces'

HOLLYWOOD — "I know that I seem like a clown on the outside," Steve Allen once wrote in a letter to Groucho Marx, "but deep down in my heart I'm a very silly person."

As everyone knows, Steve Allen is a prolific man of many talents, comedy among them. There is Steve Allen the songwriter, the author, the poet, the piano-player, the actor. And there's Steve Allen the host of what is loosely termed the talk show. Allen served, in fact, as the first host of the "Tonight Show" on NBC, reigning from 1953 to '56.

That particular series — he has had so many since — occupies a very special niche in our collective memory as a Golden Age that erupted each night with wild and delicious flights of humor.

From out of these shows came such talents as Don Knotts, Louis Nye, Bill Dana, Pat Harrington, Tom Poston, Steve Lawrence, Eydie Gorme, Andy Williams, Tim Conway, Gabe Dell and on and on. Allen cherishes the memory of that period in his life and he's entitled.

For all of the Steve Allen buffs those memories are shared in a new synidicated offering called "Laugh-Back." This one boasts an unusual format wherein the comedians who worked on that show, along with Jayne Meadows, join Steve on the panel for some very funny talk.

They perform in sketches and, to give substance to the program's title, they run assorted clips from old Allen shows from the '50s and '60s — but none, sadly, from the "Tonight Show."

There's a curious reason for this. As Steve explains: "A few years, they discovered at NBC that the network was running short of space in its warehouse in New Jersey. How did they solve that problem? They solved it by burning not only three years of the 'Tonight Show' but practically all of the films that NBC had produced from, I think, around 1949 to '56."

All the same, the comedy bits and pieces that do remain have a classic quality that endures.

BACKYARD FARMER'S NEW SEASON BEGINS

It's been a year since Crockett's Victory Garden broke ground coast to coast; and every Saturday at 2 p.m. and Monday at 6:30 p.m. beginning April 9 on Public TV 9, Jim Crockett will continue to give viewers valuable advice and instruction on everything from asparagus to zinnias.

This year Jim will tackle some projects that were too large for last season's Victory Garden. He'll go on location to plant a rose garden and construct a rock garden. He'll take his horticultural expertise to real suburban gardens to cure some of their commonly found ills, and visit an experimental field station to see what's "growing on" in the future.

But Crockett's horizons don't stop there. The Victory Garden's bound for Europe, to take in the Spring Bulb Festival in Holland, the Chelsea Flower Show in England, and the "Gardener's World" and "Pebble Mill" television series at the BBC.

But Jim has not abandoned his original Victory Garden. The lot behind WGBH/Boston still is home base for even more of the top-notch instruction that his steadfast fans have come to expect.

HOW DO I MAKE MY SLIDES MORE INTERESTING?

Spring. Beautiful spring! Colourful flowers, flowering shrubs and trees. To make your slide show more interesting and to visually transport your viewer, I suggest making one exposure of the over-all scene; the whole street of flowering trees or the whole bed of flowering bulbs. Next move in and take one of just one tree or shrub or one section of the flower bed and then move in real close and take one of just one branch of the flowering tree or shrub or just one flower and then, if you wish, REAL close (close enough to smell) of one flower or part. Back lighting enhances photos of this type and shows the delicate shading and textures. We invite you to drop in and chat with your Certified Photographic Counsellors on ways to accentuate your slide presentations.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Can you give me some information on the actor who plays Jason in "The Waltons? — C. B., Cherry Hill, N.J.

A. John Walmsley is cast in the role and has been appearing in various productions since the age of 10.

Now 22 years old, Walmsley has appeared in numerous television shows and has appeared in a Walt Disney movie, "The One and Only, Genuine, Original Family Band."

He was born in England and his family moved to California when he was two years old.

He has long been interested in music, having started playing the guitar at th age of eight. He now plays the piano, drums, harmonica, banjo and flute.

Q. Last year, there was a show on the television called "Three for the Road." Can you tell me why it was cancelled as well as anything you can about Vincent Van Patten? — H. C., Vancouver, B.C.

A. "Three for the Road" was an early victim last vear of the ratings system and did not survive the television seaon.

As for Van Patten, he is 19 and has been working since the age of nine when he won the first job he auditioned for, eventually appearing in some 17 commercials in a row.

Vincent was featured in the also short-lived "Apple's Way." In addition, he has appeared in several other television series and has starred in three Walt Disney films.

Q. I would like to know if you could give me some information about JoAnna Cameron, the lady who plays Isis. I would also like to know where I can write to her? — C. M., Southington, Ohio

A. JoAnna Cameron has been acting, she says, to support her primary interests of travel and the study of art.

From there, she went on to appear in numerous commercials and acting jobs, appearing in series such as "Marcus Welby, M.D.," "Petrocelli," and "Switch," among others.

You can write to her in care of CBS, Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

NASTASE, CONNORS PLAY WINNER-TAKE-ALL MATCH

Live, from Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, CTV Sports presents "World Championship Tennis," telecating Sunday, April 10, at noon on Channel 8, with tennis superstars Jimmy Connors and Ilie Nastase clashing for $100,000 in a winner-take-all match. The program will also be carried by Channel 5.

Nastase, who won the big money and went undefeated to dominate the first WCT Challenge Cup action in the spring of 1976, now returns to try and make it two in a row. Known to pout, sulk, curse and slam balls into the balcony, he also plays inspired and creative tennis. A brilliant player, he combines petulance with dash and flair, electric reflexes, speed and agility.

His opponent for this Challenge Cup match is Jimmy Connors, Caesar's Palace's touring pro, and he's never lost a match in Las Vegas. Also known for eccentricities on the court, Connors' style doesn't waste time with niceties, yet it is imensely entertaining to a crowd that loves battles between contrasting styles.

The Nastase-Connors match is the results of the division of two equally competitive groups in round-robin sequences, with each match worth $10,000 to the winner. Then, the two players with the best records in the group advanced into the five-set $50,000 winner-take-all semifinals and on to the Challenge Cup match.

"All matches are winner-take-all, meaning a player could go home empty-handed," says WCT Executive Director Mike Davies. "This has been an added incentive for players in every match."

Isaac Stern to Perform With Previn, Pittsburgh

Violinist Isaac Stern and Pittsburgh Symphony principal cellist Michael Grebanier join Andre Previn at the piano for an intimate and informal hour of chamber music on Previn and The Pittsburgh, Sunday, April 10 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9 (rebroadcast Saturday, April 16 at 4 p.m.). The trio selections of Beethoven, as well as selections from the trio literature of Brahms and other masters of the form will be the focus of the concert.

Stern's passion for chamber-music has led him to join ensembles with other "superstars" of classical music. In September 1976, Stern opened a series of chamber concerts in New York titled "Stern and Friends"; the friends included violinist Itzhak Perlman, violist Pinchas Zuckerman, cellist Leonard Rose, and pianist Jean-Bernard Pommier.

Star soloists have been thought to have egos that get in the way of their playing in ensembles. But Stern has a different point of view: "The musical concept repays you for any lack of ego. The recompense is the finality of the involvement in the music at the highest-level — an exultation you can touch."

Hokule'a Voyage On TV 8

Centuries ago ancient Plynesians sailed thousands of miles across the Pacific in huge double-hulled sailing canoes. Now adventurous Hawaiians have created a dramatic reproduction of the voyaging canoe of their ancestors, and have saild her 3,000 miles from Hawaii to Tahiti. This epic journey of the Hokule'a ("Star of Gladness") is the subject of the "National Geographic Special" brodcasting Sunday, April 10 at 8 p.m. on the CTV Television Netowrk, Channel 8. Narrator-host is E. G. Marshall.

Theirs were incredible feats of navigation, for these early navigators sailed guided by the stars, ocean swells and current. Aboard they carried dried food, live plants and animals They were also the early settlers of the far-flung islands of the Pacific and finally, Hawaii.

Superspecial

Common to Host 'Easter in Israel'

Over the centuries humanity has expressed its greatest emotions through its music, not the least of that being music and song of the inspirational variety. Easter Sunday, April 10 at 8 p.m. CBC television will take viewers on a musical odyssey into the Holy Land to celebrate Easter In Israel. The one-hour Superspecial comgines traditional and contemporary religious music and song, performed on location and in the studio, with a look at an ancient land dominated by the preachings of Christ.

Superspecial: Easter In Israel stars popular singer Tommy Common as your host and guide, touring through such historical places as Bethlehem, Nazareth, Jerusalem, Jericho, Jordan, and Masada. Studio performers include Eleanor Collins, the British Columbia Boys' Choir, the St. Andrew's Wesley United Church Choir, and the Carol Coulson Dance Ensemble. Doug Parker and his orchestra provide musical direction.

The images captured on film seem enternal in their beauty. For example the ethereal quality of a slowly setting sun backlighting the jutting spires of the famed Church of the Beatitudes heightened by the voices of the B.C. Boys' Choir singing praise to All In An April Evening. Or the panorama of rippling sand dunes stretching as far as the eye can see, while a rising sun sharply outlines the camel backs of a resting caravan, Bedouin tents flapping in the pre-dawn breeze. A thousand years of history comes alive, even more forcefully through the addition of music and song.

Tommy Common brings back a living Easter memory, in one striking sequence after another. The combination of the song Turn, Turn, Turn with a film montage of an Arab way of life that's remained unchanged to this day; the gentle music of Morning Is Broken as the sun rises over the Sea of Galilee; a medley of Michael Row The Boat Ashore-Deep River-Roll Jordan, Roll on the banks of the Jordan River, all add vivid touches of realism and deeper meaning to the music and the location.

That mecca of Christianity, Jerusalem, lends itself naturally to Tommy's singing of The Holy City, as does Just A closer Walk With Thee performed at Tabgha, the legendary locale of the multiplication of loaves and fishes. There is so much more to see and hear in Superspecial.

The Master Golf Starts

CBS Sports will expand third- and fourth-round coverage to include pay at the final 10 holes at Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga. Saturday April 9 and Sunday, April 10, Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12 at 1 p.m.

As announced, if two or more golfers are tied for first place after 72 holes of play on Sunday, they will immediately proceed to the No. 1 tee for a sudden-death playoff, which will also be broadcast by CBS Sports, continuing on to successive holes until a Masters Champion is determined.

350 Mayans Survive in Jungles

In an Easter Sunday special presentation, April 10, at 10 p.m. on Channel 8 on CTV's "Window On The World: Fertility Rites for the Twenty-first Century" looks behind the issues of overpopulation to express the conditions of the human experience of people living in a society of exploding numbers.

One segment of the program studies a once-successful civilization that vanished in spite of a flourishing culture to provide new ways to examine the population problem. The sequence involves Lacondon Indians, the last of the pure Mayans who now survive on the edge of extinction in the Southeast jungles of Mexico. There are 350-400 of them left while just a thousand years ago they were 2-3 million strong.

What happened to them remains a mystery. The Mayan civilization disappeared but left behind temples, arts and social organizations to rival the ancient Greeks and Egyptians. One theory offers that the governing caste became so alienated from those they led that the society broke down. The people, by moving away from their historical and cultural sites and traditions, vanished as a civilization but not as individuals.

The program raises the question of whether or not we are repeating history, of if by tampering with population controls we might bring new problems to bear.

"Window On The World: Fertility Rites of the Twenty-first Century" is produced by Rene Bonniere for CTV's News, Features and Information Programming Department. Executive Producer is Ken Lefolii. CTV's Harvey Kirck is narrator. Cinematography is by Ed Higginson, C.S.C.

Associate Producer for location shooting is Jaime Riestra. Original music score, lyrics and theatrical sketches written by Jose Antonio Alcaraz. Mexican story consultant is Eduardo Terrazas.

Spotlight on Movies

Tom Sawyer, on 8 at 12:30 p.m. Adaptation of Mark Twain's classic, with Johnny Whitaker and Celeste Holm. Filmed in Missouri. (1973).

Come September (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Comedy starring Rock Hudson and Gina Lollobrigida. The plot is about an Italian millionaire who discovers his caretaker is using his villa as a hotel when he is away. (1961).

A New Kind of Love (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Paul Newman plays a cynical journalist in this comedy about his chase of a fashion designer, played by Joanne Woodward. (1963).

Breezy, on 5 at 9 p.m. Drama starring William Holden as an embittered middle-aged man trying to handle a romance with a woman 33 years younger than he is. Kay Lenz and Roger C. Carmel. Directed by Clint Eastwood. (1973).

Today's Highlights

Tomorrow, on 5 at 1 a.m. Cartoonist Jules Feiffer is the guest

What's Up Doc? (xxx), on 6 at 9 p.m. Modern-day comedy with Barbra Streisand making life miserable for a stuffy musicologist played by Ryan O'Neil. Madeline Kahn plays O'Neil's fiancee, who becomes involved in a mixup over stolden jewels. (1972).

They Drive by Night (xxx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Drama about the trucking business. Ida Lupino plays a woman consumed by passion, but there is also a silly murder trial which spoils the story. Also in the cast are George Raft, Humphrey Bogart and Ann Sheridan. (1940).

The Lonely Man (xx), on 11 at 10:30 p.m. Western focusing on the relationship between a gunman and his son he has not seen for 17 years. Jack Palance and Anthony Perkins. (1975).

City Beneath the Sea (xx), on 13 at midnight. Science fiction story about a scheme to steal a nation's nuclear and gold supplies from a submerged metropolis. Stewart Whitman, Rosemary Forsyth and Robert Wagner. (1971).

Ulzana's Raid (xxx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. A good western starring Burt Lancaster and Bruce Davison. The Indian versus cavalry story is deceptively ordinary, but this is an absorbing and well done movie, with Lancaster as an Indian scout who helps an inexperienced cavalry officer in trying to roust renegade Apache Ulzana and his band, out on a rampage of murder and revenge against the white man. (1972).

Ride the High Country (xxxx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Western starring Randolph Scott, Joel McCrea and Mariette Hartley. Rugged story of two old-time lawmen who sign on to escort gold from the fields to the bank, meeting trouble along the way. (1962).

Call to Danger (xx), on 7 and 12 at 12:40 a.m. Crime drama with Peter Graves as an American federal agent who engineers the rescue of a kidnapped underworld informer. Made for television in 1973.

Pioneer Woman (xx), on 8 at 2:10 a.m. Western adventure movie about a family which uproots itself and sets out for the promised farmland in Nebraska — only to meet hostility from the squatters and to suffer many other personal defeats. William Shatner and Joanna Pettet. (1973).

The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, on 6 at 2:15 a.m. English-made comedy (1970).

The Notorious Landlady (xxx) on 7 at 2:15 a.m. Comedy starring Jack Lemmon, Kim Novak and Fred Astaire. The story is about a young American who rents an apartment in London, England, from a beautiful but mysterious girl whom the police suspect of having murdered her husband. (1962).

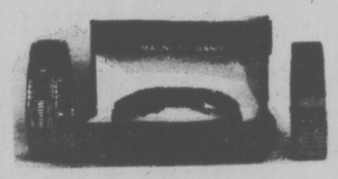
This Aimante Magnetic Bracelet Can Help You!!!



AIMANTE MAGNETIC HEALTHBAND

Medical scientists say "It helps." During testing of four major hospitals in Japan significant results were shown. It was found to relieve the symptoms of common ailments such as "rheumatic pains, headache, neuralgia, nervous tension, poor blood circulation, insomnia, constipation, muscle and joint stiffness." The Magnetic Bracelet has been developed by the Department of Internal Medicine at the Isuzu Hospital (Patent No. 48B621) and approved by the Japanese Department of Health and Welfare. These results were also submitted to national Health and Welfare Departments around the world. The Aimante Magnetic Bracelet has won a good reputation not only as a medical device but also as an attractive piece of wrist jewelry among its users in 43 countries ever since its debut on the market in 1966. The magnets in this Magnetic Healthband have a lifetime strength — therefore do not require any expensive boosters.

In today's hectic world people tend to depend on drugs to cure internal problems rather than seek external help. For example, headaches, in many cases, are symptoms of eye problems and could be cured by seeing an eye specialist. Magnetism is a well known form of external medicine. Magnetic rays produced by various magnets generate a weak current which runs through the body (Principle of Electro-magnetic Flow Meters). These weak currents increase the quantity of ions and such ionized blood produces the healing effects. When a fluid in which salt is dissolved (in this case the blood) comes in contact with the Magnetic field the physical properties of the blood change (Principle of Magnetic Treatment Device of Liquids widely used in Physiotherapy in many hospitals).

Crenna Likes Comedy

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Richard Crenna recalls what prompted him to undertake a new situation comedy:

"It was when my agent was talking to a producer about a comedy show for me. This producer had once worked on a comedy series I did 25 years ago or more; he wasn't even a writer, he was a 'joke-thrower.'

"When my name was brought up, the producer said, 'Does he do comedy?' "

Richard Crenna does. Evidence can be found on the new CBS Monday night series, "All's Fair." A much younger Richard Crenna can be found in re-runs of "Our Miss Brooks" and "The Real McCoys." And, in fact, Crenna's experience with comedy dates back to his boyhood, when he played dozens of cracked-voiced adolescents on radio shows from "A Date with Judy" to "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet."

"If that producer didn't remember that I did comedy," said Crenna, "I figured it was time for me to prove it."

Richard Crenna is a hometown boy and raised in a series of downtown hotels his parents managed. His radio career helped support the family and put himself through the University of Southern California. When "Our Miss Brooks" converted to television, Crenna went along. He played the callow tennager Walter Denton for three years, until he was well into his 20s.

"The Real McCoys" allowed him to grow up as husband and father, and the comedy series lasted six prosperous years. Next came two seasons of "Slattery's People," a fondly remembered series that was ahead of its time in dealing with serious subjects.

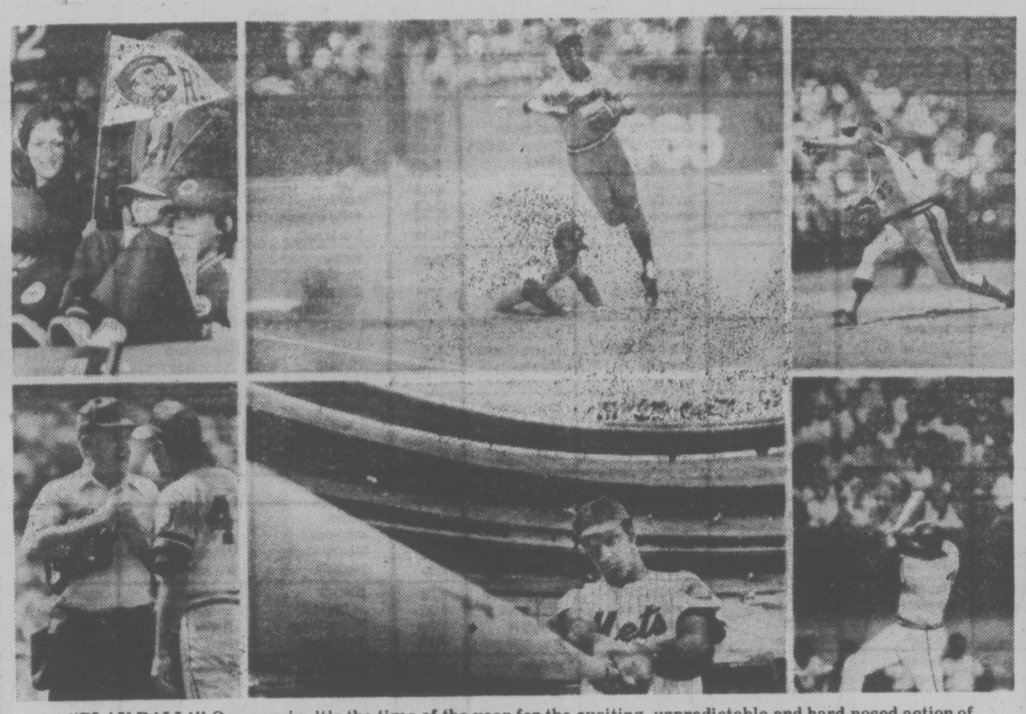
Then he was cast in a movie, "The Sand Pebbles" and after that came a succession of films: "Wait Until Dark," "Star," "Doctor's Wives," "Marooned," "Red Sky at Morning," "Catlow," "A Man Called Noon," "Breakheart Pass" — "mostly dramas, because the last series I had done was 'Slattery's."

During the past dozen years Crenna has been offered more series than he can remember.

"I turned them all down," he said. "For one thing, I wanted to spend more time with my kids Seana, Richard, Maria. Also I felt restricted as an actor to be playing a single role." Then came the offer of "All's Fair."

Mystics Dean Visits Solway

The author of 22 books on psychic phenomena, astrology and philosophy will be on the Larry Solway show Monday at 9:30 a.m. on Channel 13. He is known as the Dean of American Mystics.



"PLAY BALL!" Once again, it's the time of the year for the exciting, unpredictable and hard-nosed action of Major League Baseball and ABC Sports once again will provide a season of coverage. "ABC's Monday Night Baseball" has its second-season premiere April 11 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 4, kicking off 18 regular-season telecasts on the ABC Television Network. And for the first time, ABC Sports will also televise the World Series, the climax to the baseball season and one of the greatest sports events in history.

Four-hour Special Begins Wednesday

The Amazing Howard Hughes

"The Amazing Howard Hughes," a major four-hour special which traces the life and career of one of the world's most wealthy and mysterious men, will be broadcast in two parts: Wednesday, April 13 and Thursday, April 14 on Channels 7 and 8 at 9 p.m.

The special, an EMI Television Productions, Inc., production, with Roger Gimbel as executive producer, is based on the book "Howard the Amazing Mr. Hughes" by Noah Dietrich, long-time associate of the reclusive Hughes, and Bob Thomas, veteran Hollywood correspondent for the Associated Press. In starring roles are Tommy Lee Jones as Hughes and versatile Ed Flanders as Dietrich.

The first part of the four-hour special follows Hughes from his takeover of the Hughes Tool Co. when he was 18 to the start of his famous record-breaking world flight in 1938. During this period, he hired Dietrich to oversee his rapidly expansive ventures while he pursued his interests in aviation, golf, film-making and Hollywood starlets.

The great triumphs and tragedies of Hughes' middle and final years are examined in the conclusion of the special. Events of this period which are emphasized in the special are Hughes' critical injury as a result of a plane crash, and his involvement in an historic Senate probe pertaining to war profits. As years follow, Hughes' behavior changes radically. He isolates himself from others and develops a phobia about germs, but his business activities continue until his death in April 1976.

Jones, the compelling young star of "Jackson County Jail" and the soon-to-be-released "Rolling Thunder," began acting in New York, where he appeared on Broadway in "Ulysses in Nighttown" with Zero Mostel, "A Patriot for Me," and "Four on a Garden." His television credits include guest appearances on "Baretta" and "Charlie's Angels."

MASAO SUGIURA, holding his grandchild, is surrounded by members of his family and his apprentices who work together to run the Sugiura family business of catering. They are the subjects of John Nathan's intimate and revealing portrait of a Japanese family in "Full Moon Lunch," airing on Documentary Showcase, April 12 at 10 p.m. on Channel 9.

Show Spotlights Japanese Family

"If you want to be a real cook, look at an art book or study flowers instead of spending your time playing mahjong," Masao Sugiura, head of a family of Japanese caterers, scolds his young apprentice." Food has to look good to taste good."

Nobuo, the 19-year-old apprentice, in spite of his long hair and preference for western rock and roll, silently nods his head as apprentices in Japan have done for generations when the master spoke.

The master-apprentice relationship is just one of many aspects of Japanese family life explored in Full Moon Lunch, airing Tuesday, April 12 at 10 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Ever since the Second World War, the Sugiura family has been preparing traditional box lunches (obento) of rice, fish, and intricately cut vegetables for funeral parties and memorial services.

Filmmaker John Nathan, a well-known translator ("The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With The Sea") and critic, spent 3 weeks getting to know the Sugiuras — patriarch Masao, his frank wife, 87 year old mother, two sons and their wives, and four apprentices. After gaining their confidence, he filmed them for a month: "We watched them ardently night and day, at work in their kitchen, after work at meals, in the public bath, playing mahjong, out drinking on the town. Sometimes we recorded their words and actions in 'cinema verite' manner; other times I had them recreate situations . . . I had witnessed . . . At all times I was guided by my desire to get at the essence of the family."

JOURNAL EXAMINES STATE'S SHORELINE

The Vanishing Beach, a film which explores the conflicts over access to Washington State's shorelines, will be presented on NINE'S JOURNAL, Tuesday, April 12 at 7:30 p.m. on Public TV 9 (rebroadcast Saturday, April 16 at 9 p.m.) The special Channel 9 production will be introduced by Public Affairs Manager Mike Kirk.

To capture the story of "The Vanishing Beach," producer-cinematographer Roger Hagen and Channel 9 producer Steve Welch traveled throughout the state, interviewing concerned citizens, county and state officials, and property owners.

CBC Airs ACTRA Awards

World-renowned actor Barry Morse will be there. So will award-winning actress Jayne Eastwood. And producer-broadcaster Lorraine Thomson, crusty old Gordon Sinclair, comic Dave Broadfoot, sportspersonality Bill Good Sr., award-winner Adrienne Clarkson, Lister Sinclair, and Sean Mulcahy. The list is a who's who of Canadian show-biz. Combine that with the fact that each of the above will present an award to one of their peers at this year's ACTRA Awards and the phrase "star-studded" rings true.

It says a lot for both the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists and the CBC that the names are recognized by the Canadian public, that these performers are truly stars. And that's good. What's even better is that the public will once again be able to get an inside look at the live awards event, seeing virtually everyone who is anyone in or on television and radio.

The Sixth Annual ACTRA Awards will be carried on the CBC television network at 6 p.m. on Thursday, April 15 live from the Hotel Toronto. The built-in glamor, tantalizing excitement, and entertainment qualities, add up to make it a top television event on either side of the longest ungarded border in the world.

Television producer Paddy Sampson has gone the awards one step further by adding top-line entertainers to the show. Vocalist Gloria Kaye, soon to have her own CBC-TV network mini-series, will be there, along with the indomitable and clever stage duo of Dinah Christie and Tom Kneebone. Jack Northmore and Billy Van will team up to tickle funny bones, while folk-singer Bob Ruzicka from Edmonton will add his laid-back easy style. And from Quebec it's Claude Leveillee, internationally known for both his song artistry and his song writing.

Tying it all together will be three masters of ceremonies: author-broadcaster Pierre Berton, actor-singer Gordon Pinsent, and broadcaster-author Barbara Frum.

Unlike the Oscars, ACTRA Awards are unique and free from pressure when it comes to voting and judging. ACTRA members from Canada select their choices and 16 national judging panels (with over 70 judges) across the country vote twice, once to reduce the nominees to 3 finalists in each category and a second time to select the actual winners who are kept secret until the envelopes are handed over to the masters of ceremonies.

Spotlight on Movies

Chief Crazy Horse (xx), on 8 at 1 p.m. Western with an interesting story about one of the greatest Indian chiefs of all time — Crazy Horse, played by Victor Mature. The story is about the chief's alliance with a cavalry major and their eventual parting. Also in the cast are Susan Ball and John Lund (1955).

Three Texas Steers (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Western starring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune (1939).

Sweet Hostage, on 4 at 9 p.m. Off-beat drama made for television with Martin Sheen as a fugitive mental patient who lives in a world of fantasy, reciting Coleridge and thinking he is Kubla Khan. Linda Blair and Jeanne Cooper (1975).

Elizabeth of Ladymead, on 12 at 9 p.m. English-made comedy starring Anna Neagle, Hugh Williams, Michael Laurence, Bernard Lee, and Nicholas Phipps. Neagle plays four women, at various stages in history, greeting their husbands home from the wars (1949).

DENNIS WEAVER dressed for his part in the television series Marshall Mc Cloud, which has just finished seven years on TV. "We kept the show humorous and that helped its ratings," says Weaver.

Winchester 73 (xx), on 11 at 10:30 p.m. Western about a renegade after a valuable rifle. Tom Tryon and John Saxon. Made for television in 1967.

Boccaccio 70 (xxx), on 13 at 11 p.m. Italian-made comedy starring Romy Schneider, Anita Ekberg and Sophia Loren. Three naughty tales: The Temptation of Dr. Antonio; The Job; and The Raffle. The directors were Felini, Visconti and De Sica. Dubbed in English. (1962).

Katherine (xx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Drama made for television about a young heiress who turns revolutionary. Sissy Spacek plays Katherine. Others are Art Carney, Henry Winkler, Jane Wyatt, and Julie Kavner. (1975).

Jenny (x), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Sappy soaper about a filmmaker who marries a pregnant girl to avoid the draft (1970).

Negatives (xxx), on 13 at 12:30 a.m. British-made macabre, offbeat drama which is not everyone's cup of tea. It's a story about a couple who thrive on charades for sexual stimulation — they usually play a famous wife-murder and his victim. Enter a glamourous photographer, with an equally warped sense of bedroom play, and the film goes off in mad tangents. Diane Cilento, Peter McEnery, and Glenda Jackson (1968).

I'm No Angel (xx), on 2 at 1:05 a.m. Comedy about a carnival girl's rise to fame, starring Mae West and Cary Grant (1933).

The Great Sioux Massacre (xx), on 7 at 1:30 a.m. Low-budget attempt to tell the story behind Custer's last stand. Joseph Cotten, Darren McGavin and Philip Carey (1965).

A Very Missing Person (xx), on 6 at 2:10 a.m. Mystery with Eve Arden as amateur sleuth. The story and the supporting cast aren't up to the star's level. Made for television in 1972.

River of Gold (x), on 8 at 2:10 a.m. Dull story about underwater treasure hunt in Acapulco. Filmed on location for television in 1971.

Wild Heritage (xx), t 6 at 3:40 a.m. An entertaining western about two pioneer families' trek west, to make their home in a new land. Will Rogers Jr., Maureen O'Sullivan and Troy Donahue (1958).

War Arrow (xx), on 8 at 3:40 a.m. Western starring Maureen O'Hara and Jeff Chandler. An action-filled movie with a predictable plot (1954).

Regionalization NFB's Top Goal

Regionalization has become one of the top priorities of the National Film Board, according to Andre Lamy, Canadian government film commissioner and chairman of the NFB.

In addition to its operations in Montreal, the NFB now has English production centres in Halifax, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver and French units in Moncton, Toronto and Winnipeg, Lamy recently told members of Parliament invited to a screening of films produced by the board's Atlantic studio.

Lamy explained that the board's production activities had been centralized in Montreal because "the talents and facilities to do otherwise were not available." However, the rapid development of communications in Canada — and the desire to develop regional responses to Anglophone cultural needs, as well as the needs of French-Canadians outside Quebec — had changed the context in which the NFB functioned.

As the regions began to develop their own resources, the Film Board adapted to these changes. The regionalization program began four years ago with the following objectives:

- To produce and distribute visual materials which reflect regional perceptions and foster national understanding;
- To stimulate regional development of Canadian film industry resources, both private and public;
- To provide regional access to the full range of NFB production, distribution and advisory skills and services.

"A quick glance at our budget will give you some idea of the importance we attach to regional production," the NFB chairman said.

"From $900,000 four years ago, our regional production budget has increased to $2,950,000 in the current fiscal year. And we expect that this figure will grow to $7,900,000 by 1981."

English regional production budget was just over $2,000,000 this year, about 20 per cent of the total English production budget. "In not too many years, regional production will account for almost 50 per cent of our English production budget," Lamy predicted.

Budget for regional French production this year totalled $900,000 about 15 per cent of the total French production budget.

The permanent employees in the regional offices are presently confined to producers and support staff. Regional producers are responsible for processing locally-generated ideas and for hiring local freelancers or contracting films to local companies.

That we started to reach our goals can be seen through the achievements of our Atlantic Production Centre, Lamy said.

"In less than three years of operation the Atlantic unit had completed 18 films and had 12 more in production, all directed by residents of the region. Of 11 films scheduled for completion this year, five are sponsored by government departments."

"ROOTS" REUNION — "Roots" author Alex Haley (1), Chuck Connors (c) who played Massa Tom Moore, and LeVar Burton, who played the young Kunta Kinte, rejoice together in Beverly Hills at a reunion party for the people who made television's most-watched show "Roots." Executive producer David L. Wolper, who hosted the dinner, said that there will be a sequel called "Roots II" that they are presently working on.

Gerussi Look-Alike Sought

A "flying" boat stunt, and a man who looks like Bruno Gerussi are two of the ingredients in an upcoming Beachcombers episode. The stunt is sending a jet boat "flying" over eight boats tied beam to beam.

"That's easy compared to finding someone who looks like Bruno Gerussi", says executive producer Hugh Beard. "So we're running a contest — the Bruno Gerussi Look-Alike Contest. The winner will be flown to Gibsons for a part opposite Bruno in the Beachcombers".

The contest runs until May 1, 1977. Send a good likeness, snapshot or polaroid will do, to: Bruno Gerussi, Look-Alike Contest, Molly's Reach, Gibsons, B.C. Entries must be postmarked no later than May 1. Photos submitted cannot be returned. Decision of the contest judges—Jack Wasserman, Vancouver Sun columnist, Judge Nancy Morrison, and Bruno Gerussi, star of Beachcombers and Celebrity Cooks, is final. Winner must be available for filming latter part of May. For further information, call The Beachcombers — 112-604-886-7811.

200 Films Later For Brooks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The man who played Scarlett O'Hara's first husband, Charles Hamilton, in Gone With the Wind and later played Cpl. Boone in television's Rin-Tin-Tin now is a 58-year-old grandfather running an ambulance service in suburban Glendale.

Rand Brooks, who says he died in more pictures than almost anyone, admits: "I was never very big in show business.

"There's an awful lot of luck involved. You can do well for years and then fall on your butt. The ambulance business is a lot steadier."

In a career from the 1930s to the 1950s. Brooks appeared in about 200 movies, including Babes in Arms with Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney and several of Rooney's Andy Hardy films.

He used to ride the range with William Boyd in the 1940s, playing Hopalong Cassidy's sidekick, Lucky. And he taught the Lone Ranger, actor Clayton Moore, to ride a horse.

Brooks still gets residuals from the Rin-Tin-Series, which brought him his greatest exposure. He was in 138 of the half-hour shows in the program's five-year run during the 1950s, and the shows are still broadcast now and then around the U.S.

Inspection seal stamped on sides of beef

Documentary Probes Processing of Meat

Meat, the newest in a series of films produced, directed and edited by Frederick Wiseman airs Thursday, April 14 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Filmed in Colorado, Meat examines the process by which Americans receive one of their main food staples — from the auction and fattening of cattle and sheep to the slaughtering, packaging and retail sale.

The two-hour program focuses on the daily activities of Monfort of Colorada, Inc., a company that owns both feed lots and a meat packing company. Feed lots are the areas where cattle, once bought by the company, are taken to be fattened up before they are slaughtered for beef. They are scientifically measured grain mixtures for this purpose.

The film details the slaughter and packaging process step by step, emphasizing the machinery involved, as well as the people who run the equipment, raise the animals, and handle sales of the products. As Meat shows, the whold field of meat production is becoming more systematic and computerized.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

His True Love the Stage

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Stephen Joyce is very fine actor who works in soap operas so he can do what he really loves, act on the stage. Not that he puts down working in soaps — the actor is a professional and gives his all in whatever role he is playing but admits that turning it on for the tube is, for the most part, more a matter of mechanics than emotion.

Stephen is currently playing George Kimball in the new NBC daytime serial "Lovers and Friends" and soap fans may also recall him as Roy Archer in "Where the Heart Is" and Dr. Hiller in "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing."

"I don't mean to imply that actors on soaps aren't good," said Stephen. "There are many good actors working in soaps, but they often have to keep explaining plots and situations that they don't have time for any intense character shadings. That's why I keep returning to the stage, to replenish my craft and be stimulated by live audience response."

His most recent return to the stage was an Off-Broadway showcase production of "The Savages," a play that was successful in London but was considered too expensive and riwky a project for a big Broadway mounting.

Earlier this season, in "The Runner Stumbles," Stephen gave an electrifying performance as a clergyman who found himself attracted to a young nun and ended up on trial for her brutal murder. His notices were glowing and there's even talk that he may be nominated for a Tony Award.

Stephen is used to working in a soap and moonlighting, as it were, in a play at the same time. It has become a way of life for him. Once he was working in a soap and appearing in a Washington, D.C., production of "Hamlet." His soap opera character was so deeply involved in the plotline at the time that it meant daily commuting. He and the producers of the Washington theatre outfitted a small van with a mattress and hired a driver to shuttle Stephen between his two acting jobs.

"I was younger and definitely more foolish in those days," the actor said.

"Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" plans to branch out this summer rather than play the rerun game. Producer Norman Lear wants the Ferwnood, Ohio, citizens to offer their version of "The Tonight Show," simply titled "Fernwood Tonight." The characters and the cast haven't been set yet, but Lear intends to use Fernwood locals which means "MH, MH" characters will drop in from time to time. Other guests will be fictitious celebrities, comics, and authors, all out hustling their wares.

"Fernwood Tonight" is tentatively scheduled for a July 4th opening, following the end of the current "Mary Hartman" season. The summer variety show comprises a new entry for the syndicated market — 10 weeks of "Fernwood Tonight," 30 weeks of "Mary Hartman," 10 more of "Fernwood Tonight," plus a couple of weeks of another property.

CHANNEL CHATTER:

Remember last December's fancy "After Hours" musical special with CBS daytime stars doubling as song and dance performers? Well, it's time for an encoure. Late May is the target for the next "After Hours," bash and the performers selected to croon many a tune include Michael Allinson (He's Ian Russell in "Love of Life"); Kathryn Hays (she's Kim Dixon in "As the World Turns"); Tudi Wiggins (she's Meg Hart in "Love of Life"); Don Stewart (he's Mike Bauer in "Guiding Light"); Meg Bennett (she's Liza Kaslo in "Search for Tomorrow"); and David Hasselhoff (the popular Snapper Foster in "The Young and the Restless") . . . Keith Charles, seen as Ralph Mitchell in CBS's "As the World Turns," is a busy man these days. He returned to the long-running off-Broadway musical, "The Fantasticks," for a three-week run. He and his wife, Nancy Ford, also have written for "As the World Turns." Keith is probably one of daytime's most familiar faces. Over the past 10 years, he has played Rick Oliver in "Edge of Night," Prof. Alex McDaniel in "Guiding Light," both Dr. Brian Neeves and Nick Kane in "The Secret Storm," Ross Cavanaugh in "Search for Tomorrow," and many other roles.

PLOT PORTENTS

Now that he has seen his daughter Karen, rapist Ron Becker schemes to get her away from Snapper and Chris in "The Young and the Restless." Snapper may have been suspended from the hospital for his views on euthanasia, but he's gained stature with everyone, even his mother Liz. Meawhile, Kay Chancellor zeros in on young Joann Curtzynski, regardless of the lesbian overtones her moves may imply.

Will police psychiatrists on NBC's "Days of Our Lives" push Trish over the brink with their questions about her stepfather's death? The showdown is coming and Trish's mother Jeri will play a key role. There's also more on Sharon's suicidal attempts, while romantic Robert continues to feel sorry for himself, daydreaming about Rebecca's return.

It's crazy time on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Loretta calls Mary about seeing Big Foot. Harry has an envelope for Cathy; Vernon and Tex want Tom to burn down Dewey's house; and Charley and Loretta find a child on their doorstep.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — It was a $10 bet that put Jim and Marian Jordan — later "Fibber McGee and Molly" — into radio something like a half-century ago.

And it was a cable to Egypt that finally put Jordan into television as recently as last December.

Jordan, Fibber McGee for 21 years, retired in 1961 when Marian died of cancer.

He didn't need to work, and after Marian's death, he didn't expect to do any. They'd been a team too long for him to break in a new partner.

However, a few months ago while vacationing in Egypt, he received a cable from his old buddy Hal Kanter, producer of "Chico and the Man," asking him to do a guest role in the show.

"When Hal asked me to do the show," Jordan says, "I said, 'Sure' without even thinking about it because, in the first place, he and I'd be doing a cameo role.

"But I was in for a surprise.

"To tell you the truth, I was scared when I found out how much was expected of me.

"No, I don't know that I want to do more television."

Jordan went through a variety of careers, none with tremendous success, before he and Marian became "Fibber McGee and Molly," possibly the most popular couple on radio.

They'd met during choir practice in their home town, Peoria, Ill., when he was 17 and she 16, and they fell in love on sight.

They couldn't marry immediately after his high school graduation, though, because Jim's first job, clerk in a wholesale drug house, only paid $8 a week which even in those preinflation days, wasn't enough for a head of a family.

Hoping to improve his situation, he went into vaudeville as top tenor with an act called "A Night With the Poets."

Sleeper-jumps, dirty dressing rooms and his absence from Marian discouraged him, however, so he went back to Peoria and tried to join the Army.

Since World War I was raging, he thought he'd be snapped up at once. But he wasn't. Not right away.

But five days after he finally married Marian on Aug. 31, 1918, he was on a troop train headed for Georgia, and six weeks later he was in France.

Attached to an entertainment division after the Armistice, Jim didn't get back to Peoria and his bride until July 9, 1919.

Out of uniform, he got a job as a machinist's helper. He sold washing machines and vacuum cleaners and he became a day laborer.

These jobs were neither profitable nor satisfying, so he became an insurance salesman.

That didn't satisfy him either.

Meanwhile, he and Marian were playing and singing at club affairs, and it was at one of these that an advance man for a theatrical company heard them and told them they should be in show business.

Jim and Marian gave it a try but their act didn't put them in The Palace.

Jim went back to Peoria and got a job in a dry goods store where he made $10 a week which he and his wife augmented by playing local club dates.

The Jordans were in Chicago visiting Jim's brother when the $10 bet put them into radio.

They were listening to a broadcast when Jim complained, "We could sing better than anyone on that station," to which his brother replied, "$10 says you can't."

The Jordans were hired, not as "Fibber McGee and Molly" but as "The O'Henry Twins."

In 1935, they became "Fibber McGee and Molly," characters who became as familiar in North American homes as members of the householders' families.

HENRY GROSS
. . . Beach Boys soundalike

HENRY GROSS: "Show Me to the Stage" (Litesong LS6010).★★★

Gross is the current leader in the Beach Boys soundalike sweepstakes; last year's hit single, "Shannon," pushed him past Eric Carmen and America. But Gross lacks the stuff that made the Beach Boys and his other role models, the Beatles, great. His vocals are excellent evocations of both groups, and his guitar playing is sometimes as tough and spirited as the Beatles' best licks. But these are mere conventions and, without seeking a way to burst past their limitations, contrivance is the only possible result. His approach to the Beatles' classic "Help" epitomizes the problem: The Beatles sounded as if they were in mortal jeopardy, but Gross sounds like he's merely heard a rumor that someone else might be. And that's all the difference in the world.

TELEVISION: "Marquee Moon" (Elektra 7E-1098).★★★

It's easy to see why partisans of the underground consider Television, which is synonymous with leader Tom Verlaine, their brightest hope: Between the poetic chaos of Patti Smith and the rigid reductionism of the Ramones, he has found a middle ground. Verlaine is a strong lyricist — although utterly devoid of passion, a strange but likeable shouter as a singer and a guitarist whose limitations serve him well. All of which sounds like a rock and roll band to me. This is no kind of breakthrough, but if Verlaine ever discovers the pleasures of melody, he could make one.

TAJ MAHAL: "Music Fuh Ya" (Music Para Tu) (Warner Bros. BS No. 2994).★★★★

This is Taj's most Caribbean recording, finding him backed almost continuously by a steel band, among other things. It is also one of his best. The steel band adds a joyous element that becomes almost every song, and on "Truck Driver's Two-Step," with its doo-wopping chorus, Taj proves once again that he could be a marvelous soul singer if he wanted to. But, if he's too resolutely eccentric to rival Stevie Wonder, he can stand happily next to Ry Cooder as a master at combining the musical traditions of North America. Which ain't bad at all.

YVONNE ELLIMAN: "Love Me" (RSO RS-1-3018).★★★

Elliman can be a fantastic rock singer, and she proves her soul mettle with a wonderful reworking of Barbara Lewis' romantic classic, "Hello Stranger," on this album. Unfortunately, producer Freddie Perren has buried all under acres of goo; this album makes the Bee Gees sound as tough as the Rolling Stones. Does Perren think Elliman plays and sings in Eric Clapton's band because Clapton is looking for a new Connie Francis?

JETHRO TULL: "Sons From the Wood" (Chrysalis CHR 1132).★★★

In which England's most arrogant band — and that's saying something — continues to pillage the nation's folk and medieval musical traditions in the name of innovation. That would be all right, too, if only Ian Anderson could sing — but then, I suppose it is futile to argue with a decade of success.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

Mrs. W. Bostwick of Burnaby, B.C., commenting on the strange things that appeal to collectors says she has heard of people who collect hummingbirds and would like to know how that can be.

All things are possible in the wide and wonderful world of collectibles, Mrs. Bostwick, although in this case I suspect that we are really talking about hemming rather than hummingbirds. They are also known as embroidery birds or grippers and consist of some kind of clamp which was fastened onto a table to hold material in one place while it was being sewn by hand. On top of the clamp would be a device which might be shaped like a bird. You pressed the tail to open the beak in which the material was gathered. By the mid-19th century hemming birds were in full flight. Many of them originated from Connecticut — naturally — and many were almost baroque in their ornamentation. Dolphins, cupids and frogs were also popular forms. Some were made of metal and some of wood. I have never seen one myself but obviously they would make a great collectible.

J. Rivera of Lethbridge, Alta., asks what is a "hog fiddle?"

It is another name for a mountain dulcimer, a three-stringed folk instrument, often home-made and popular in the Appalachians. As far as I know they are plucked rather than bowed and presumably belong with the zither family rather than violins.

Mrs. M. Mather of London, Ont., asks why Toby jugs are so called.

My reference book on the subject says that they were first modelled from an engraving of someone by the name of Toby Philpot which appeared around 1760. That may well be but I suspect that Toby Philpot was given that name because he was a toper — meaning, a heavy drinker.

Paul Rendel, also of London, asks where he can get more information on Aladdin Lamps. A company by the name of Phillips Lamp Shades Ltd., 172 Main Street, Toronto, Ont., M4E 2W1, advertise as follows: "Aladdin — the Magic Name in Lamps", hardbound, 168 pages (9x12). Virtually all Aladdin Lamp styles, oil and electric are illustrated. Burner drawings, dates of manufacture. A lamp Collector's Bible. That's all. No price — which wastes everyone's time to write and ask them.

Readers questions should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Prevue, 15 Suffolk Street E., Guelph, Ont., N1H 2H7.

Liz Taylor's bridegroom, John Warner, is playing a small role in her movie "Winter Kills." . . . And George Raft is handling a cameo role in Mae West's "Sextette." In 1932 when Raft was one of the biggest names at Paramount, he successfully urged the studio to cast Mae in his movie, "Night After Night." He's always been one of her foremost fans which is why he accepted a minor role in her new film.

Elizabeth Taylor is a hard act to follow, so the girl who'll play the horse-loving youngster in "International Velvet" may have a rocky row to hoe.

MGM will make "International Velvet" as a sequel to "National Velvet," the movie which made the then-little-girl Liz famous.

"They do a show every day. The younger one has an instictive feeling for acting that's frightening." Yet he hopes the girls won't become actresses.

Stan Herman, partner in the movieland hangout Pips, husband of actress Linda Evans and glamour boy of the Beverly Hills real estate business, reports that the well-heeled are pouring into the city's diamond-studded environs from all over the world, "because Beverly Hills is the last place in the world where you can drive a Rolls Royce and not get shot."

Herman, whose office has probably sold more property to and for television, movie and rock stars than any other company in the world and who lists among his clients The Beatles, Barbra Streissand, Dean Martin and Natalie Wood, not only claims that his bailiwick is the safest in the world for the super affluent but also the least expensive, considering what you get for your money.

"You can go to a good restaurant in Beverly Hills," he argues, "and get a nice dinner for $20 to $40 per person. Compare that with what you'd pay for a comparable dinner in Paris, or Tokyo or even in New York!

"Beverly Hills not only has the best fire and police departments in the world but some of the best bargains."

Thus it's understandable, he thinks, that the French, Italians, British and Iranians — yes, especially Iranians — are seeking "the tranquility of Beverly Hills."

ROY CLARK

"The Italians are afraid of being killed or kidnapped in Italy, and the Iranians want to get away from the threat of Middle Eastern war.

"It's strange, but I can't remember making a single sale to a Japanese, but I recently had an Iranian rug dealer pay half a million dollars in cash for a home here."

He bitterly recalls a near-transaction which fell through when the potential buyer took a fancy to three paintings in the hall and insisted that they go with the house.

The owner was so offended that she not only kept the paintings but the walls they adorned.

But cases of this kind are exceptional.

On the other hand, he says, almost everyone shopping for a manor within his juriscition demands that its grounds include a championship tennis court.

"And usually," Herman says, "the court must run north and south. One man put a compass down on the court to check it out before he'd buy."

PLAN Nº 1787

A Chalet Style

Designed for contemporary living and entertaining, this expansive family home has the exterior look of an Alpine chalet. The overall width is only 44 feet and will comfortably fit the average lot.

In the illustration the exterior walls are covered in a texture stucco, with heavy shake shingles on the roof, and natural colored brick at the front entrance. An alternative plan could be to replace the stucco with cedar or aluminum siding, or brick veneer and replace the shakes with asphalt shingles. Combining several of these materials, such as brick up to the first floor and siding on the balance, could create further interest externally.

The sunken living room, featuring a large fireplace and floor to ceiling windows at the front, can only be described as luxurious. With high vaulted ceilings running the length of the living room and dining room and an open railing separating these two rooms, the feeling is no less than super spacious.

There is a pass through from the suite-size dining room, as well as a convenient pocket door to the kitchen. Both the dining room and nook are handy to the well designed and compact kitchen. Off the nook area an inner hall contains two large storage closets.

On the lower level the large family room is a large utility service core with a washer and dryer, vanity, toilet and shower. A separate room contains the furnace and hot water tank. The added luxury bonus of a privare sauna has also been included in this service centre.

Across the hall is a large storage unit that could become a small workshop. For loading and unloading there is a convenient door to the double garage.

Luxury plus are the words to describe the master bedroom. A vast walk-in wardrobe compliments the three piece shower ensuite. With sliding glass doors to a large private sundeck, the bedroom itself is big enough for a good size suite.

Plans for design No. 1787 may be obtained at a cost of $70 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 (1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling.) To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. According to Guinness

LONGEST MOUSTACHE

The longest moustache on record is that of Masuriya Din (born 1908), a Brahmin of the Partabgarh district in Uttar Pradesh, India. It grew to an extended span of 102 inches between 1949 and 1962, and costs over $30 per year in upkeep.

DANCE BANDS

The most protracted session is one of 321 hours (13 days 9 hours) by the Black Brothers of Bonn, West Germany, ending on January 2, 1969. Never less than a quartet were in action during the marathon.

LONGEST SENTENCE

A sentence of 1,300 words appears in "Absalom, Absalom" by William Faulkner, and one of 3,153 words with 86 semicolons and 390 comas occurs in the "History of the Church of God" by Sylvester Hassell of Wilson, North Carolina, circa 1884. Some authors such as James Joyce (1882-1941) eschew punctuation altogether. The first 40,000 words of the "Gates of Paradise" by George Andrzeyevski (Panther) appear to lack any punctuation.

LARGEST ENCYCLOPAEDIA

The largest Encyclopaedia ever compiled was the "Great Standard Encyclopaedia" of Yung-lo ta tien of 22,937 manuscript books (370 still survive), written by 2,000 Chinese scholars in 1403-08.

PANCAKE TOSSING

Brenda ("Angel") Lavisso of the Village Inn Pancake House, Fort Worth, Texas, flipped a pancake (circumference of 9½ inches) 8,960 times in 65½ minutes on December 20, 1975.

YAWNING

In a case reported in 1888, a 15-year-old female patient yawned continuously for a period of five weeks.

Pollution at Sea

People throw some 35 million plastic bottles into the ocean every year. In addition it is estimated that in the past 12 months, 100 million tons of oil, 5.7 million tons of tin, 3 million tons of copper, 130,000 tons of arsenic, 25,000 tons of DDT, 12,000 tons of cadmium and 12,000 tons of mercury have been dumped into the oceans.

Author in His Own Play

Gordon Pinsent is one of Newfoundland's most talented sons. Actor, playwright, filmmaker, novelist, singer and songwriter — he's made his mark in all these fields. But although he's lived and worked in Hollywood he's never forgotten his roots.

John and the Missus was his second novel with a Newfoundland setting; the first, The Rowdyman, was adapted from his successful screenplay. Set in a small, economically threatened mining town, it chronicles the changing lives of miner John Munn and his family. After he becomes seriously injured in a mining accident, Munn finds himself alienated from his friends and family, and he decides to sink his house as a protest against what is happening to himself and his native land.

After dramatizing his book for the stage of the Neptune Theatre last year, Pinsent then wrote the screenplay, but to date it has not been produced.

Meanwhile, Pinsent has also adapted John and the Missus for CBC Stage and this radio version will be heard Sat., April 9 at 7:05 p.m. Recreating their stage roles are Pinsent himself and Halifax actress Florence Paterson as the characters of the title.

So while the film version has not yet been realized, the rest of Canada will be able to hear this sensitive portrait of a proud, independent and iron-willed man and his loving, warm-hearted wife. Writing about the play, Herbert Whittaker, drama critic emeritus for the Toronto Globe and Mail had this to say: "It is a true and poetic document of one man's faith in his homeland, it is also a very touching and amusing piece of national drama."

Jesus of Nazareth

Before reading this you will have had the opportunity to view the screening on television of the first part of the new Franco Zeffirelli film, Jesus of Nazareth (the second part will be televised April 10). I am concerned here solely with the book, which has the same title, and which is based on the film. Because I review books, not movies, I want to make it clear that I am dealing with the book before risking being influenced in any way by the movie.

The publishers claim that this book is unique. That word has been devalued by overuse, but I am delighted to concede that, in this instance, the claim is justified.

Hundreds of books appear every year about Jesus and for that reason alone Jesus of Nazareth is not a title I would normally choose from a catalogue. In fact, if Keith Sacre, the publishers' representative in western Canada, had not sent me the book and taken the trouble to telephone me long-distance to say he had done so, I doubt whether I would ever have concerned myself with it — and by ignoring it I would have denied myself an enriching experience.

Even after receiving the book there were many reasons why I felt disinclined to review it, not the least of these being that it goes against the grain to review a book based on a movie.

Fuelling my aversion was the fact that the text by William Barclay is based on the film script written by Anthony Burgess, and that the book is chiefly composed of pictures — a selection from the 5,000 stills photographed by Paul Ronald during production of the movie.

The first thing I did is what I imagine everyone who obtains this book will do — glance at the pictures in an effort to identify the well-known stars in the cast. The first strange occurence was the realization that I wasn't really interested in this identification game, that this wasn't make-believe at all.

I suddenly realized that I believed I was looking at pictures of Herod the Great, Mary, John the Baptist, Joseph of Arimathea, Pontius Pilate, Nicodemus, Simon Peter, Amos the Zealot, and other biblical characters, and not at people portraying them. Most astonishing of all was the feeling that grew as I turned the pages that the central character was not an actor but was in fact the historical Jesus.

Such a confession may appear fanciful coming from a true believer; the fact that it is made by a practising skeptic should convince you of its veracity.

Of course, it's the Zeffirelli magic at work. This film director is unequalled in his use of color and his ability to group people for maximum effect. But that's only part of it. Every face, even of those who merely form the crowds, exactly fits our conception of the people involved. And the authenticity extends to garments and settings.

Actually, the photographs were taken in Morocco and Tunisia, but there's nothing wrong with that. I was in both those countries, as well as in Palestine (now Israel), during the Second World War, and I was struck by the similarities of architecture and terrain in the older cities, and by the sameness of facial features and tatty wearing apparel of their poorer denizens.

It is in fact the authenticity of clothing (even Jesus' raiment is tattered and dirty) that lends verisimilitude to these remarkable photographs. This look of poverty, in marked contrast to the rich vestments of members of the Sanhedrin and the luxurious clothing of the Roman rulers, is surely exactly what it was like in AD 1.

Because this book is so lavishly illustrated and because the pictures, without exception, are superb, I spent the best part of a day wallowing in this visual treat. And it was only after studying the detail of each photograph — some of them reminiscent of the finest paintings by the Old Masters—that I turned to the text, written by William Barclay, who today is the world's best-selling author of religious books.

As I mentioned earlier, the text is based on Anthony Burgess' film script and large parts of the text consist of script changed into narrative form, but to leave it at that would be grossly unfair to Barclay, whose scholarship, including quotations from his own New Testament translation, has made this book his own by brilliantly capturing the simplicity, action and drama of the time of Jesus.

What's more, Barclay has achieved what I would have considered to be impossible; he compels the reader to flip over pages of glorious photography in search of the next section of his text, and the next and the next, until he has devoured it all.

The text is a mixture of biblical and modern-day language, which combine easily to lend astonishing freshness to the age-old and moving story. The story is made more powerful by condensation because by piling drama on drama we are made to realize as never before the agonizing loneliness of Jesus as He fulfils His destiny in a series of moves that are totally incomprehensibe even to His devoutest followers.

For me the salient passage in the book comes after Jesus has resolved His mental conflict during 40 days in the wilderness and returns to Nazareth, where He goes straight to the synagogue and, without being invited, proceeds to read the lesson.

"He read from the book of the prophet Isaiah: 'The spirit of the Lord is upon me because he has anointed me to bring good news to the poor. He has sent me to announce . . . that the year when the favor of God will be shown has come.'

"Jesus handed back the roll and said quietly, 'Today this passage of scripture has come true as you listened to it.' At first there was a shocked silence and then the congregation began to buzz with discontent. One cried out, 'Isn't it Joseph's son, the carpenter?' Another, 'How can he dare to make such a claim!' . . . The voices had now become threatening. 'Rabbi, make him leave!' 'Liar!' 'How can he be the Messiah, dressed in rags like that?' 'Throw him out!'

"The women were looking with disapproval at Mary and one said, 'Thank God your husband didn't live to see this day.' "

Barclay has humanized the incident by reducing it to understandable neighborhood bewilderment. Seen in that light, the reason for Jesus' rejection by His own people (to them He was the kid next door) becomes clear.

Barclay's text not only rivetted my attention, it moved me deeply. After only a few pages my skepticism was in jeopardy; by the end of the book it was shattered. I can pay no greater tribute to Barclay than that.

I am well aware that this traumatic experience was in part produced by the adroit mingling of high drama and believable illustrations, but even this conjunction could not have produced the desired effect without Barclay's ability to transmit to the reader his own sincerity and belief, which succeeds in making the reader feel emotionally involved and even inspired.

Apart from the sense of authenticity, devotion to detail, beauty, deep sensitivity and compassion that combine to make this magnificent book a joy to possess, there is yet an additional pleasure in this happy marriage of scholarship and artistic imagination: for the first time a biography of Jesus has not only avoided the negative images about Jews and Judaism which have nurtured anti-Semitism, but it consciously seeks to portray first century Judaism in a warm, faithful and sympathetic manner, a fact that should gratify the Jewish community.

I am not usually as lavish with praise as I have been here, and it's ironic that such praise should be lavished on a book based on a movie, but it's time to recognize, much as I hate admitting it, that more people are learning today by looking at pictures. As a bookman I consider it retrograde, but it's a fact which should be faced.

The publishers of Jesus of Nazareth have faced it squarely — and cleverly. When the picture-book learners have had their fill they will be compelled to turn to the text for elucidation, and all of a sudden they will be reading again . . .

With Their Eye on the Sky . . . Canada's Top 20

By JULIAN REID

Astronomers, as their more worldly acquaintances will hasten to tell you, are a most peculiar breed. But of all the adjectives you are likely to hear applied to them, "adventurous" will probably rank conspicuously low on the list.

It wasn't always so, as Donald Fernie, an astronomer who is currently safely esconced in a professorship at the University of Toronto, demonstrates in his delightful book, The Whisper and the Vision. With charm and enthusiasm he introduces us to some decidedly adventurous professional predecessors of his — bolstering their tales with passages from their own first-hand accounts, not to mention one or two by their long-suffering wives.

Fernie begins with the 18th century, when over a 100 intrepid observers were dispatched to such God-forsaken corners of the earth as Fort Churchill and Tobolsk in order to view the two transits of Venus in 1761 and 1769. Among them, the most ill-starred was the grandiloquently christened

COOK

Guillaume-Joseph-Hyacinthe - Jean-Baptiste le Gentil de la Galasiere, who travelled 30,000 miles during the years he spent away from home — but, alas, was unable to make the observations he had come for!

More fortunate were the scientists carried by James Cook on the first of his famous voyages, who had no difficulty making their precious observations from the euphoniously named Fort Venus on Tahiti Nevertheless, their frequent disregard of the niceties of nautical discipline provoked the "normally even-tempered" Cook to uncharacteristic profanity. His sentiment — "Damn and blast all scientists!" — will undoubtedly strike a sympathetic chord in the hearts of present-day administrators and other such "practical men."

The tribulations of the transiteers occupy the first of Fernie's four chapters; the others deal with the 19th century adventures of Thomas Maclear and Sir John Herschel on the Cape of Good Hope, of David Gill on Mauritius and Ascension Island, and of Solon Bailey as he struggled to establish the first southern-hemisphere station of the Harvard College Observatory in Arequipa, Peru.

THE WHISPER AND THE VISION: The Voyages of the Astronomers, by Donald Fernie. Clarke, Irwin. $10.95.

Today's astronomical jet-set constitutes a distinctly lesser breed. "Where once the peripatetic astronomer dealt in shipwreck and war and mule-back ascents of the cordillera," Fernie observes wryly, "his modern counterpart is more concerned with the quality of airline food, and whether Monday's flight out of Santiago will get him to Geneva in time for Tuesday's committee meeting."

But he foresees in the next century "a new generation of peripatetic astronomers" soaring ascendant — sky-borne adventurers who will dare the wilds of outer space, hopefully with the same sturdy aplomb their earth-bound forerunners were frequently called upon to display. Perhaps by 2004, when the next transit of Venus rolls around, a few courageous souls will be determinedly keeping their cool amidst the 900-degree of that planet's forbidding surface. After all, as Guillaume-Joseph- Hyacinthe - Jean-Baptiste le Gentil de la Galasiere knew only too well, such tribulations are all in a day's work for a conscientious planetologist!

Pat Barclay

Why is the average citizen of a democracy a slave to fashion? It hardly seems reasonable, yet the proofs of our slavery are everywhere.

Our chances of liberation may be remote, for the urge to follow the herd is probably something inescapably basic and biological, which means we're stuck with it. The worst of it is that slavery to fashion has as much to do with ideas as with things.

Right now in Canada, for example, it's fashionable for writers to be literary. (What else? you may say, and I hope you do, for it will help to prove my point.)

There are other things for writers to be besides literary. But in Canada today, if a writer wishes to be published, eligible for grant money and most importantly, read, he had better be literary. This nation has a vested interest in promoting her literary culture, and it's a reckless writer who permits himself to forget it.

All of which brings me to Ken Mitchell, the writer his publishers call a "one-man literary explosion". If Ken Mitchell is a literary writer, I'm a monkey's aunt. What Mitchell cares about most is the story he happens to be telling; the literary overtones can look after themselves.

Mitchell is that rarity on the Canadian fiction scene — a reader's writer. It's therefore hardly surprising that he chooses to write about tough guys, innocents and likable eccentrics, nor that he leans toward satire and the romantic point of view.

But in Mitchell's latest book, a collection of short stories titled Everybody Gets Something Here, his favorite theme has become the loss of innocence. Something must have happened on the way from Wandering Rafferty (Mitchell's first novel, published in 1972). But, as they used to say in East Lynne, What?

The answer may lie in Mitchell's preface to The Meadowlark Connection, the goofy "Saskatchewan thriller" which he wrote in 1972 and early '73 as a "tribute to the RCMP for their Centenary anniversary". The Meadowlark Connection finally saw daylight in 1975, after a vicissitudinous career which included Mitchell's discovery that "a writer can get more for Not publishing a book than publishing it". He ended up printing the novel himself, with a little help from his friends, and if you're lucky your public library will have a copy. (If you're not, send $4 to Pile of Bones Publishing, 2709 - 13th Avenue, Regina, and the saga of Constable James Ashenden, cleancut flower of the RCMP, will be all yours.)

After this scarifying experience, no wonder Mitchell turned to writing stories about innocent young men who try to pick up a few dollars working as shills in a carnival midway, only to discover after hours of labor that they've been set up as "marks" by the boss, just like any gullible customer. This is the title story of Everybody Gets Something Here, and it's followed by 13 others ranging from In Old Mexico, (about a man who stashes the body of his mother-in-law in his luggage rack) to You Better Not Pout (about Santa Claus discovered, under a billiard table and indisputably female).

Not all Mitchell's stories illustrate a loss of innocence, although even the mother-in-law stasher — a hard-care cynic if ever there were one — stumbles into an unwelcome surprise. Some of the stories simply describe an unusual character who may be the central figure in a neatly-planned anecdote, and one of them, Stolen Roans, actually seems to have been written around an incredible groaner of a pun.

Mitchell's style is resolutely colloquial, with an entertaining leaning towards the hyperbolic. Here's his description of George, a farmer who smokes "Old Port ceegars", running to catch up with a fast-moving stoneboat: "I hear this funny screech — and there's old George churning along behind, like a Guinea hen in rubber boots, his arms stretched out trying to catch us. I . . . manage to grab one hand . . . and we go most of the way to the yard like that, towing George through the muck by one arm like a busted-down waterskier."

Mitchell's stories are full of crazy scenes like this one but he's capable of poignancy as well. One of his best stories, A Time to Sow, is about a father of nine children who is trapped into marrying their mother. Here Mitchell turns what begins as a comedy into a moving illustration of what can happen when stubborn independence meets an irresistible force.

Everybody Gets Something Here is a bit of an irresistible force itself. You may not enjoy all of Mitchell's stories equally well, but some of them should stick in your mind. And that, as much as anything, is the mark of the reader's writer.

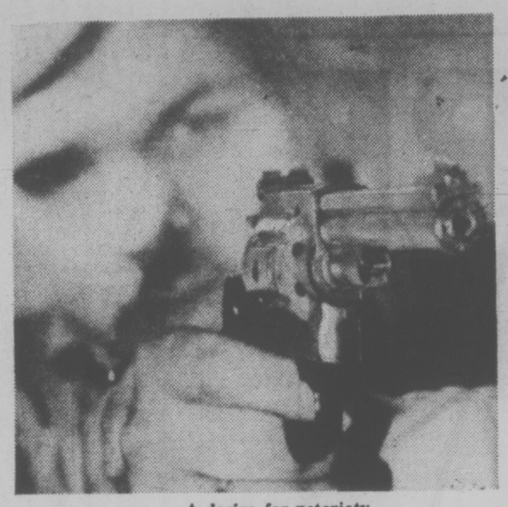
Land of the Killers?

By JOHN BARKHAM



A desire for notoriety

D. H. Lawrence, who spent part of his life in the United States, said it bluntly, harshly: "The essential American soul is hard, isolate, stoic, and a killer." Professor James McKinley (no kin to assassinated President McKinley) seems to agree. His study of assassination in America adduces painfully convincing evidence that assassination is a continuing phenomenon in American life and that its recrudescence must be anticipated in the future.

McKinley, who teaches at the University of Missouri, has written a perceptive, often penetrating study of assassination as it has manifested itself in American public life. The murder of prominent leaders is not, of course, confined to any one country, but he draws a marked distinction between its practice in the U.S. and elsewhere.

In Europe, for example, assassinations tend to be conspiratorial acts linked to a movement or cause. In the United States assassins are usually individuals with a personal grievance or a desire for notoriety. The deranged woman who tried to shoot President Ford or the man who shot Governor Wallace of Alabama are typical examples.

Moreover, notes McKinley, American assassins are usually poor students of history, though they believe otherwise. John Wilkes Booth naively believed that in killing President Lincoln he was aiding the South, when in fact his act accomplished precisely the reverse. Sirhan Sirhan may have believed he was aiding the Arab cause in murdering Robert Kennedy, but his act served to draw the United States closer to Israel.

Considering how America has lived by the gun since its earliest days, it is a miracle that not until 1835 did anyone try to kill a president. In that year an out-of-work housepainter fired two pistols at President Andrew Johnson. Both failed to go off. From Johnson's time on there has been a steady parade of assassins and would-be assassins of prominent Americans. To peruse the full list in McKinley's book is a depressing experience. Presidents Garfield, McKinley and Kennedy all fell to the assassin's bullet. Theodore Roosevelt escaped only because the bullet was deflected by his metal spectacle-case and the long folded manuscript in his pocket. Franklin Roosevelt escaped an attempt in 1933 as did President Ford twice in 1975.

McKinley finds that there is nothing to prove that any of these acts was conspiratorial. Nor is there any evidence of pay-offs. "It couldn't have been that simple, but we are left with that . . . The assassins have lockstepped through our history with guns and scarred psyches, with real ills and imaginary causes that become excuses to kill . . . They haven't much gone in for slaying low-level officials, a frequent phenomenon in other countries. They are attracted instead to the president or to similarly striking figures." This last leads McKinley to a Freudian conclusion that assassins are animated by a desire to kill a father figure.

Many believe that the ease with which firearms are acquired in the U.S. is a contributory factor to assassinations. The opponents of gun control retort that guns don't kill — people do. True, but the availability of guns makes it much easier for people to kill than might otherwise be the case. Yet so deeply rooted is the gun in American history, popular entertainment and daily living that the continuing train of assassinations has failed even to produce federal legislation mandating the mere registration of firearms. Hence it is no surprise that McKinley closes his book with the chilling prediction that, "if American assassins continue the trend described here they will kill or seriously menace a prominent American by 1984 at the latest."

This is fair warning by a scholar who has made a close study of a shameful aberration in American public life. I wish a copy of his book could be placed in the hands of every member of Congress — long before 1984.

'A Repressed Angel Within'

By JUDITH BURKETT

During three years in Auschwitz and Dachau, Dr. Viktor Frankl came firmly to believe that life must point to meaning beyond itself, else survival is not only pointless, it is impossible.

The Unconscious God was originally written in 1947. This new edition, updated in the second half, is the first English translation and is long overdue. In this book Dr. Frankl sets down his philosophy developed from insights gained from his patients in Vienna, insights which draw a psychological portrait of the complete human being not as one ruled by drives and instincts, but as a being who, guided by his conscience, chooses his own direction.

Conscience is essentially intuitive, a sort of "ethical instinct." It is a phenomenon transcendent of man, which works to bring the individual to a responsible psychological maturity. Logotherapy makes use of this intuitive faculty and has been described as "education to responsibility."

The idea of the transcendent nature of conscience brings forward Dr. Frankl's concern with unconscious spirituality in man. He believes it is the "spiritual core" which constitutes the wholeness of man and the term "spiritual" may or may not imply religiousness, an unconditional belief in God or a Higher Power. We are sometimes ashamed of our intuitive religiousness, or even unconscious of it, but concealing these most precious of human feelings serves a protective function and prevents them from becoming a mere object for public appraisal. Genuine religiousness does not stand on street corners, but, for the sake of its own genuinesness, hides from the public purview.

Psychoanalysis and behaviorism fail to comprehend the necessity of a meaningful existence and even seriously aggravate the problem of what Dr. Frankl calls the "existential vacuum" by imposing a reductionist philosophy which dismisses purpose and human worth in a view of man as a poor plaything of drives, needs and repressed aggression.

Psychoanalysts, by reducing human experience to a system of drives and needs, would have us interpret all religious feeling as repressed infantile sexuality, a concept as degrading as it is damaging. And, Jung to the contrary, to think of religiousness itself as a drive is to deny the very ground of religious consciousness, the concepts of choice and responsibility for moral action.

In the current psychotherapeutic demonology, behaviorism ranks among the most dangerous to human well-being, reducing as it does all human actions and experiences to stimulus-response conditioning. Reductionism erodes the enthusiasm of youth and results in nihilism. Against this intolerable emptiness we develop cynicism and replace what Frankl calls the "will to meaning" with the "will to power."

After all, if I am no more than a series of synapses stuffed into a bag of guts,, what good are values? Without meaning, in our lives, we are easy prey to conformity, propaganda and totalitarianism. Repressed religion degenerates into superstition and ". . . a defied reason and a megalomanic technology are the repressive structures to which the religious feeling is sacrificed."

Psychotherapy must refrain not only from setting preconceived goals along religious lines however, but also from telling the patient what his philosophy should be. If choice is paramount, there must be room to choose.

"No one will make us believe that man is a sublimated animal once we can show that within him there is a repressed angel."
